Yanks Rated At 2-to-1 Odds To Win First From Reds

Ruffing, Derringer Mound Rivals Today; Crowd of 60,000 Expected for Game

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 3.—In this little hamlet of 7,000,000 souls the World Series moves onto the baseball stage tomorrow and tonight with great alacrity New Yorkers are wagering at odds of 2 to 1 that their Yankees will whip the Cincinnati Reds in the opening game.

The heavy odds against the Reds, quoted a week ago, have been unaffected by uncertainties concerning the good health of the Yankee pitching staff and New York is cocksure of the ability of its Yanks to demolish the outlanders from some sort of a place called Cincinnati.

Paul Derringer vs. Red Ruffing.

That's the pitching program for the opener, definite, official and final. Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Reds, announced that Derringer would be his choice several days ago, but it was not until this afternoon that Manager Joe McCarthy cast his lot with Ruffing.

Ruffing Appears O. K.

Not until Ruffing took a final workout in a slight mist at Yankee Stadium this morning and displayed no apparent effects of a recent soreness in his pitching arm, was McCarthy satisfied that Ruffing would be his pitcher. At the finish of the workout, the Yankees' manager told newspapermen: "It's Ruffing. And not a bad sort of fellow to be depending on, huh?"

Despite threatening weather, 60,000 fans are expected to witness the opener despite the inflated prices of $6.60 for box seats and $5.50 for reserved grandstand tickets. This morning at Yankee Stadium, 34,000 unreserved general admission tickets will be placed on sale. Yankee Stadium, with its 74,000 capacity, has never been sold out for a World Series game.

Derringer vs. Ruffing pits a pair of big Midwestern right-handers against each other. The husky Derringer, hailing from Springfield, Ky., was something of a surprise choice by McKechnie for the opener inasmuch as his record of 25 victories was topped by Bucky Walters' feat of winning 27 games for the Reds this season, but the Reds' pilot counts Derringer the better risk.

"Derringer made up my mind for me when he struck out Ducky Medwick and Johnny Mize in that game that clinched the pennant for us," said McKechnie, "and he's pitched World Series ball before."

Mound Duel Looms

Now only throwing occasionally the fast ball that zoomed him to early fame in the big leagues, Ruffing brings a record of 21 wins and 7 defeats to the mound tomorrow. His meeting with Derringer rigs the scenery for a clever sort of pitching duel between two big guys who can fog the ball across the plate if they must, but who choose to rely chiefly on a superb curve ball, native control and a potent change of pace.

One late development marked the pre-series scene today. Manager McKechnie announced that Leftfielder Wally Berger was a doubtful starter in the Cincinnati line-up tomorrow, creating the possibility that Al Simmons, former Athletic, White Sox, Tiger, Nat and Bee, might find his way into the Reds' outfield for the duration of the series.

Berger's wounded left foot has failed to respond to treatment, it was revealed in the Reds' workout yesterday. It was severely bruised when struck by a foul off his own bat last week, and the big outfielder

President Tells AFL and CIO To Make Peace

Asks Labor Leaders To Put Aside Pride As a Patriotic Service

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 3. — President Roosevelt gave organized labor leaders today a virtual White House command to resume the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. peace negotiations, appealing to them to "put aside pride and self-advantage in patriotic service for national unity."

The President's appeal was made in a message to the American Federation of Labor in national convention here.

"The American people want it," (labor accord) he said, "and will hold in honor those whose insight, courage and unselfishness can effect it."

A. F. of L. President William Green dispatched a reply at once, asserting that the federation's peace conferees stood ready to reopen conferences with C. I. O.

Challenge to Labor

The President spoke of the joint committee which started negotiations under his auspices last March and voiced congratulations for "substantial progress."

"This must be continued," Mr. Roosevelt said, "until a sound negotiated basis of peace between the labor groups is reached and agreed upon.

"If it is hard to continue it is all the more a challenge to the members and leaders of these labor bodies—to their capacity to serve the workers of America—to their capacity to put aside pride and self-advantage in patriotic service for national unity in this time of trouble and distress."

Mr. Roosevelt said he would send a message to the C. I. O. convention later in San Francisco to continue "the search for an accord."

The packed convention hall was silent as Green slowly read the President's words. When he finished reading the message and his own reply, there was applause but no debate. It was referred to the resolutions committee.

"Find Way to Peace"

Mr. Roosevelt reminded delegates that with war abroad endangering "civilization itself, peace, like charity, begins at home.

"Perhaps the highest service we Americans can render at this time is to determine that our personal liberty, our democratic ways of life, our free representative government, make it possible for us to disagree among ourselves over many things without bitterness and find quickly the means of settlement and adjustment of controversy when it has gone far enough.

"A world emergency such as the present gives us new realization of the blessings of democracy and liberty.

"In the presence of these blessings and in the face of this world necessity we must adjourn our small grudges; our differences, and find the way to peace and good will within our borders in every department of life."

Green's prompt reply that the A. F. of L. was ready to continue negotiations, labor men said, put the question up to John L. Lewis and the C. I. O.

However, Lewis announced after a June meeting of the C. I. O. board that negotiations with the A. F. of L. were "impossible."

Chandler May Come to Senate From Kentucky

Governor Reported Ready to Quit to Take Logan's Place

A. B. "Happy" Chandler, Kentucky's smiling, 41-year-old Governor, last night was reported preparing to claim a seat in the United States Senate alongside the man who beat him for the nomination in the State's tempestuous 1938 senatorial primaries.

Gov. Chandler will do this, it was said in usually well informed quarters, by the simple process of resigning as Governor and having himself appointed to the Senate by his gubernatorial successor, Lieut. Gov. (and Governor-elect) Keen Johnson.

Death early yesterday of Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, left the Senate vacancy said to be sought by the man who lost to Senate Majority Leader Barkley in the late senatorial race, but later saw his own choice nominated for Governor over John Young Brown, who had C. I. O. and Barkley backing.

Chandler's New Deal affections were somewhat damaged by the President's "invasion" of Kentucky in Barkley's behalf and reported Administration opposition to his governorship candidate, but recently he reiterated general support of Roosevelt policies.

Friends Here Expect It

His relations with the Administration were said to have been bettered by association with Attorney General Murphy in settlement of the long legal battle over civil rights of miners in "bloody" Harlan County, Kentucky. Justice Department's dismissal of charges against Harlan mine executives, law enforcement officers and coal companies followed conferences between Murphy and Chandler.

In informed Capitol quarters it was said his succession to Logan's Senate seat would not necessarily mean an Administration vote lost, particularly in the present Senate battle to repeal the arms embargo. Logan had been counted as a certain vote for repeal. Chandler recently said he believed the President was right in his request for embargo repeal and neutrality act revision.

At Frankfort last night Chandler declined comment on reports that he will step down from the Gover-

Norris Backs Repeal to 'Escape War'

Says Over Radio New Bill Has 'Safeguards' To Keep U. S. Out; Holt Attacks Plan

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate's torrid flow of words for and against embargo repeal was temporarily silenced yesterday, but outside the recessed chamber the fight went forward in radio debate, vote canvassing and strategy conferences.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, survivor of the small Senate bloc which voted against America's last war declaration, indorsed embargo repeal over a National Broadcasting Co. network. Norris said the neutrality bill contains "safeguards against all of the causes that carried us into the last war."

The opposition view was presented by Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, over the Columbia Broadcasting System. Holt attacked embargo repeal as a step toward war intervention and declared the "cash-and-carry" principle could be applied without lifting the ban on arms shipments.

Ceasing formal Senate business in tribute to the late Senator Logan, of Kentucky, leaders of the bloc for embargo repeal rechecked polls to claim an ultimate total of at least 60 votes, but conceded some "title-and-carry" provisions of the bill may undergo slight revision.

Tobey to Seek Recommittal

Negotiations were opened by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, to ease sharp restrictions on American shipping imposed by the bill. Bailey said he sought "accord, and not a fight" on the issue. He said he would propose no change that exposed American ships or American interests to war-provoking risks.

Meanwhile, Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, disclosed he would move to recommit the bill for the purpose of separating "come-and-get-it" antiwar precautions from the repeal issue, and obtaining their enactment first. Tobey argued that these other neutrality points should be put into effect immediately and not delayed by protracted debate on repeal of the embargo.

Norris told radio listeners it is so clear to him that the President's proposed neutrality act revisions improve the present law "that it is difficult for me to understand the attitude of those who are opposed to any change."

"If these safeguards are now enacted into law, our escape from entering into the present European war seems almost certain," Norris said.

Loss of American lives, depredations on rights of American citizens and financial influences that he said were exerted to bring this Nation into the last conflict all "could happen again, will happen again in my opinion, unless our embargo law is changed," he declared.

Defeat of Move Predicted

The Senate veteran, who was burned in effigy for his antiwar stand and speeches against "placing the dollar sign on the American flag" in 1917, said cold-blooded legal deductions show "that it is far better for our peace and security and for the happiness of the American people to repeal the embargo act and enact in its stead the provisions of the proposed law."

Senate Minority Leader McNary will attempt to obtain floor time for Tobey late today after Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, has completed the second Administration speech for the bill and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, has bulwarked opposition arguments.

Chamberlain Declares Britain Will Talk Peace on Own Terms; Russians Hint Move on Finns

Soviet May Ask Aaland Island Base; Estonia Pact Delayed, HigherPriceRumored

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Oct. 3.—The number of foreign ministers attending the present diplomatic jamboree in Moscow was increased to three when Lithuanian Foreign Minister Urbsys arrived today to join his Turkish and Latvian colleagues.

Urbsys was accompanied by the Lithuanian Minister to Moscow, who went to fetch him two days ago, and by the Soviet Minister to Lithuania and the head of the Soviet trade delegation there.

[The government newspaper, Izvestia, today published strong hints that Moscow would soon make demands on Finland, according to the Associated Press. These were reported to envision additional island naval bases, and possible share in control of the strategic Aaland Islands.

[Ratification of the Russian-Estonian mutual assistance pact has been unexpectedly delayed, Stockholm reports said.

Added Demands Reported

[A Russian military commission which was sent to Estonia has returned to Moscow without reaching an agreement on the Soviet naval and air base question. Reports said differences arose over Soviet demands that Estonia supply bases other than those provided for in the original agreement.—Editor's note.]

The Soviet invitation to the Lithuanians was said to have been couched in friendlier terms than might have been expected and Lithuanian circles seem quite easy concerning the demands likely to be made on them.

This perhaps is partly due to the fact that Lithuanian relations with the Soviet Union have generally been better than those of most of the Baltic states who had associated themselves closer to Nazi Germany than Lithuania has done.

May Recover Capital

In such circles hope is even expressed unofficially that Lithuania may yet realize her dream of recovering her former capital, Vilna (Wilno), which Poland seized 18 years ago.

Actually, however, it seems that the utmost Lithuania can hope for is a privileged commercial position in Vilna, now occupied by the Russians, in exchange for a grant of privileges for the Soviet on the Lithuanian railways and in Lithuanian ports.

Latvian Foreign Minister Munters was again received by Premier Molotoff tonight for two hours. Nothing was disclosed concerning the outcome of these conversations but it is understood that they were not decisive.

Neither was there any official indication of the tenor of a later conference to which the Lithuanians were summoned to meet Josef Stalin, Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff and Vice Commissar Potemkin.

Main Policy Secret

There is still no clew to the supreme question of what attitude the Soviet will finally take toward the Franco-British Allies if pressed hard by Germany in the matter of a peace offensive.

Those who are convinced that a full alliance was concluded by German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop on his first visit believe delay in announcing a military pact is purely diplomatic comedy.

Those, however, who believe the Soviet Union is very far from having decided to divide Europe and Asia with Nazi Germany, see in the Soviet Union's successes a pure opportunist policy.

May Turn to Finland Next

Moscow, Oct 3 (AP).—A strong hint that Russia might turn to Finland next was given in an article in the government newspaper Izvestia, which in effect accused Britain of trying to use Finland and the Baltic states as a springboard for an attack on the U. S. S. R.

Observers felt the Finns, who had a large measure of autonomy under the czar, might put up more of an argument to Soviet demands than the Baltic states.

In addition to the Aaland Islands, Finland has several small islands in the Gulf of Finland which the Soviets might covet. An agreement with Finland might give Russia control of both sides of the Gulf of

The War Today

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN declared Britain's readiness to receive any peace proposals which would achieve Allied War aims, but said "mere assurances" by Germany are not enough; Lloyd George urged "careful consideration" of any peace overtures through Russia or Italy.

SOVIET RUSSIA'S pressure politics which are winning concessions from Baltic states, were expected to be aimed next at Finland; Turkey's delegation idled in Moscow; Baltic states heard puzzling rumors of Soviet efforts to reopen trade with England.

Gamelin Rules 150 Sq. Miles Of Germany

With the French Army in Germany (Monday) Oct. 4 (Delayed in Transmission).—For the first time since the Napoleonic wars the French armies are fighting on German territory.

I have had this morning the unique and highly enjoyable experience of entering Germany without a German visa and without the knowledge of the Gestapo. No Nazi official was present at the frontier to examine my passport, question me as to the amount of money I had on my person or search me for forbidden newspapers and books. In this part of the Third Reich the authority of Fuehrer Hitler counts for nothing at all—it is the writ of Gen. Gamelin that rules here.

Casualties Light

I am somewhere in the 150 square miles of German territory that the French army has conquered in the first month of the war. An advance of 8 miles in the Forest of Warndt probably represents its maximum depth.

I have been down in the inner recesses of the Maginot Line with the first group of foreign newspapermen ever to be admitted there.

The war on the Western Front is an entirely different kind from that ruthless "blitzkrieg" in Poland. The fighting between the Moselle and the Rhine is merely preliminary sparring of two old opponents who highly respect the professional ability of each other but who are feinting to get in a good position.

Casualties have been relatively insignificant and the fighting has been largely confined to aerial duels, artillery cannonades, and skirmishes between opposing patrols.

The impression at the front is that a big offensive by the French army

Nazis Believe Britain Means To Fight On

Hitler and Aides Study Chamberlain Speech; No New Offer Expected

Berlin, Oct. 3.—Adolf Hitler and his aides tonight gave "serious" consideration to Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech today which Nazis interpreted as setting forth Britain's determination not to halt the war now.

The Nazi regime also followed closely the progress of the neutrality debate in the United States Senate and awaited a full report on the Panama conference at which 21 American republics outlined a Western Hemisphere safety zone to insulate them from the European war.

The text of Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons was rushed to Hitler, who studied it with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

No New Offer Seen

The authoritative service Dienst Aus Deutschland earlier today had expressed the belief Germany and Soviet Russia would "consult" again just as soon as the western powers declared their attitude toward the Moscow declaration which Germans consider an offer of peace.

According to Dienst Aus Deutschland no new German peace offer is in the offing, nor is Italy likely to make another effort at mediation at present.

It was obvious, however, that a grave view was taken of Britain's attitude and that Germany has made up her mind to strike hard and fast after Hitler explains to the Reichstag later this week that Germany has obtained what she wants from Poland and therefore sees no reason why the war should continue in the west.

[International News Service said Hitler's "final" peace proposals, rejection of which may signal the launching of a lightning attack on Britain and France, will be made before the German Reichstag at

Hoover Says It's Impossible For Nazis to Defeat Allies

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—Belief British-French superiority economically and at sea would make their defeat by Germany impossible was expressed today by Herbert Hoover in an interview with Roy W. Howard, editor of the New York World-Telegram.

The former President thus summed up his opinions:

"If one surveys the whole front—sea, land, air and economic resources—I am convinced the Allies can defend their empires.

"The end may be victory for them. At worst it might be a stalemate. I do not see any possibility that it can be defeat."

Mr. Hoover's views were given in response to an expression by Howard that "a dangerous emotionalism . . . is spreading rapidly in certain sections of this country that France and England are facing defeat and that in order to avoid catastrophe to civilization and to save ourselves the United States must sooner or later enter the European war."

To this, Howard reported, the former President responded:

"It is true there is the utmost danger in war times of emotions overwhelming common sense. The most regrettable thing that could happen to us would be the building up of a war party in the United States, but the premise of the ideas

Care in Offending U. S. and Other Neutrals Urged By Lloyd George

London, Oct. 3.—Any peace proposals Fuehrer Hitler may have in mind were rejected in advance today by Prime Minister Chamberlain in his weekly review of the war situation in the House of Commons.

Chamberlain made it clear that somebody other than Hitler and his present satellites would have to speak for the German nation if there is to be talk of peace, since the Allies have no further faith in Der Fuehrer's word.

After a cheering house and the leaders of the Labor and Liberal Parties had approved that position, David Lloyd George, prime minister in the World War, touched off the bitterest debate the Commons has heard since the present struggle arrayed its membership in a solid front against German aggressiveness.

Brushing back his snowy mane, the 76-year-old leader of World War days pleaded with the 70-year-old premier of today not to rush in and refuse an offer not yet made.

U. S. Attitude Cited

Lloyd George indicated a feeling the proposals might come from Italy or Russia, rather than from Germany direct and he expressed hope the government would consider expressions from those two countries as having come from neutrals.

The fate of this war, he continued, may not depend upon the three great belligerents but upon the attitude of three great neutrals—Italy, Soviet Russia and the United States. He even suggested a secret session of the house to permit more candid statement.

This suggestion, which Chamberlain promptly brushed aside, with the others Lloyd George had made, provoked Alfred Duff-Cooper, former first lord of the admiralty, to brand Lloyd George's remarks as "a suggestion of surrender."

"Hear, Hear," cried many members of the house.

Infuriated, Lloyd George rose and interrupted with these words:

"I have been charged with surrender. It is the first time . . . and Mr. Duff-Cooper may live to regret his words."

Dislike Is Unconcealed

Even the most measured phrases of parliamentary respectfulness could not veil the mutual dislike that has existed between Chamberlain and Lloyd George since World War days.

Duff-Cooper, who resigned as first lord of the admiralty as a protest against Chamberlain's "surrender" of Munich, said he had merely tried to point out that what Lloyd George had stated in his speech this afternoon was liable to misrepresentation abroad.

He went on to say "the prime minister has said . . . he will make no peace with the present government in Germany. Any peace that they sign will never be kept and it would not be worth the paper it is written on."

Lloyd George, after suggesting that the threatened peace proposals might come from Italy or Russia, rather than from Hitler, said he could give many reasons for treating Russia's grab of Polish territory in a "totally different spirit" from the part the Nazis played.

Neutrals May Decide War

He said he understood from the British press which had gotten it from Italian, and perhaps also Russian sources, that there had been a discussion among Russia, Germany and Italy on the more detailed terms of peace than the

POTOMAC SHAM BATTLE

A pessimist in the Capital offered last night to bet $1,000 that we won't be at war for at least 18 months. There were no takers. I think it's a good omen, and you can relax and quit aiming your old shotgun at the lamplight down the street for practice.

Harlan Miller

I'll do my bit by writing a column without mentioning war or crisis, neutrality, or embargo, Hitler or Borah, but not today.

* * * *

If Vandenberg and Borah are trying to drown out Hitler and Stalin, at least Joe DiMaggio and Bucky Walters will be drowning out Vandenberg and Borah for a few days. The lamps are going out all over Europe, but can Joe slug a few home runs off Bucky?

* * * *

I call the man with the $1,000 wager a pessimist, because I think most of the officials I know here would be willing to bet $1,000 (if they had it) that we won't be at war inside 30 months. And many of them would bet $100 (which some of them do have) that if the arms embargo is repealed we won't be at war for ten years.

"—can Borah out-thunder"

In these days of militant prattle and high blood pressure, some one must keep calm, even if it hurts, and it might as well be you and me. We can't walk around the streets ducking imaginary bombs and bullets and still remain good husbands and fathers, or even good wives and mothers.

* * * *

Some of the more excitable Senators have talked themselves into the peculiar belief that this session of Congress must vote on whether or not to declare war. Maybe against Bargrava or Graustark.

The whole thing reminds me of Orson Welles' war with Mars.

As the great debate opened: Alice Longworth chewing on her lorgnette in the front row of the Senators' gallery . . . Young Senator Worth Clark yawning as his eminent colleague from Idaho makes a telling point . . . Ex-Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, in a loveseat with another ex. . . . Amazing sight of 60 Senators going without food from 12 to 4 o'clock.

* * * *

A few of the more ambitious Senators (and some of the older ones who are set in their ways) have adopted a heroic position at the water's edge like a clucking hen spreading her wings to protect her little chicks.

One of the most discouraging signs is that too many people are paying too much attention to what Senators say.

"—the cracks of Di Maggio's bat?"

I, for one, hope the World Series goes seven games and gives the embattled Senators a little competition for the American spotlight. They've received so much mail lately that they all think they're Clark Gable.

* * * *

Embargo or no embargo, the Atlantic Ocean remains the same width. (That reminds me, someone told me confidentially last night that an American airplane manufacturer has perfected a bomber that can fly across the ocean with a load of bombs, drop them on the other side and then fly back.

And since we aren't so much smarter than the Germans, they've probably invented one too.)

* * * *

Embargo or no embargo, the Senators will still have a chance to vote against any declaration of war, next year or year after next or ten years from now. And Secretary Hull will do a little negotiating, too.

For the present, they can't kid anyone into thinking they're voting on war; they're voting on neutrality.

* * * *

Those two great peace lovers, Hitler and Stalin, are keeping things tense and disagreeable across the ocean and bringing gray hairs to their betters; but on this side the shooting is still all on Capitol Hill and at the Yankee Stadium.

Exporters Ban Profiteering On Latin Trade

Conference Assures Government It Won't Take War Advantage

By Felix Cotten.

Spokesmen for leading export organizations yesterday assured Commerce Department officials there would be no profiteering on goods sold to Latin-American countries made dependent on United States supplies by the European war.

In a conference called to consider means of expanding Latin-American trade, exporters' representatives said prices of American goods would be governed by domestic conditions and that no effort would be made to effect unwarranted increases.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, revealed at his press conference that he probably will ask Congress, at the regular session beginning in January, to increase substantially the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank in order to provide means for longer-term credits to stimulate Latin-American trade.

Financial Aides Urged

Foreign trade spokesmen, in their conference with Commerce Department officials, recommended that the Government assign financial representatives to the principal commercial centers of Latin America to encourage trade expansion.

They also recommended that United States chambers of commerce in Latin-American countries cooperate with United States Ambassadors or Ministers and that in countries where no such chamber exists the United States diplomatic representatives create advisory groups of American businessmen to aid in solving problems arising as result of the war.

Undersecretary of Commerce Noble intimated the Government would resist any attempt on the part of the British government to prevent American firms from trading with "blacklisted" concerns in Latin America and other neutral countries.

He revealed that the British blacklist of firms considered pro-German was discussed at some length at the conference with trade leaders.

"It was the opinion of the conferees," he said, "that if any effort were made to dictate to American shipping lines against their carrying American goods to 'blacklisted' firms in neutral ports, a strong position may have to be taken."

U. S. Unadvised Officially

Special attention, he said, was directed to the fact that the blacklist never has been brought to the attention of the United States Government and as a result conferees expressed the view that publication of the blacklist was a "trial balloon."

Oportunities for trade expansion in Latin America and price rises resulting from the war will be outstanding topics discussed at a meeting today of the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council, official sources disclosed. It will be the first meeting of the council since the war started.

So far as prices are concerned, the council will consider ways in which unwarranted increases can be prevented through voluntary action, it was explained.

Noble, in the opening address at the conference with trade leaders, urged them to use "horse sense" in selling goods to Latin-American buyers and not to take advantage of an abnormal situation to hike prices unduly or attempt to dispose of low quality goods in this market.

President Sees Pierson

Spokesmen for the export organization also urged maintenance of equitable freight rates in the hope that no unjustifiable rate increase would be put into effect as a result of war conditions.

The President said he discussed means for increasing Latin-American trade with Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, yesterday.

The amount of outstanding loans and commitments by the Export-Import Bank has been limited by Congress to $100,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt commented that the bank was scraping the bottom of the barrel.

At the last session of Congress he asked for legislation to authorize foreign loans totaling $500,000,000 as part of the so-called "spend-loan" bill. The bill failed, but before it failed the loan proposal, designed primarily to augment Latin-American trade, had been reduced to a proposal to increase the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank by only $100,000,000.

Those attending yesterday's conference were Edward L. Bacher, foreign commerce manager for the United States Chamber of Commerce; Franklin Johnson, editor of the American Exporter; James S. Carson, of the Merchants Association, New York; Curt G. Pfeiffer, president of the National Council of American Importers, Inc.; Kenneth Campbell, director of the foreign department, National Association of Credit Men; T. N. Molanphy, National Foreign Trade Council; H. L. Gemberling, Export Managers Club, New York; Frank Getty, Washington, representing Associated Coffee Industries of America, and James Drum, vice president of the National City Bank, New York.

Dudley P. K. Wood, special adviser to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, was chairman of the conference.

Chandler May Come to Senate

nor's chair for the senatorial toga.

"I have no statement to make at this time," he told International News Service. "I think it would be in bad taste and unwise. All I want to think about at the moment is my sincere regret at the passing of a great man and express my sympathy to his family. Senator Logan was a fine citizen and a public figure, a public official highly respected by all, regardless of their political affiliation."

But at the Capitol and in other Washington political circles the word quickly spread that Chandler plans to take the place. Phone conversations with friends here were said to have confirmed that intention.

While the decision may not be a happy one for Senate Majority leader, who battled Chandler on the stump in as bitter a primary as Kentucky ever witnessed, it was said to be unlikely to affect control or the vote of the Kentucky delegation to the 1940 Democratic National convention.

Successful nomination of Keen Johnson, Chandler's man, over Barkley's candidate for Kentucky's next Governor, was believed to have settled the issue of control and assured Johnson's domination of the delegation. And Johnson recently indicated the delegation would support Barkley as the Kentucky "favorite son" nominee. Political observers regarded it as highly doubtful, however, that a Kentucky delegation not controlled by Barkley would vote to nominate Roosevelt for a third term.

Chandler, whose smile for all and sundry won him the nickname "Happy," became a power in Kentucky politics when he beat the strong Ruby Lafoon machine in 1935. That was considered a victory for the New Deal, but differences soon arose that resulted in Chandler pitting himself for the Senate against the Administration's own leader.

His life is another success story. Born of a mail carrier father, he set off to college with a $5 bill in his pocket, worked his way through Transylvania, attended Harvard Law School and completed his law course at the University of Kentucky. He has a high, clear voice and has been known to render "Mother Machree" and other sentimental lyrics as part of campaign routine.

Tobacco Listed As Contraband, Bailey Asserts

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, announced last night he had received "official information" that tobacco had been placed on the German contraband list.

One Senate advocate of arms embargo repeal said the effect of Germany's action will be to assure the Administration of several tobacco State repeal votes previously considered doubtful. Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, had reserved the right to oppose the neutrality bill on the floor, and Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, fought embargo repeal last session in the House.

The South's tobacco industry previously had been hard hit by cessation of British purchases of the American product, and Bailey had been seeking credit extensions that would make possible resumption of the trade.

The Gallup Poll

Public Sentiment for Repeal of Arms Embargo Rises Since Speech by President

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 3.—Public sentiment for changing the neutrality act to permit shipment of arms on a cash and carry basis has increased sharply since President Roosevelt's speech before Congress on September 21. A national fact-finding survey of public opinion undertaken following the President's speech shows that at the present time three-fifths of the voters polled are in favor of lifting the arms embargo.

GEORGE GALLUP

To what extent this sentiment may be changed by the debate in Congress this week and next will be revealed in subsequent surveys. Thus far the President has presented his side of the case before Congress and the public, but the opposition bloc, led by Senator William E. Borah, has not yet had equal opportunity to reply. Prior to the President's speech 57 per cent of voters with opinions in an American Institute of Public Opinion survey were in favor of changing the neutrality law. After the President's speech, a new survey found that sentiment for lifting the embargo had increased to 62 per cent. It is entirely possible, however, that the historic debate which is just beginning may change public sentiment on the issue.

The two surveys, one before and one after the President's address to Congress, were conducted on the question:

"Do you think Congress should change the neutrality law so that England and France could buy war supplies here?"

Before President's Speech:
For change	57%
Against change	43
After President's speech:
For change	62%
Against change	38

Approximately one person in seven, on the average (14 per cent), had no opinion on the issue.

Earlier institute studies show that even though the majority may favor lifting the arms embargo, they do not wish to see American ships or American credit involved in war trade as they were in the last war. Instead, the overwhelming majority (90 per cent) favor adoption of the cash-and-carry plan which is part of the Administration's proposed change in the neutrality law.

The survey found interesting differences of opinion by geographical sections. Although all areas voted in favor of changing the neutrality act, there was considerable variation in the size of the majorities. The smallest vote for revising the arms embargo came from the Middle Western farm area, which includes Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and surrounding States—a region long noted for its isolationist sentiment. The highest vote was in the Southern States.

The vote by sections follows:

	For	Against
New England	56%	44%
Middle Atlantic	65%	35%
East Central	57%	43%
West Central	55%	45%
South	77%	23%
Far West	65%	35%

In general the younger voters throughout the country—who would have to do most of the fighting if America were drawn into the war—were found to be less in favor of lifting the arms embargo than older voters. Men were more in favor removing the embargo than women, and the middle and lower income groups more than the upper income groups.

	For Change.	Against Change.
Men	64%	36%
Women	58	42
Voters under 30	56%	44%
30-49	64	36
50 and over	63	37
Upper income group	59%	41%
Middle group	64	36
Lower group	62	38

While the survey found less enthusiasm for repeal among Republican voters, the difference between Republican and Democratic sentiment was not large. Among Democrats 68 in every 100 polled were in favor of repeal, as compared to 59 in every 100 Republicans.

A special feature of the survey was a measurement of what research experts consider an important factor in public opinion—intensity of sentiment. The results show that those voters who favor changing the neutrality act feel more keenly about the issue than those who oppose changing the act. The intensity scale follows:

Strongly in favor of change	41%
Mildly in favor of change	21
Strongly opposed to change	25%
Mildly opposed to change	13

Engineers Association Elect W. C. Strickler

William C. Strickler, secretary of the Washington association of the National Association of Power Engineers, last night was announced as the newly elected secretary of the national license law committee of the national organization. D. C. Courts Among Few Still Lagging

3 U. S. Districts Further Behind Than in '38, Conference Reports

The District of Columbia is one of three judicial districts of the United States where congestion and arrears in court dockets have increased during the past year, according to the report of the Judicial Conference made public yesterday.

Although 18 Federal districts reported more or less congestion in their dockets, the Attorney General told the conference, only in the District of Columbia, the Southern District of New York and the Western District of Washington have the arrears increased.

In general, court dockets are "in excellent condition" and the decrease in the number of cases pending in the district courts, which has been observed every year since 1932, still continues, the report revealed. This decrease is probably due to the increase in the number of judges.

Added Judges Urged

Circuit Courts of Appeals were reported "up with their work," and progress was noted in the disposition of last year's accumulation of cases in the Sixth Circuit. The appointment of an additional judge for the Eighth Circuit was recommended. Seven additional judges were recommended for district courts, and the filling of or vacancy in the Southern District of New York.

Provisions of a new chapter in the judicial code on "The Administration of the United States Courts," which was added by legislation signed by the President on August 7 and drawn up on the basis of a committee appointed by the conference, were discussed at length.

The conference approved "in substance" two actions of the recent regular sessions of Congress, which provided appointment of public defenders for persons unable to hire attorneys, when charged with a crime punished by death or imprisonment of more than one year.

Adoption by circuit courts of two rules suggested by a committee of the conference was recommended. They concern review by circuit courts of orders of the board of tax appeals, the processing tax board of review, and other administrative bodies.

Groner on Committee

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, was appointed to an advisory committee charged with representing the conference in the supervision of the Director of the Administrative Office created by the act. Other members of the committee are Circuit Judges John J. Parker, Kimbrough Stone and John Biggs, jr.

A committee composed of Judges Learned Hand, Evan A. Evans and Curtis D. Wilbur was appointed to study the feasibility of an indeterminate sentence law for the Federal courts, and other committees previously appointed were continued for another year. Judges Wilbur, Xenophon Hicks and Orie L. Phillips were appointed a committee to study the advisability of legislation regarding rules of evidence.

Pan American Buys Planes to Double Service

Plans New Lines and Faster Schedules With 2 New Ships

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—Purchase of 22 big aircraft was announced today by Pan American Airways in a program to double capacity and speed up its transatlantic and South American services and to inaugurate new passenger lines between California and Mexico and to Alaska and Australia by next summer.

This expansion of the American company's air routes, to be financed by a $6,000,000 common stock issue, would take advantage of disruption of foreign services across the Atlantic and in South America.

In announcing a 5-year program, C. V. Whitney, chairman of the board, urged that "America should proceed with a real determination not to become involved in the present European war" and to build up its own civil aviation.

To Double Capacity

Whitney said a night and day flying service eventually would put Buenos Aires and Santiago, Chile, within 48 hours of New York.

But the first changes in schedule, by next summer, would cut the time to Buenos Aires from six to four days and to Santiago to three. The present service of two planes to each coast of South America would be increased to three each and larger planes would double capacity.

Transatlantic service would be increased from two round trips weekly to three next summer "if required." Here, too, larger planes practically would double the passenger service.

A Seattle-Fairbanks route connecting with the company's present trans-Alaskan line would be opened in the summer if Government airports are ready and mail contracts granted.

Three 33-Passenger Ships

A Los Angeles-Mexico City line is expected to begin operation this winter and the weekly service from California to New Zealand by next summer.

Three 33-passenger Boeing "stratosphere type" land transports, to be delivered soon, will inaugurate the Los Angeles-Mexico City line. Next summer, Whitney said, two of them would be transferred to the Seattle-Fairbanks route and one to the transatlantic route to Ireland.

Husband Wins Blood Test in Paternity Case

Justice Adkins yesterday ordered a blood test upon Mrs. Mary Beach, 18, and her 2-month-old baby at the instance of her estranged husband, who denies he is the child's father. The order was the first ever granted by the District Court in a case of disputed paternity.

Mrs. Beach, who lives at 1048 Bladensburg road northeast, sued James E. Beach, 21, a mechanic, for maintenance last July. She was granted $7 a week and now seeks $3 more a week for the baby. Beach's attorney, John Paul Jones, applied for the blood test.

Broadcasters Ban Paid Talks On Neutrality

N. A. B. Rules Issue Is Controversial One; Free Time Available

Neutrality is a controversial issue and not to be the subject of paid time on the air, the code committee of the National Association of Broadcasters ruled yesterday. The decision was reached after a two-day meeting.

In an announcement by Committee Chairman Edgar Bill, of Peoria, Ill., it was emphasized that the decision would not bar discussion of neutrality over the air, since the code obliges radio stations to make time available gratuitously in equal amounts to proponents of both sides of any "public controversial" issue.

The code, adopted in July and effective October 1, forbids the sale of radio time for argument on controversial issues.

Yesterday's committee meeting ended with the conclusion, Bill said, "that while all Americans desire to stay out of war and to preserve neutrality, the methods of achieving and maintaining same are matters automatically falling within the sphere of 'public controversial issues,' and as such should be presented on free time and not sold."

Can Request Free Time

Groups concerned with such issues, Bill made clear, may request free time on the air and the code specifies that "broadcasters shall use their best efforts to allot such time free of charge, with fairness to all elements in a given controversy."

Bill said that the committee undertook the function of rendering advisory opinions on which issues were controversial.

Another ruling by the committee was that in cases of doubt on the classification of a given program, scripts of the broadcast would be required in advance.

The committee also decided that a "public proposal subject to ballot," for which time may be bought under the code provisions, is one on which the voters themselves cast a ballot, and is not merely an issue on which their representatives in the State or national legislatures vote.

Without stating the reason for its action, the committee announced that it was also calling attention to the religious section of the code, which prohibits "attacks upon another's race or religion."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Sustaining the tradition that the music season begins the first week in October, Irene Lerch and Mary Hill Doolittle were prompt in their public appearances, the former with a piano recital which opened the Roosevelt Hotel series of musicales and the latter with a violoncello recital at the Arts Club last evening. Miss Lerch, a resident musician whose promise is flowering in achievement, presented an unpretentious program which included the D minor prelude, A minor valse and B♭ minor scherzo of Chopin, the "Turkish" sonata of Mozart, Liszt's embroidered transcription of Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark," a Gallicized "Spiritual and Blues" by Alexander Tansman, and Liszt's legende, "St. Francis de Paule marchant sur les flots."

Having passed the point where technique is an embarrassment, she is showing an increasing keenness in interpretation, which was particularly noticeable in her differentiation between the styles of the composers she had selected. In her readings there was evident a discriminating taste, and a perception of the nuances of exression that represent the character of a composer.

Miss Doolittle, who plays first violoncello with the Baltimore Orchestra, was assisted at the piano by Wolfgang Martin in an interesting program which began with the E minor sonata of Brahms. Despite some moving lyrical passages, this sonata is not one of Brahms' best works, as the writing is not grateful for the violoncello or wholly successful in the tonal balance between the instruments.

More satisfactory in both respects were the two movements from the early F major sonata by Richard Strauss composed when his melodic invention had not yet been smothered in modernism. The third selection leaped chronologically backward to the second sonata, in C major, by Lugi Boccherini, the Italian rival of Hrydn. Boccherini was himself a master of the violoncello, and was so fond of the instrument that he scored two of them into his 112-string quintets.

Unfamiliar compositions, with the exception of Granado's intermezzo from "Goyescas," constituted the latter part of the recital. An impassioned and sturdy "Rhapsody" by the late Swiss composer, Emanuel Moor, was followed by a singularly appealing "Canto" by Ildebrando Pizzetti, a capricious "Chanson Napolitaine" by Cesar Casella, a poetic and thoughtful "Molto Cantabile" movement by Marshall Kernochan, who is best known for his vocal works; and the amusing "Cache-Cache" by Paul Bezelaire, a teacher of violoncello at the Fontainbleau Conservatory.

Miss Doolittle, using a mellow Guadagnini instrument, drew from it a tone characterized by richness in color and eloquence in shading. Her technical facility is excellent and her playing smooth in texture, with very few instances of the "wolf" that lies in wait for unwary fingers. Her performance showed insight in matters of interpretation and musicianship in the expressive quality of her playing.

Mitchell Opposes Anti-Lynch Bill Consideration Now

Something of a monkey wrench was thrown yesterday into a proposal to call up the anti-lynching bill in the House Monday despite Administration wishes.

Sole colored member of Congress, Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, told The Post that he would vote against consideration of the measure at this session—provided no other non-neutrality legislation is brought up.

Leaders of both parties have agreed that no extraneous matters will be permitted to arise in the House at least until the neutrality bill is disposed of; but they would be unable to prevent a vote on consideration of the anti-lynching proposal because of its privileged status.

Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, has been threatening to call up the anti-lynch bill next Monday.

"On the understanding that failure to consider the measure now would not impair its chances in January," said Representative Mitchell, "I would vote against bringing it up at this time."

Here's What we were Shooting at!

ROME, they tell us, wasn't built in a day. Well, neither was this 1940 Buick you see burning the breeze here.

You'll understand why when you know what we were aiming for. We wanted to combine in one car all the best we've learned in our 36 years in this business.

We think we've got it now. A standout sparkling car with action power and staying power.

It would be hopeless to try to list the whole range of new features—there are some 72 in all.

But you can't drive this car a mile without knowing that you have got hold of something that tops anything you ever handled.

It's smoother, steadier, firmer on the line. It gets up and goes right now, and keeps going without wander, tailwag or wind-swerve.

It takes the roughest roads in its stride, and while we don't want to go hinting about speed, this eager baby can whisk you to forty-five in first.

The sudden, soaring, millrace power of its matchless Dynaflash straight-eight engine, electrically balanced after assembly to micropoised perfection, is velocity smoothed to velvet.

Yes, this beauty is our all-time high—the car we've been shooting at for lo! these many years.

Come drive it and you'll see why.

Americas End Talks as Welles Hails Unity

Addresses Stress Determination to Keep War Off Hemisphere

By the Associated Press

Panama City, Oct. 3.—The neutrality conference of 21 American republics adjourned late today with closing speeches stressing again the New World's determination to keep the European war from spanning the Atlantic.

The conference, which opened September 23, adjourned after adopting a program whose principal feature is the "safety zone" for neutral shipping laid about the continent from the Maine-Canada border, around Cape Horn and North in the Pacific to the boundary between Canada and the State of Washington.

Assails Gangsterism

Garay said the delegates could return home "satisfied and proud" of the task done here "in favor of peace and the security and well-being of our America." He assailed International "gangsterism."

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, heading the United States delegation, hailed the firm union of the American republics.

"I believe that when the time comes to look back, the Declaration of Panama may be considered to have been an advance of unusual speech which was broadcast to the importance," Welles said in his United States, Europe and Central and South America.

"If we are able to have joint representation to persuade the belligerents to comply with its provisions, the declaration will have made a thorough contribution toward the goal we so fervently desire, namely: that our 21 American republics shall remain free from the horrors of war."

Committee to Consider Many Proposals Here

Proposals to be considered by the newly-created Inter-American financial and economic advisory committee were disclosed last night with receipt here of the text of the resolution on economic co-operation approved by the Inter-American neutrality conference at Panama City.

Consisting of 21 economic experts, one from each American republic, the committee is to be installed here not later than November 15.

It was created as one move, the resolution said, to help the American republics "protect their economic and financial structure, maintain their fiscal equilibrium, safeguard the stability of their currencies, promote and expand their industries, intensify their agriculture and develop their commerce.

To Study Money Setup

Consideration is to be given, by the committee, the resolution said, to these matters:

Any problem of monetary relationships, which may be presented to it by one of the 21 governments.

Exchange of production, foreign trade, financial and monetary statistics and customs legislation.

Mutual efforts to lessen any dislocations in inter-American trade due to the war;

A customs truce, with reduction of customs duties on typic commodities which an American country may offer in the markets of another.

Creation of an inter-American institution to insure permanent financial co-operation between the various countries;

Organizing of an inter-American commercial institute to supply the importers and exporters of America with necessary data for advancement of trade;

Establishment of new industries and negotiating of commercial treaties, especially for interchange of raw materials;

Would Prevent Increase of Rates

In addition to creation of the committee, the resolution urged that governments prevent unjustified increases in shipping and marine insurance rates; negotiate bilateral or multi-lateral agreements for regular and connected steamship services between the countries, with special provisions for traveling salesmen and samples; reduction of consular fees on manifests of vessels, and cutting the port, sanitary and other formalities applied to merchandise traffic.

Dealing with the question of profiteering, the delegates decided: "To request the governments of the most industrialized countries of the continent to do whatever is possible, within their legal faculties and circumstances, to prevent excessive and unjustified increases in the prices of manufactured products destined for export."

10,285 Join Roll Call in Workers' Spurt

Volunteer Toilers Enroll 4,000; Half of Total From U. S. Units

A spurt on the part of volunteer workers yesterday pushed the Red Cross Roll Call membership to 10,285, an increase of some 4,000 recruits over the previous day's mark. Government units have accounted for more than half of the enrollees, 5,644.

Numerous special gifts were reported yesterday by the committee headed by Miss Mabel T. Boardman. The special contributions have returned the greatest amount of Roll Call funds of any campaign classification. The legal division of the PWA was added to the Government honor roll of offices which have joined 100 per cent.

The speakers' bureau schedule for today is as follows: Advertising Club, Raleigh Hotel, 12:30 p. m., speaker, Edgar Morris; Brookland Citizens Association, Masonic Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, 8:30 p. m., Mrs. Helen Moodie; Oldest Inhabitants, Nineteenth and H streets northwest, Charles E. Smoot; S. S. Kresge Co., 430 Seventh street northwest, 8:45 a. m., Mrs. Moodie; Gunston Hall School, 1906 Florida avenue northwest, 12:45 p. m., speaker, Mrs. Frank Paramore.

Alexandrians to Hear Hungarian Missionary

Bela Udbermoki, Hungarian missionary, will address the Potomac Association at 10 a. m. today in the auditorium of the First Baptist Church, Alexandria. He will discuss religion in Europe.

Churches to be represented include the Temple and Del Ray, of Alexandria; Woodlawn and Woodbridge, of Fairfax County, and Mount Vernon and Beulah, of Arlington.

Dean Lapham's Funeral Will Be Tomorrow

Services for Dean John Raymond Lapham, of the George Washington University engineering school, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral parlor, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. He died at the university hospital late Monday night.

Fifty-three years old at his death, Dean Lapham underwent an operation at the hospital about a week ago.

He became dean of the engineering school in 1927 after 11 years as a member of the college staff. Born in West Medway, Mass., he attended Brown University, where he received his B. S. E. degree. For four years he was an instructor at Pennsylvania State College and received his M. S. degree there in 1916.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Ayres Lapham, and two children, John R., 18, and Evelyn, 20. They live at 4800 Arkansas avenue northwest.

He will be cremated.

Douglas Declares The Universe Is What You Make It

For more than 800 people at First Congregational Church last night, Lloyd C. Douglas mixed the soothing philosophy of "Magnificent Obsession" with admonitions to "postulate a better world" to achieve individual success.

In the first of four lectures at the church at Tenth and G streets northwest, Douglas emphasized that the "size, structure, nature and direction of the universe" depends primarily on what you make it.

The author will be guest of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity alumni at a luncheon tomorrow at the Hour Glass Restaurant, 732 Fourteenth street northwest.

Hitler's Peace Efforts to Fail, Italy Believes

Expects Proposals to Be Made in Reichstag Speech This Week

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 3.—Italy appeared likely today to remain aloof for the present from German-Russian peace maneuvers.

Well-informed Italians said they expect Adolf Hitler to make some peace proposals in his Reichstag speech this week, but doubted they had any chance for success.

These persons said Italy, sincerely desiring to have peace re-established, fears a prolonged war would make Europe the prey of Bolshevism, but she would not, however, involve herself in proposals predestined to failure.

Ciano Sees Mussolini

Fascist sources also indicated that the Italian government, which asserted in justification of its intervention in the Spanish civil war that this was an anti-Bolshevik crusade, was not yet inclined to follow Germany in co-operating with her late enemy, Russia.

Foreign Minister Ciano informed Premier Mussolini of his week-end conversations with Hitler immediately upon his return to Rome today, but no information was published here on the tenor of the talks. The Fascist press even refrained from its practice of describing the great cordiality of the meeting.

Some Italian correspondents in Berlin forecast that Hitler would propose the creation of a small ethnologically homogeneous Polish state under German protection with guarantees to Hungary and Rumania, and an armistice during which German colonial claims and the general European situation might be discussed.

Caution Prevails

Italian dispatches from London, on the other hand, uniformly presented Britain as unwilling to consider any peace terms which were not based on elimination of Hitlerism and restoration of independent Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

Well-informed Fascists and foreign diplomats expressed the opinion that French and British refusal to accept peace proposals of the sort Hitler might be expected to make would not alter the Italian policy, at least for the present.

Caution was the dominant characteristic of this policy, an authoritative informant said, and any revision would come only after a careful study of the events.

French Leader Says "No"

Paris, Oct. 3.—While awaiting official word of any peace proposals from the Reich, Edmond Meillet, president of the Chamber's army commission, tonight made a broadcast in which he said all France, without waiting for the propositions, answers no.

Newspapers in unison continue to maintain there are no possible terms which would be acceptable.

Imported Liquor Sales Boosted In Montgomery

Man lives not by food alone—he also likes his Scotch. At least that seems the answer to a heavy increase in sales of imported liquor reported by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board.

Sales of Scotch and other imported drinks have jumped from 50 to 200 per cent in the county dispensaries since beginning of the war scare, dispensary officials reported.

Much of the increased demand comes from the county's 13 country clubs, but buying by private individuals has been noted.

Chamberlain Bars Peace on Hitler's Terms

Russo-German statement of last week had mentioned.

"Italy has proclaimed herself neutral. Russia has proclaimed herself neutral. The United States is neutral. The fate of this war may depend upon the attitude of these three powers," he said.

Lloyd George then asked that when there was something more to go on than at present, the House be given an opportunity of discussing the proposals in secret session.

The prime minister vigorously scotched the secret session idea, then remarked that although he and the government had been unable to anticipate what the nature of the peace proposals might be, "Mr. Lloyd George has anticipated it."

Laborite Joins Attack

"All I wanted to say," Chamberlain concluded, "was that at present we have received no such proposals and I think it too soon to assume that we are going to have a proposal of such a detailed and confidential character as Mr. Lloyd George suggests.

"On the other hand, it is quite possible that the offer might prove to be one which no self-respecting government would consider at all."

Laborite D. R. Grenfell then accused Lloyd George of having "written articles denouncing and condemning the victims and not the aggressors."

Sir Henry Morris-Jones, Liberal, remarked that "Wales will be ashamed of the words Mr. Lloyd George has uttered," but D. L. Lipton, Independent, said there was a cleavage not only in the house, but in the country as well as to "whether we should listen to proposals for peace . . . because Hitlerism has not yet been destroyed."

Two members remarked that many British people were thinking as Lloyd George and praised his courage in giving expression to these sentiments so early in the struggle.

Attitude Unchanged

Immediately the debate ended, Chamberlain was received in audience by King George VI at Buckingham Palace.

In his weekly review of the war, which precipitated the debate, the prime minister touched lightly on the Russo-German statement of last week, adding he saw nothing in what had happened that should lead Great Britain to modify the attitude the country has taken.

"The agreement between Germany and Russia and the subsequent partition of Poland between them has, of course, changed the position of Poland. But it by no means follows that the arrangement will inure to the ultimate advantage of Germany and seriously affect" Britain's aims, Chamberlain continued.

"There is nothing in that agreement that should cause us to do anything other than what we are doing now—mobilizing all the resources and all the might of the British Empire for the effective prosecution of the war." The reason for which this country entered the war has been frequently proclaimed. It was to put an end to the successive acts of German aggression which menaced the freedom and the very security of all the nations of Europe.

"The immediate start of the war was the deliberate invasion of Poland by Germany, but . . . the fundamental cause was the overwhelming sense in this country and in France of the intolerable nature of a state of affairs in which the nations of Europe were faced with the alternative of jeopardizing their freedom or of mobilizing their forces at regular intervals to defend it.

". . . the Russo-German declaration . . . is obscure, but it seems . . . a scarcely veiled threat as to the consequences if the proposal should be refused.

"I cannot anticipate what the nature of any such proposals might be, but . . . no threat would ever induce this country or France to abandon the purpose for which we have entered upon this struggle . . .

"No mere assurances from the German government could be accepted by us, for that government has too often proved in the past that their undertakings are worthless . . . if, therefore, proposals are made we shall certainly examine them . . . in the light of what I have just said.

Large Army in France

"Nobody desires the war to continue for an unnecessary day, but the overwhelming mass of opinion in this country, and, I am satisfied, also in France, is determined to secure that the rule of violence shall cease and that the word of governments, once pledged, must henceforth be kept."

Dwelling on the war developments, Chamberlain said the French had made further progress on the Western Front, that already "a large British army has been transported to France."

In recent days, he continued, aircraft has continued the relentless hunting of submarines during the night hours, and had sighted and attacked a number of U-boats.

The submarine menace was decreasing, he said, and trade in and out of British ports was growing. For over a week no British ship had been reported sunk by submarine action.

Britain, he added, was speeding up the arming of merchantmen, which was within her rights as a belligerent. He spoke of the sinking of neutral ships as further evidence of an unrestricted submarine warfare by the enemy.

Columbia Baptist Aid Picks Officers

Columbia Baptist Ladies' Aid Society met yesterday with Mrs. Bessie Jewell. Officers elected include an advisory board consisting of Mrs. R. G. Buckelew, chairman; Mrs. Robert Storey, Mrs. Clarence Shotwell, Mrs. Macon Ware and Mrs. A. J. Petty. Mrs. George T. McNab was re-elected secretary, and Mrs. Guy Ervin, treasurer.

Mrs. Barham, who was chosen president of the missionary society at the church meeting in July, named Mrs. T. B. Snoddy and Mrs. H. H. Rogers a nominating committee for the other officers to be selected next month.

The annual luncheon and bazaar will be held November 8. Mrs. Macon Ware is in charge of the luncheon. Mrs. Olive Cooksey was appointed chairman of the rummage sale in October.

Poles Refuse Buffer State, Says Consul

Wouldn't Be Content, Podoski Declares Here On Way to Canada

Poles would never be content to live in a shrunken "buffer state" between Russia and Germany, Victor Podoski, new Polish consul general to Canada and an eye-witness to the war's first 14 days, declared at the Polish Embassy yesterday.

The 44-year-old foreign office official, a white-haired veteran of the Russo-Polish war of 1918-20, said his countrymen will accept no "mock Poland" as part of a Nazi peace proposal.

Podoski saw Warsaw battered by a week's bombardment, caught the last bus for the foreign office's temporary headquarters at Krzemieniec after a 36-hour journey through villages and farmland terrorized by German planes.

Slept in Barn

Ordered by his government to the Ottawa post, Podoski left Krzemieniec September 12. He slept one night in a peasant's barn before crossing the Rumanian frontier by automobile.

Seven members of the diplomat's family are still in Poland, he said, two in Warsaw and the others "scattered around the country."

He spoke with pride of the defense of Warsaw, Westerplatte and the Hela Peninsula and then with sadness of an ally that came too late—the autumn rains.

There were no towns "and very few villages" that escaped air raids, Podoski said. Though bombing in the first week of the war appeared to be confined largely to military objectives, the envoy charged that attacks soon became "entirely indiscriminate."

Children Machine-gunned, He Says

Children tending geese were machine-gunned from the air, re asserted.

Podoski's job in Canada will be to speed recruiting for the Western Front among the quarter million Dominion citizens of Polish extraction, and to promote relief campaigns in behalf of millions of Polish civilians now destitute in the wake of war.

Former first secretary of the Polish Embassy here, Podoski served for eight years as chief of the division of Anglo-American relations in the Warsaw foreign office. He expects to leave for Ottawa tomorrow.

U. S. Hay Standardization Job No Safe Spot for Ka-Chooers

Mrs. Floy V. Galleher separating leaves and stems from a pile of the potential sneeze producer—hay

Agriculture Department Scientists Conducting Research on 600 Bales Of Feed Can't Afford Hearty Sneezes

Hay fever sufferers about to emerge from this 1939 season of ka-choo may be interested to know that the Agriculture Department now is busily engaged in researches upon 600 bales of hay, all neatly stacked in one room.

There, in the midst of lespedeza, clover, alfalfa and several varieties of potential sneeze producers, daily sits Mrs. Floy V. Galleher, plucking leaves and stems from a mass of hay and the like in a tray almost under her nose.

She never has been bothered with hay fever, nor have the several scientists who conduct the experiments in the close, small room that smells pleasantly of hay and drying grain. There the scientists establish grain standards and send out to county agents such samples of perfectly standardized hay, lespedeza and the like.

But there are no sneezes in the room. Workers there couldn't afford to be sensitive to pollen, they say. Science would suffer, and in consequence the Army, one of the country's largest purchasers of hay, used for its horses and mules.

To arrive at the standards, the scientists have long used a nifty machine with a multi-colored card contraption that shows at a peep when the grain, or hay, is matching up in color. There follow tests for texture and moisture content. Once a year the Army people come by to learn of the new standards for hay for the horses that will draw the caissons and for the mules that will be cussed at.

All over the land the county agents, at meetings chocked with farmers, hold up the small boxes of standardized grain to illustrate their speeches. And in Washington there isn't a sneeze in the whole process.

60 Become Citizens Here, 7 Born in U. S.; Tennessee Native Is Denied Repatriation

Chief Justice Wheat yesterday granted United States citizenship to 60 natives of 15 foreign countries in the District Naturalization Court. The new citizens included seven American-born women who lost their citizenship by marrying aliens before 1922, when a statute was enacted permitting Americans to retain their rights when marrying foreigners.

Although she was born in Clarksville, Tenn., Mrs. Mary Bloch, 45, of 640 East Capitol street, was denied repatriation because she could not speak English. She was taken to Hungary when only 2 years old and only recently returned to America. She still has a husband and two daughters in the village of Munkacs, Hungary. Chief Justice Wheat ordered another hearing for Mrs. Bloch in two months.

Italian—Guy Sturiale, 28, of 3816 Fifth street northeast; Millina Mildred Realini, 36, of 1150 North Capitol street; Lily Varlos, 26, of 469 I street northwest; Mrs. Elsie Augusta Bocchio China, 25, of 1430 Columbia road northwest; Ralph Angelo Trapani, 29, of 1233 Raum street northeast; Joseph Francis Belfiori, 31, of 2901 Alton place northwest; Anthony Moschetto, 41, of 216 Seventh street southeast; Salvatore Mazzo, 59, of 2375 Champlain street northwest; Mrs. Clelia Angelica Dei Vitto, 40, of 1216 Quincy street northwest; Domenico Iascone, 53, of 5008 Seventh place northwest; Antonio Veltri, 37, of 1138 Abbey place northeast; Mrs. Finisdea Di S. Funeral services will be tomorrow noon in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Prince Frederick, Calvert County, Md.

Lafayette Square Loses Famed Beech

The copper beech tree in Lafayette Square, more than 100 years old, and the next to last beech in the park, was going down yesterday under the saws of a National Capital Park Squad.

Victim of ambrosia beetles which burrowed into the heart of the tree, the beech began to show in June that it was dying, park officials said. Yesterday, clerks on their way to work saw workmen cutting down the skeleton trunk while trucks hauled away the branches.

Finland and most of the Baltic.

Finland also in the past has been more or less under the German Aegis, but Berlin apparently was not in a position to do much now.

Finns Deny Demands

Stockholm, Oct. 3 (AP).—Uncertainty rimmed the Baltic tonight as the Scandinavian countries worried over Germany's campaign to rid the Baltic of shipping which might carry contraband to her enemies and watched Russia's aims and motives with increasing anxiety.

Foreign reports that Russia had demanded naval and air bases on two Finnish islands in return for a concession in the Karelian frontier district, were denied by the Finnish foreign office.

Reliable Helsinki sources said Finnish defense forces are considerably larger than those of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and insisted they would, if necessary, defend Finnish soil.

Anglo-Swedish Pact?

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 3.—Great Britain may implement her economic war against Germany by negotiating a commercial treaty with Sweden under which the latter's large exportable surplus of iron ore would be diverted from the Reich to England, according to the Daily Telegraph.

Parallel with the projected trade treaties, the paper adds, necessary arrangements will be made for naval convoys for neutral vessels.

Britain Reported Trying to Boost Trade With Soviet

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 3.—Britain was reliably reported today to be trying to increase her trade with Soviet Russia.

Foreign Secretary Halifax and Soviet Ambassador Maisky are said to have discussed the possibility of trade talks. Maisky said he saw no reason why trade between the two countries should not be increased, provided it was possible to transport goods to Britain. The feeling here is that Germany would not dare to stop any Soviet ship.

[Stockholm business circles reported Russia had asked for bids on Swedish and Finnish vessels to transport timber from Soviet Arctic ports to England, the Associated Press said. Timber is on Germany's contraband list.—Editor's note.]

Chamberlain Hints at Doom Of Sea Raider

Sinker of British Ship Off Brazil Believed 'Pocket Battleship'

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 3.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told Commons today Great Britain had a "prearranged plan" for dealing with the armed raider which sank the steamer Clement off the coast of Brazil.

There was no official confirmation here of a report that the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer, a new 10,000-ton cruiser, was responsible for the sinking of the Clement, but London naval experts admit this would make the British problem infinitely more difficult.

[Associated Press dispatches from Buenos Aires indicated a growing belief the Admiral Scheer was the attacking vessel, quoting Latin American sources as saying the Clement's crew reported a plane attacked the ship before it was sunk by shells and a torpedo. The Admiral Scheer carries two planes. Editor's note.]

There are only three warships in the entire British navy with enough speed to catch the Admiral Scheer and big enough guns to outfight her. These are the battle cruisers Hood, Repulse and Renown, none believed anywhere near the South American coast.

Carries 11-Inch Guns

The Admiral Scheer was built under the restrictions of the Treaty of Versailles, which limited the displacement of German warships to 10,000 tons and stipulated that they should not mount over 11-inch guns.

The Germans, however, managed to get more speed than a battleship and more guns than an ordinary cruiser.

Naval experts here believe the three largest cruisers in Great Britain's American and West Indies Station, York, Berwick and Exeter, already have been sent in search of the German raider.

These three mount only 8-inch guns against the Admiral Scheer's 11-inch armament but it is believed here that these three at least could cripple the battleship because of the greater firing rapidity of their guns.

If, however, the admiralty decided to put one of the big British battle cruisers on the trail, there is little doubt about the outcome and its ability to sink the pocket battleship in a sea engagement. The Hood, for example, has 42,000 tons to the Admiral Scheer's 10,000; it has a speed of 31 knots to the Admiral Scheer's 26 and mounts 8 15-inch guns to the Admiral Scheer's 6 11-inchers.

Furthermore, the Admiral Scheer and other pocket battleships are not heavily protected. They have only 4 inches of armor, to the Hood's 12 and the Renown's and the Repulse's 9.

The greatest problem, however, is not the sinking or crippling of the pocket battleship in combat, but in finding her, and it is believed the admiralty will use airplanes for this purpose.

The Admiral Scheer, however, also carries two airplanes and she has a radius of 10,000 miles, so it would not be easy to find her.

This warship passed through the English Channel April 20, en route for maneuvers off the Spanish coast. It was rumored then that these pocket battleships and German submarines might be taking up strategic positions all around the world, but on May 4 it was reported that the Admiral Scheer had returned to home waters after its spring cruise.

Many British Ships at Sea

Buenos Aires, Oct. 3 (AP).—Although many German merchant vessels are tied up in neutral South American ports to avoid becoming targets for British cruisers, numbers of British ships are plying the South Atlantic sea lanes, offering rich prey for German raiders.

The Buenos Aires port register for August and September showed Britain's blockade against German shipping already was drastically effective.

In September three German ships entered the port here and ten departed, compared to 23 arrivals and 20 departures in August.

Of the ten Nazi vessels leaving in September, five went only to other South American ports. The other five apparently attempted to run the British blockade. Three were sunk.

In contrast, 63 British ships arrived at Buenos Aires and 62 left during September, compared with 65 entries and 65 departures in August.

Argentina Wars On Chaco Bandits

Military measures are relied upon to rid the Chaco region, in northern Argentina, of organized bands of thieves and robbers responsible for many outrages and depredations.

The inhabitants sent to Buenos Aires a delegation asking that the new Gendarmeria Nacional be employed to wipe out the bandits. To give impressiveness to the appeal for protection a crowd escorted the delegation in a procession to the railway station. Speeches made before the departure of the train pointed out that neither life nor limb, to say nothing of property, was safe in the region overrun by the bandits.

Flush Kidneys of Acid and Poisons

Gain In Health And Stop Getting Up Nights

When kidneys are continually over-burdened they often become weak—the bladder is irritated—often passage is scanty and smarts and burns—sleep is restless and nightly visits to the bathroom are frequent.

A safe, harmless and inexpensive way to relieve this trouble and help restore more healthy action to kidneys and bladder is to get from any druggist a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules and take as directed—don't be disappointed.

Don't be an EASY MARK and accept a substitute—Ask for Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland. GET GOLD MEDAL—the original—the genuine. Look for the Gold Medal on the box—35 cents.

Remember—other symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble may be backache, puffy eyes, nervousness and leg cramps.

Crowned Queen of Harvest Moon Ball

There was a thumping and a bumping, a shouting and a hooting at Griffith Stadium last night, as was never put up by any Redskin football fan, as several hundred Washington jitterbugs went slightly wacky at the opening of the Harvest Moon Ball. in floor charge by Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who departed with the Logan funeral party, may take the floor briefly in rebuttal of Senator Borah's Monday speech.

Tobey, who futilely attempted Monday to gain the floor, denied any partisan purpose in his proposal to split the bill into two parts, and obtain immediate enactment of restrictions on American ship trade with belligerents. He warned against dangers of waiting another fortnight or another month to invoke "carry" provisions of the bill, saying every day holds danger of American involvement through the sinking of an American ship.

Bloom Also Predicts Repeal

Under his proposal, the bill would be sent back to the committee without prejudice, and the measure reported back at once in two parts. The Senate would resume debate of proposed embargo repeal immediately on passage of the trade precautions. Tobey, who has attended meetings of isolationist opponents, denitd he is committed against embargo repeal. Democratic leaders predicted his recommit motions will be voted down.

Analyzing potential strength of the bill, Administration strategists said votes already pledged have removed any doubt that the Senate will vote embargo repeal by a large majority once debate of the issue has subsided. House majority leaders, it was said, have advised them that the House was equally certain to concur in repeal.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, appraising House sentiment, told reporters the House will pass the bill "overwhelmingly."

"So far as the House is concerned, it is in the bag," said Woodrum.

Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee also said he was assured of sufficient House votes to ratify Senate action repealing the embargo.

Senator Bailey in a series of conferences was attempting to shape a shipping section change in the bill that would be acceptable to the bill's author, Senator Pittman, and at the same time would be less costly to the American Merchant Marine.

Present provisions prohibit American vessels from conducting ocean trade with belligerent nations. In the South Atlantic American ships and planes could carry passengers, mail and ship supplies to British possessions. There could be no American ocean-going traffic to Canada and Nova Scotia, although American trade could continue with Canada overland and inland waterways, and planes could make mail and passenger stops on belligerent territory in the Pacific and China Sea.

Bailey declined to say in what details he would propose that these restrictions be relieved, but contended "some types of shipping can be helped very much, while others would have to make sacrifices."

The North Carolinian, whose vote is counted by Administration lieutenants as a vote for embargo repeal, said he conferred on the change with members of the Maritime Commission, several Senators and made inquiries at the White House.

"I am trying to find a solution consistent with the general policy of the bill, helpful to the Merchant Marine, an arm of the national defense which we intend to preserve and build up," said Bailey.

Bailey said he would ask no change that "would tend toward risk of involvement in war," adding, "The principle that we will not send our ships into combat zones or belligerent ports is going to stick."

President to "Keep Hands Off"

Another controversial section in which changes have been demanded are financial provisions permitting exetnsion by the President of 90-day ordinary commercial credits to belligerent governments. Senate Minority Leader McNary predicted an effort will be made to limit trade with belligerents to a strict cash requirement.

The President, meanwhile, at his press conference, continued his strictly "hands off" policy. A reporter asked if his reference to "cash" in his message to Congress contemplated 90-day extension of credits. Smilingly the President advised the reporter to go to the Senate for his information.

Six House "progressive" Democrats earlier called at the White House to tell the President they believed lifting of the arms embargo should be accompanied by an excess-profits tax on arms and munitions. The group ineluded Representatives Voorhis, California; Murdock, Arizona; Bryson, South Caroline; Ellis, Arkansas, and Hill, Washington, all Democrats.

Murphy Lauds Mundelein as 'Social Builder'

Roosevelt Assigns Naval Aide to Attend Funeral for Cardinal

Attorney General Frank Murphy last night characterized the late George Cardinal Mundelein as "a leader to whom every devotee of freedom and justice can look and be refreshed," in a Nation-wide broadcast via National Broadcasting Co. and WRC.

Murphy's eulogy, delivered in Washington, was part of a program of tribute to the Chicago prelate. From Chicago the memorial broadcast was joined by the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, senior auxiliary bishop of Chicago, and Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago. Archbishop John J. Mitty of San Francisco spoke from the West Coast and Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, from Washington.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt yesterday assigned his naval aide, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, to serve as his personal representative at the services for the Cardinal, to be held Friday.

Aided "Social Justice"

Cardinal Mundelein, Attorney General Murphy said, was a "social builder" who distinguished himself equally in the "temples of religion" and "in the cause of social justice." The prelate's entire life, Murphy added, was testimony to his conviction that "the church is not so preoccupied with the spiritual concerns of its children as to be indifferent to their well-being. . . .

"But . . . the thing that made him great was the pureness of his espousal and his practice of the Christian ideals which are the heart of our civilization."

Senator Lucas termed the career of Mundelein as "a true symbol of American life." Bishop Sheil described him as "a man among men." Archbishop Mitty said that the Cardinal "not only knew the present condition of things, but strove to understand their backgrounds." "He did not use the front door of prestige," declared Mayor Kelly, "but rather the back door of poverty."

In Boston, William Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States, praised Cardinal Mundelein as a "truly noble character, a devoted churchman, and a sincere and loyal American."

Hundreds Kneel

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—George Cardinal Mundelein returned in death today to the Holy Name Cathedral while hundreds knelt in prayer.

The body of the prelate, attired in purple vestments and resting in a bronze casket, was borne into the church to lie in state until after funeral services Friday morning.

The cathedral was filled and 1,000 other persons were gathered in State street when the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary bishop who was named administrator of the Chicago Archdiocese to serve until Pope Pius XII names a successor to the cardinal, sprinkled the bier with holy water at the door.

The casket then was placed on a catafalque near the altar rail. A file of mourners moved slowly past.

Bishop Sheil will say a mass attended by children from the parochial schools tomorrow. Another, with members of religious orders in attendance, will be recited Thursday by Bishop William D. O'Brien, of Chicago. A sermon will be delivered then by Bishop Stanislaus V. Bona, of Grand Island, Nebr.

Friday the requiem high mass will be sung by Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, of Washington, papal delegate to the United States. The eulogy will be spoken by Archbishop Joseph J. Cantwell, of Los Angeles.

"The war is only a month old. But the major factors are already emerging. The British and French can, and will, control the seven seas despite submarines and airplanes, and can sit there until their enemies are exhausted. . . . Their manpower can defend France unless they blunder into taking wild adventures . . . Aerial warfare may be destructive, but that works both ways and, so far as all experience goes, is not conclusive of any war."

"German shipping is already driven off the seven seas in 30 days . . . I am confident that our naval experts will confirm that this dominance of sea power may be damaged, but cannot be destroyed by aircraft . . . There has been great progress in methods of detecting submarines since the last war, and this type of warfare is less dangerous than formerly . . ."

Italian and Soviet participation in the war he said appears "improbable" at least for the present. "We need to keep cool. After all, we must keep out of this war. We would be yielding the last stand of democracy if we go in, win or lose. We would have to yield to dictatorship during the war, and in a quarter of a century of impoverishment, afterward we would not get out of dictatorship. We would be destroying the possibility of being of aid in reconstruction of a demoralized world after it was all over."

White House Drive Reopened; Quiet Prevails

White House grounds, closed to tourists either on foot or in automobiles since the middle of September, were reopened yesterday during the daytime.

Col. Edmund W. Starling, chief of the White House secret service, said the ban had been lifted at his discretion due to the fact that quiet prevails. Although automobiles are being readmitted to the White House driveway, they will not be permitted to tarry there.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were still detailed to the Capitol to guard against sabotage.

Growing Nazi DriveRepulsed, French Claim

Total Plane Loss to Date Set at 8 With 28 Germans Downed

By the Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 3.—Spreading German attacks along the northern flank of the Western Front were reported tonight by the French to have been repulsed. East of the Moselle and Saar rivers, artillery action in the same areas was reported.

"Great activity" by patrols was reported during the night and military observers said it was apparent the Germans were increasing pressure on French advance positions and rapidly shifting their point of attack.

French sources reported France had lost only eight fighting planes and "several" scouting planes, compared to 28 German planes they said had been shot down.

French said that in the first two aerial battles of the war over the Western Front, the French—thanks to training and planes—among which are some 200 American-built Curtisses—had shown "evident superiority."

French scouting planes, these sources said, had flown deep over German territory through heavy antiaircraft fire, but "never failed" to carry out their missions. The Germans, they said, had made "not a single" scouting flight over France.

Immediately before Saarbruecken, the Germans held strong frontal positions. Dispatches indicated the French were working on an encirclement movement around the industrial city in the sectors where the increasing German attacks apparently were aimed to break this encirclement.

The French army is tackling the Siegfried Line as it would a beleaguered city, capturing a high point here and wiping out a salient in its own lines here, but confident that if it holds on the garrison will eventually be compelled to capitulate from hunger and exhaustion.

Guns Ruin Blockhouse

This correspondent today visited a sector of the front in the neighborhood of the Forest of Warndt.

The French guns were carrying on a lively cannonade when our party approached the front lines.

Concealed in the wooded hillsides, they were entirely invisible and only puffs of smoke betrayed their presence.

The target was a high crest which the Germans had fortified by a blockhouse, earthworks and a concrete observation post. This height commands the road from Saarbruenecke to Saarlouis, birthplace of Napoleon's Marshal Ney.

Little clouds were kicked up by the shells as they landed on the hill top. With field glasses one could see that the German blockhouse was already half in ruins.

Desperately, the Nazis are trying to free themselves from the French grip, making attack after attack. Only this morning a party of 40 Germans made a raid on the French lines. They were driven back by 15 Frenchmen.

French Honor Foe

The bodies of two dead Germans were brought out on a farm wagon. The French soldiers surrounded the cart and looked with silent respect on the faces of their fallen foes.

"It is Hitler who has done this," I heard one French soldier exclaim, sadly.

This small engagement is characterisitc of most of the fighting that has been going on on the Western Front during the first month of the war.

By local actions, the French are acquiring all the high ground near the frontier.

Dies Obtains Names of 2,000 Chicago Reds

Chicago, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said late today he had obtained the names of 2,000 members of the Communist party in Chicago and that the list included many professional men, newspaper employes and teachers.

Dies, chairman of the House Committee investigating un-American activities, conducted private hearings today in a hotel suite. He said his investigation was aided by cooperation of Communist groups in supplying records.

He said that records from Chicago Communist organizations revealed the following memberships by occupations—112 lawyers, 132 in medicine and nursing, 144 newspaper employes, 161 radio employes, 120 specially employed (executive), 129 in theaters, 109 artists, "very many" in teaching groups, and 514 milkmen.

Liquidation ofRed, Nazi Groups Urged

Cincinnati, Oct. 3 (AP).—Lewis G. Hines, secretary of labor and industry for Pennsylvania, urged the American Federation of Labor today to demand of the Federal Government "that the Nazi bund and the Communist Party be immediately liquidated" in this country.

In a speech that brought shouts and applause from the delegates, Hines struck out at Fritz Kuhn, bund leader, and Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. director, against whom the Government has instituted deportation proceedings.

"If I were Secretary of Labor in the Federal Government," said Hines, "I would immediately deport Harry Bridges and find a way to strip Kuhn of his citizenship and send him back to Germany."

Kuhn, a native of Germany, is a naturalized citizen.

Polish Air Expert, 'Testing' Bomber, Flees Rumania

Bucharest, Oct. 3 (INS).—Escape of Poland's leading airplane designer in a Polish bomber from a Bucharest airport was revealed tonight when the German government lodged a protest with the Rumanian government for allegedly violating a pledge that all Polish military planes were to be placed in storage.

The designer, Ladislaw Riser, was asked by Rumanian authorities to demonstrate a Polish bomber brought here by a refugee.

Riser took off and flew southeast, probably attempting to reach Syria.

Mallett, British Counsellor Here, Ordered to Cuba

Victor A. L. Mallet, C. M. G., for almost four years counsellor of the British Embassy here, has been appointed Great Britain's minister to Cuba, it was learned yesterday.

MALLET

Mallet will assume his new duties about the first of the year, he said, staying in Washington until that time.

The 46-year-old diplomat is the son of the of the late Sir Bernard Mallet and is a graduate of Winchester College and Balliol College, Oxford. He joined the Cambridgeshire Regiment in the World War and rose to a captaincy. Mallet entered the diplomatic service in 1919.

Dr. Soper Named U. S. Housing Aide

Dr. George Albert Soper, sanitary engineering expert who discovered the famed typhoid carrier, "Typhoid Mary" in New York City in 1902, has been appointed as consultant to the U. S. Housing Authority, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Soper, who will work in the management division, was for many years a member of the New York City's sewage commission and director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

Nazis Studying British Stand

noon Friday or Saturday. The exact date, it was said, depends upon the Fuehrer's return from Warsaw, where he will review the conquering German armies. — Editorial note.]

Nazis professed "complete inability" to comprehend the British stand. They said Britain does not want to quit and yet does not want to fight.

By fighting, they said, they meant forthright attacks on German soil, not just an effort to shut off Germany's raw material supplies through a trade and war blockade.

That German submarines would attack every armed merchantman was made clear.

"The German navy not only will be entitled to, but will be obliged to, break resistance of such ships with all possible means," said Dienst aus Deutschland.

"None regrets more than Germany that the English method is leading to unnecessary engagement of the number of persons exposed to the dangers of war."

Mme. Coutinho Rites Tomorrow At St. Matthew's

Funeral for Mme. Louise Coutinho, 48, musician and teacher, who died Monday at her home, 1508 Nineteenth street northwest, will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthew's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of Portugal, Mme. Coutinho was educated at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Libson and at a Berlin conservatory. She married Dr. Joaquin de Siqueira Coutinho in 1912 and came to this country with him. He is now instructor in the school of public relations, Georgetown University and at Catholic University.

President Asks Delay on War Profit Tax Bill

Question Demands More Study, He Tells 6 House Democrats

President Roosevelt yesterday told six left-wing House Democrats that he did not favor attempting at this time to pass legislation levying a heavy excess profits tax on concerns dealing with European belligerents.

Although he was heartily in favor of preventing abnormal war profits, he said, he felt that the excess profits tax question demanded more study. He asked the group to talk with officials of the Treasury, Justice and Commerce departments and the Securities and Exchange Commission, since these agencies are investigating profiteering.

Mr. Roosevelt said he knew of no one who had made abnormal profits in the last month. He told the Congressmen, he said, that after the neutrality question had been settled, they might talk with him again.

The House group, led by Representative Voorhis, California, is endeavoring to have excess profits tax legislation passed at the special session to prevent American concerns from making large profits from selling arms and munitions to belligerents. They want to see such legislation brought forward as a companion bill to the arms embargo measure.

The impression prevailed that the President would oppose the idea. The Congressmen, after talking with him, however, were optimistic over the possibility that an excess profits tax measure might be brought forward with Administration sanction after the arms embargo is out of the way.

One of the House members said the group discussed with the President the question whether an excess profits tax might be made retroactive.

NEPTUNE'S PRIZE CATCH. Bert Granoff, will also offer prizes to Neptune Room patrons. Bert, who's known to every man, woman and child in Washington by virtue of the many months he spent at the Earle Theater, will arive in the Neptune Room next Saturday to start emceeing and warbling. Also, he'll start to work over the details of a "Hidden Talent Contest," to be started in a couple of weeks. Government workers will be especially encouraged to enter the contest, which will be staged as a serial event on Tuesday eves. Top prize will be a week's engagement at the Neptune Room. Runners-up will be made happy with steak and chicken dinner parties.

NEW FACES shine at Maryland Gardens. Norma June, a luscious little brunette from Niagara Falls, is singing charmingly with Lou Williams' orchestra. And you'll be greeted by Host Charles Hunter, jr., who's returned to Maryland Gardens after a season's absence. Charles has been at Maryland Gardens off and on for five years. He gets the wanderlust every once in a while. But he always comes back. He says happily, "Maryland Gardens is home to me."

DISTINGUISHED TROUPERS are Grace and Scotty, who've just come to Mayfair. They're great friends of James Kennedy, the English composer ("Penny Serenade," "Chestnut Tree" and "Did Your Mother Come From Ireland"), are always first to introduce his songs in this country. Scotty has two brand new Kennedy songs of which he thinks highly. They are "South of the Border" and "My Prayer." P. S.—Scotty's a real Scotsman. He hails from Dunfermline. Grace is a Knoxville, Tenn., girl.

LAFAYETTE CLICKS. All the town's swing fanatics and connoisseurs are a-dither over Joe Marsala's band at the new Lafayette Club. It's swing with fine taste and a glitter that's purveyed by the earnest young Signor Marsala. And Adele Girard's swing harp is an authentic novelty. Patricia Oakley goes dramatic with splendid effect, especially in that sketch of the slightly snozzled lass who waits for the telephone call that never comes . . . Bulletin. Promoter Ed Hodges just called to say that Marsala band will play for dancing at luncheon at the Lafayette on Saturday between 12 and 2:30, also for afternoon cocktail dancing on Saturday and Sunday between 5 and 7. Supper dancing is on every night, including Sunday from 10 until 12.

NIGHT CLUB FAMILY. Wonderful folks are the Evans Family (see picture above), now appearing at Bamboo Gardens with the smart Loretta Riordan Revue. But Mother Evans fooled us completely. We refused to believe that she was anything but a good-looking boy when she waltzed out in an Eton costume complete with topper. Dad and Mother Evans are veterans of vaudeville, know show business like a book. Daughter Marietta is a highly talented singer, dancer and impersonator. Her skit on Joan Crawford is the most lifelike ever. Son Lester is fresh from the Munhall (Pa.) High School but does a nifty tap dance. P. S.—the big "Anniversary Celebration" is on at Bamboo tonight.

BACLANOVA, the gorgeous, will stay at Troika for another week. The beautiful Russian's salary runs into box-car figures, but Mrs. Helen Hamilton is very happy over the extended engagement. "Money! Fooey! I want Baclanova," says La Hamilton.

The remarkable Evans family, playing at Bamboo Gardens this week. That's Dad Evans and Momsie on the left, Daughter Marietta and Son Lester at right

MAESTRO PETE MACIAS, who'll lead off the revelry at the Lounge Riviera's fall opening tonight

RIVIERA OPENING. Pete Macias is mysterious but elated over something that's going to happen at the Riviera opening tonight. He wouldn't tell us but we're certain (didn't you know we were psychic?) that oodles of celebrities are going to be on hand and will step up to the mike and ad lib. Nothing is more fun than a party like that. We'll be seeing you at Riviera. Wouldn't miss it for the world.

ORCHIDS BLOOMED in the spotlight at the Pall Mall opening last night. With every lass and lady wearing an orchid, the place looked too, too chi-chi . . . Bert Barnath's new orchestra produced the sparkling rhythms to be expected from such a leader and line-up, was voted a click success . . . Among the crowd of Best People we saw the Earl McIntoshes and the Hilary Hodgkinsons having a good time and discussing attending the Riviera opening tonight (see preceding paragraph). Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Bachrach and Representative and Mrs. William Byron, both entertaining parties of eight; Newsman Sam Kauffman and his charming wife, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chappell.

HARVEST MOON-ING. Writing before last night's Harvest Moon Ball, we can't say a thing about it except that traffic was probably cluttered up for miles around the Griffith Stadium, that Queen Patsy Brewer looked lovely (that's certain), that the Glen Gray music was the tops. Tonight comes the sepia edition of the Harvest Moon. It's going to be a festival of jitter-bugging.

OOMPH! Singer Patricia Ryan has been getting rivalry in that "umph" stuff in the Mayflower Lounge. But it's been from the "Empress of Umph," Ann Sheridan, who's been constantly in and out of the Lounge during her Washington visit.

HI HAT CELEBRATION. Between balloons, blondes, brunettes (and occasional redheads), the double anniversary party in the Hi Hat and Ambassador Room was a scene of jollity and confusion . . . Angie Rodante sang blues . . . Lynne Terry sang sweet . . . Oscar was every place at the same time . . . The waiters rushed around as though they were in a foot race . . . Dick Reger said he'd never be the same again, was told "That's good." And to think we'll have to wait a whole year for another Hi Hat anniversary party.

WEDDING PARTY. If the Rainbow Room orchestra and waiters seemed a bit dreamy on Monday it was because they were just getting over the wedding party of Waiter Angelo de Finis and the former Miss Marie Bols, of Pittsburgh. (Should we say that's the end or the Finis of Marie?) Angelo's the good-looking little lad you'll find on the south side of the Rainbow Room. Maestro Milton Davis said no Italian wine was served at Angelo's party. "Scotch and soda till it ran out of their ears," says Milton.

PERSONALITIES INTRIGUING. Arsenio (Madrillon luncheon music), who's a native Guatemalan, composes sad Guatemalan music . . . Ida May Clark, the Shoreham Blue Room's ever so popular accordionist. She was playing the organ when the Knickerbocker Theater disaster occurred, was one of the few rescued from the terrific accident. The original three King's Jesters (Metronome Room). Get them to sing those dozens of extra verses they've made up for "Annie's Cousin Fanny." They'll not need much coaxing . . . Penny Ford (who's just begun singing at the Hour Glass), because she's both beautiful and intelligent, sings delightfully and has a lot of horse sense. Yes, the female wonder, that's Penny . . . Al Simmonds, of the Brown Derby. Is he a nut or isn't he. Anyway, he's built his own nut house and is making it pay fat dividends . . . Libby Summers, who's El Capitan of the lovely Frances Allis Girls at the Lotus. Harry MacArthur (Star) says "She's wonderful." And it must be so . . . Adele Van (Cafe Caprice), freshly pretty as a just-plucked rose, has improved her singing ever so much since she won a prize for it last summer.

Roosevelt Bars Smuggling of Warship Fuel

But Report of Aid To U-Boats Beyond Patrol Is News to Him

By John G. Norris,
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday warned American ships not to smuggle fuel and supplies to belligerent war vessels off the coasts of the United States.

His statement was in response to questions at his press conference on a report from Philadelphia that former rum-runners were bootlegging supplies to German submarines lying outside the neutrality patrol. The President replied that he had heard of no such incidents, but that if any Americans are doing so they had better stop.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that establishment of the new "safety zone" around the Western Hemisphere will probably require expansion of the active fleet of the United States, and declared that enlargement of the armed forces of the Nation would go forward despite a conflict in present laws.

U. S. Must Lead Patrol

In another development, the War Department ordered its field staff in charge of industrial mobilization to Washington next week for a report on the status of 20,000 factories surveyed for conversion to munitions plants in time of war.

The President said he had received no final report from the Navy as to the number of ships needed for the neutrality patrol now operating in the Atlantic. He recalled that 40 reserve destroyers were being fitted for service with the existing neutrality patrol of the Atlantic coast of the United States, and intimated that a few more may be necessary to extend it to the waters of South and Central America.

Under an agreement unanimously approved by the Inter-American Conference at Panama City, the 21 American republics would co-operate in the establishment of an area, ranging up to 500 miles wide, and running from North to South American shores, from which belligerent ships would be barred.

Naval experts agree that the United States Navy would have to assume the leadership of such a patrol.

The question arose over providing housing and hospitalization for the 65,000 men being added to the Army, Navy and Marine Corps under the expansion authorized a month ago under emergency powers. Congressional authority exists for building temporary barracks and hospitals, as well as for the pay, food and clothing of the additional men, Mr. Roosevelt said, but appropriation acts specifically forbid the Army and Navy to incur a deficiency in construction funds.

No Funds to Stock Ships

Comptroller General Brown, the President said, advised him not to put the question to his office but to go ahead with the construction and then let Congress straighten out the matter of appropriations next January. Mr. Roosevelt added it was discovered that stocks were low in some of the reserve destroyers being put in service and no funds existed with which to restore them.

At the War Department it was said that most of the additional barracks to be built would be at the larger posts in the South and West, with some possibility that Fort George G. Meade, Md., might be allotted additional consruction.

Next week's meeting of the industrial mobilization field staff will bring some 40 procurement district officers here October 9 for a series of conferences with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and his aides. The field group carries on a continuous survey of American industrial plants and prepares periodic reports of their readiness and capacity for producing war materials in an emergency.

About half of the 20,000 plants catalogued have been allocated contracts to take effect in wartime.

Wilner Re-elected Adas Israel Head

Joseph A. Wilner, head of the Jewish Social Agency, has been re-elected president of Adas Israel Congregation for the twelfth consecutive year, it was announced last night.

The Congregation also re-elected Rabbi Solomon Metz and Cantor Louis Movik. Other new officers are Herman Robbin, vice president; Joseph Blumenthal, treasurer; A. Scheffelman, executive secretary; Lester Levy, recording secretary; Charles Pilzer and Joseph Mazo, trustees.

Her Ambition Becomes Reality When 83-Year-Old Woman Flies

Mrs. William Rogers Takes Plane to Memphis; Will Hop Back, Too

Mrs. William S. Rogers, of Hyattsville, yesterday took progress in her spry 83-year-old stride as she stepped into an airplane for the first time in her life.

Watching her every reaction were a dozen of her relatives who had entertained varying opinions about whether she should undertake the flight to Memphis, and a crowd from the airport's waiting room began to watch her, too, after word spread of what was afoot.

But there was little reaction from the alert, gray-haired woman, unless one watched her eyes especially. These danced constantly toward the planes, coming and going, and all the activity about the blimp. Mrs. Rogers was taking progress in stride; but her eyes weren't indifferent.

"It's only that I've wanted to fly since airplanes were invented. I've wanted to all those years. And I didn't feel this excitement when I first rode in an automobile," Mrs. Rogers said.

"I want to see what it all will look like from up there," she went on, her eyes still out the window on the planes. "I went to Memphis several times by train; now I want to try something new," she said.

"She will fly back," said a member of the family. "I certainly may," said Mrs. Rogers. Someone brought in a bouquet of flowers from her children.

"Yes, it is quite exciting," said Mrs. Rogers, still talking of the plane ride. And then the big American Airlines silver ship took the air, with Mrs. Rogers plainly at a window watching the world spread away as she had wanted to see it since airplanes were invented.

Senators Leave Tonight for Logan Funeral

Flags Half-Staff as Barkley Pays Tribute To His Colleague

The funeral entourage of Senator Marvel Mills Logan leaves tonight for his home in Bowling Green, Ky., where services tomorrow will honor his four decades in public life.

Capitol flags were lowered to half-staff yesterday after the Senator's death earlier in the day. The Senate met to hear Majority Leader Barkley's tribute to his Kentucky colleague and then recess without debate.

"His loss deprives the Senate of the services of one of the most conscientious, sincere and hard-working men who ever graced this body," Barkley said. "I believe that I can say that he was, in truth, a Christian statesman."

Roosevelt Sends Note

Named to represent the Senate at the funeral are Senators Barkley, Austin (Republican), of Vermont; Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona; McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee; Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota; Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Truman (Democrat), of Missouri; Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, and Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull sent notes of sympathy to the Senator's widow, Mrs. Della Haydon Logan, who was in Bowling Green at the time.

Senator Logan, who was 64, had been ill last summer but was apparently recovered when he returned to his office ten days ago. He was striken again last Saturday. Death was attributed to heart attack.

At the Senator's bedside were his son, Victor H. Logan, of Covington, Ky.; his ward, Miss Juanita Randolph, and a cousin, Mrs. George Bell.

Mostly a New Dealer

Also surviving are his sons, Leland Logan, of Bowling Green, and R. H. Logan, of Louisville, and a daughter, Mrs. George Horschel, of Louisville.

An influential member of the Civil Service, Military Affairs and Judiciary committees, Senator Logan supported the majority of New Deal legislation. He was elected to the upper house in 1930.

Bulky and shaggy-haired, Senator Logan fought in the front lines for President Roosevelt's court reorganization bill, taking a leading role in examination of witnesses before the Judiciary Committee and delivering one of the chief speeches in support of the bill when it reached the Senate floor.

Rep. Merritt Called to Duty By Army

Major in Reserves, He Will Get Industrial Mobilization Training

Limitation of the special session of Congress to consideration of neutrality matters may not have the 434 other members of the House twiddling their thumbs, but Representative Matthew J. Merritt, Democratic Congressman-at-large from New York, will not be idle.

Merritt, a major in the Army Specialist Reserve, yesterday received orders to report for active duty in the War Department. He will report to the planning branch of the Assistant Secretary of War's office for training in industrial mobilization.

A sergeant in the Tank Corps in the World War, Merritt became a Reserve major three years ago. He was elected to Congress in 1934, and is ranking member of the House Military Affairs Committee. Besides fitting him for war duties, the mobilization training should prove of value to the group in consideration of military legislation at the regular session.

Merritt will be a member of a special class for Reserve officers to be conducted by the Army Industrial College.

D. C. May See Sun Again Tomorrow

Not today but tomorrow perhaps Washington will once more see the sun shining through clear skies. The forecaster last night predicted overcast skies for this morning, scattered clouds in the afternoon with slowly rising temperatures. Fair and warmer is his promise for tomorrow.

Yesterday, Washingtonians took to topcoats as the mercury hovered between a high of 59 degrees and a low of 47, the coldest spell since May 17.

The Citizen's Voice

With the resumption of fall activity in every field, Washington's 66 citizens' associations have gotten under way with their programs for another year. The function of the associations is limited to the study of community problems, sponsorship of bills and general vocalization of the District's desires to its overseers. But this service, despite the fact that its nature is unofficial, has proved to be of vital importance to the city.

As civic spokesmen for the District, the associations have succeeded in counteracting, to some extent, the lack of community spirit which has resulted from the absence of political power and activity in this voteless city. If Washington ever acquires the privilege of home rule, the ground work of civic interest which these associations have laid will become especially significant. In the meantime, they are successfully approximating a measure of democratic government where none exists.

Cardinal Mundelein

Long ago some of the more ardent of Cardinal Mundelein's admirers, both within and outside of his own faith, began to speak of him as "the first American Pope." Though unfulfilled, the prophecy was eminently correct in its implicit recognition of his genius for ecclesiastical leadership.

In Rome, during the conclave last April, he was mentioned with two or three others as a logical successor to Pius XI, should the conclavists abandon the tradition of centuries and elect a non-Italian Pope. Cardinal Mundelein's name was then known to the whole world, and not less favorably because of the contumely heaped upon it by the masters of the Third Reich.

Two years earlier, Cardinal Mundelein had spoken bitterly of the enslavement of the land of his own ancestors "to an alien, an Austrian paperhanger and a poor one at that." It was not the slight inaccuracy in describing Hitler as a paperhanger that aroused the fury of the Nazis. It was the fact that the Cardinal had exposed the true nature and extent of the struggle between the Church and State then being waged within the Reich.

Moreover, it was soon evident that his forthrightness was far from having cost the Cardinal any of the high favor in which he had been held at the Vatican. That favor was manifest as early as 1924. Although the Archdiocese of Chicago is one of the largest and wealthiest in Christendom, Rome until then had never looked beyond the Atlantic seaboard to elevate an American to the Sacred College. When two years later Chicago was chosen for the International Eucharistic Congress, Cardinal Mundelein's swiftly rising influence in the Church was apparent to all.

Like his friend and schoolfellow, Patrick Hayes, George Mundelein was a child of the New York tenements. Where young Hayes impressed his teachers by spirituality, young Mundelein impressed them by intellectual promise. Each was afterward remarkable for his gifts of organization and administration.

But unlike Cardinal Hayes, who once admitted sadly that the times were moving too fast for him, Cardinal Mundelein was acutely alive to the complex modern social and political currents. At the beginning of the depression he was one of the few high-ranking prelates thoroughly aware of the dangerous implications that it held for the church.

He saw clearly, and said boldly, that any moral alliance between Catholicism and reactionary capitalism must in the end cost the Church the allegiance of the masses. And he warned his coreligionists against permitting the Communist danger to be used as a cloak for social injustice. It is characteristic of the clarity and independence of his mind that the official organ of his archdiocese was one of the very few American Catholic periodicals which declined to admit that either side in the recent Spanish war was manifestly the side of the angels.

Cardinal Mundelein was a man of deep piety and much learning. But piety and learning are not uncommon among churchmen. What is more rare, but sorely needed in both religion and society, is leadership at once consecrated, courageous and intelligent. That leadership Cardinal Mundelein undoubtedly demonstrated, and all men of good will have cause to lament his sudden and untimely death.

American Safety Zone

Not all the implications of the so-called Declaration of Panama are clear. But the text of the agreement reached by the 21 American republics does indicate that a potentially momentous step has been taken. For the first time the nations of the Western Hemisphere are attempting to draw a circle around themselves with the object of keeping a European war away from their trade lanes and coastal waters.

This American safety zone takes in an enormous area of sea, extending from Passamaquoddy Bay on the United States-Canadian border to a point off the eastern tip of Brazil. All the regular shipping lanes between this country and South America are included. In the Pacific the zone extends as far as 750 miles off the coast of Ecuador, to include the Guadalupe Islands, and as far north as the United States-Canadian border.

Within this zone are many British and French possessions. It appears that the sea lanes leading to Jamaica, British Honduras, Martinique and other foreign possessions would be neutralized. But the declaration would not apply to the immediate territorial waters of island or continental areas belonging to European nations.

Having proclaimed this safety zone, the conference at Panama City left its ultimate significance in doubt. As it stands, the declaration is simply a warning to the European belligerents against the performance of any hostile act within the area outlined. The delegates merely agreed to use the joint influence of the American republics "to obtain from belligerents observance of the dispositions contained in this declaration." At the same time, each state reserved the right to take whatever action it may deem necessary to protect its own interests.

Apparently all ships, including those of the nations at war, will be free to operate in the safety zone, so long as they refrain from hostile acts in that area. Coincident with the adoption of the declaration a British vessel en route from New York to Brazil was sunk about 70 miles off the Brazilian coast. That seems to fall within the definition of "hostile acts" which the conference seeks to keep out of American waters.

The sinking of this British ship suggests that the American republics have taken over a rather formidable responsibility at the very moment that Congress begins to debate a neutrality bill banning American ships from war zones on the other side of the Atlantic. No provision is made for enforcement of the Declaration of Panama. It permits "individual or collective patrols" of the safety zone, as the various republics may agree among themselves. The United States is already maintaining such a patrol extending beyond the Virgin Islands. But this is for information purposes only.

If further acts of war occur in the safety zone, the American republics may consult among themselves or act on their own responsibility. So the whole question of enforcing this general policy is left for future consideration. If the belligerents refuse to heed the Panama warning, and the American republics do nothing, the declaration will be meaningless. If, on the other hand, it is to be rigidly enforced, the United States may quickly find itself much closer to the war.

This collective effort of the American republics to keep the European war away from their shores is certainly justified. There is no reason why the New World should allow trade between North and South America to be jeopardized because Europe is at war. But in developing this policy along with the neutrality program to which the Administration is committed, care will obviously be essential to avoid moving in opposite directions.

A "Hatch Act" For D. C.

Attorney General Murphy is expected to rule within a few days that District of Columbia employes are not subject to the terms of the Hatch Act.

A decision by the Department of Justice seems unnecessary for that purpose. The pertinent section of the act reads: "No officer or employe in the executive branch of the Federal Government, or any agency or department thereof, shall take any active part in political management or in political campaigns." Although sometime treated as such, the District of Columbia is not an agency of the Federal Government.

If an official ruling is handed down, however, it may serve as a cue for District officials to begin work on a "Hatch Act" for the local government. In this disfranchised community there is not the slightest excuse for partisan activity on the part of any municipal employe. Having denied the District all the privileges of local self-government, Congress certainly ought to protect it from the spoils-hunters from other sections of the country.

Enforcement of the Hatch Act, forbidding Federal employes to engage in political campaigns, will make Federal patronage far less attractive than it has been in the past. A member of Congress who finds a Government job for his campaign manager will cut off that individual's usefulness in future electioneering. But politicians will be quick to realize that positions in the District government at present carry no such restrictions. It is reasonable to expect an intensification of the pressure upon local officials to hire Congressional favorites.

For their own defense against patronage-hunters, as well as for promotion of the community welfare, District officials should lay this problem before Congress at the first opportunity. If they take a forthright stand, Congress will probably be sympathetic. It could not reasonably deny to the local government the protection against spoilsmen which it has applied to all the executive agencies of the Federal Government.

Moreover, the great majority of Congressmen are now eager to have the States restrict political activities on the part of their employes. In the absence of such State legislation, the Hatch Act will tend to put national legislators at a political disadvantage. Enactment of a measure to divorce the District personnel system from politics would set the pace for the States. That is probably the most effective step Congress could take to bring about general application of the constructive reform it has set up for Federal employes.

Of course, the District's primary need is a new system of local government, including a modernized personnel department operating on the merit principle. While awaiting that achievement, however, a District "Hatch Act" would be a most useful stopgap.

No Mere Assurances

Neville Chamberlain, addressing the House of Commons yesterday, left no doubt as to the reception which Great Britain will give to any equivocal German overtures for peace. "No mere assurances from the present German government," said the British Prime Minister, "could be accepted by us."

The Prime Minister's skepticism as to the value of Nazi blandishments is wholly justified by his personal experience of the reliability of Hitler's promises. Just over a year ago, at Berchtesgaden, the Fuehrer told Mr. Chamberlain that the Sudetenland "is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe." And, as Chamberlain later reported from the spot where he spoke yesterday, there was added to this the assurance that Hitler "has no wish to have in the Reich people of other races than German."

But even if the British Premier had no personal experience of Nazi morality he would, as an intelligent man, have to be suspicious of German peace feelers based on the idea of letting bygones (including Czecho-Slovakia and Poland) be bygones. It is too obviously in Germany's advantage to work for demobilization of the French and British armies, giving the Nazi government time and opportunity to exploit its recent conquests.

Then, six months or a year later, there would be opportunity to make demands in the West—return of Alsace-Lorraine, restoration of colonies or wholly novel claims—which would be the more difficult to resist if Hitler's word of honor were given any credence now.

The possibility of such an outcome, moreover, is clearly the greater because of the westward advance of Russia, which Germany has underwritten. Blocked by this from further conquests in the East, Hitler is all too likely to turn his future course of aggression against France and Great Britain, particularly if he can now achieve a disbanding of their jointly mobilized war strength.

It is, therefore, easily understandable why the British Premier, speaking with the approval of the French government, has pointed out again that "the successive acts of German aggression" are the real cause of the present war, and that no peace offer without reliable guarantees against continuation of this aggression can even be considered.

The point, for German ears, is given added significance by Secretary Hull's statement that the United States "continues to regard the government of Poland as in existence," even though that country "is now the victim of force used as an instrument of national policy." In other words, it is not merely nations at war with Germany; it is every country with any regard for international law which is unable to regard the destruction of Poland as a fait accompli.

It would be a great coup for Hitler if, having blooded his army and won a token war, he could stop to consolidate and capitalize on his easy victory.

He had such a lull after the remilitarization of the Rhineland. He had it after the annexation of Austria; after the occupation of the Sudetenland; after the absorption of Czecho-Slovakia; after the seizure of Memel. So he now argues that if war continues after the conquest of Poland it "would thereby be established that England and France are responsible."

There may be people to whom that perverted logic is convincing. But Premier Chamberlain, for all his patience, goodwill and demonstrated friendliness toward Germany, is not among them.

"An explorer reports he came across a tribe of African natives weirdly dancing, yelling and banging long clubs on the ground." We can imagine that sand traps in Africa must be pretty terrible.

"The newly-elected Miss America hopes to raise a family of five children, and wants a job." If she raises a family of five children, she'll have a job.

Twelve Years Ago

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twelve years ago this spring a terrible catastrophe befell the people of the entire lower Mississippi Valley, from Cairo to the Gulf—an unprecedented and unexpected flood came down the river and resulted in the loss of more than $1,000,000,000.

The richest agricultural area of the United States, embracing over 20,000 square miles, was affected.

Immediately following this terrible disaster, the editors of the great metropolitan newspapers of the country, including The Washington Post, voiced the sentiment that this was a national problem and should be handled by the national Government. As a result of public sentiment awakened by you editors, Congress adopted what was known as the national flood bill in 1928 and authorized the expenditure of $327,000,000 to thoroughly protect this lower valley by the building of reservoirs, enlarging of the levees, and shortening the river, and the work was intrusted to the Corp of Engineers of the United States Army.

That work is now practically completed and Gen. Harley B. Ferguson, United States engineer, who was in charge of the work, has been retired after doing a splendid job. It was he who conceived the idea of cutting off these bends and shortening the river so as to let the floods out more rapidly, and now we, the people of this lower region, feel at last that we are forever safe from these terrible floods. We feel that we can cultivate our fields and live our lives in perfect safety.

It is a common trait of human nature to pray to the Almighty when in trouble and beg for help and assistance, and then, when the danger is passed and we are normal again, we are so prone to forget to give thanks.

Mindful of that common failing, we of the great Mississippi-Yazoo Delta section of the lower valley, remembering the splendid work that was done by you editors to help us achieve this end, desire now to express our very deep appreciation and to thank you most heartily for helping to bring about what is one of the greatest blessings that has come to this country.

This letter is written at the instance of the board of directors of the Washington County Chamber of Commerce as a tribute of appreciation to The Washington Post and its editor.

In Praise Of War

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: The American people have deteriorated into a lot of spineless cowards. This country was established by war, maintains its existence by armed strength, and will continue to survive, if it does, by brute force.

A nation that will not fight when called upon to do so does not deserve to be free, and the sooner some other country comes in and takes it over, the better. The Russians and Germans will put these lazy, overfed minorities to work when they get here.

ALEXANDER SCARP.
Washington, Sept. 30.

French Food

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The French will come out on top in this fracas, because their army has the best cooks, and they can dish out appetizing food anywhere, anytime.

And, in perfecting our national defense, as a former doughboy, I beseech the War Department to start its School for Cooks and Bakers at once. We entered the last World War in April, 1917, but the first batch of cooks and bakers was graduated on November 11, 1918, at 10:59 a. m.

DAVID A. NEWTON.
Washington, Sept. 22.

To Mrs. Roosevelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by Mrs. Roosevelt's column she states "hundreds of thousands of men, women and children are dying. Are we going to think only of our skins and our pockets?"

The present struggle in Europe is one in which we do not have the slightest interest. If we wish to prove our neutrality instead of making speeches about it, much can be done to convince the world of it by the members of the President's family ceasing from radio and newspaper opinions and comments and members of the Cabinet doing likewise and declining attendance at meetings.

We are thinking only of our country. Shall we repeat again that "tragic experience" of the World War and see another generation of our boys killed to aid in the political and racial jealousies which have been the curse of Europe for 2,000 years of history?

MARY LOGAN TUCKER.
Washington, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to newspaper accounts Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says that her feelings sink every time someone suggests that we let Europe stew in its own juice.

Just what would Mrs. Roosevelt have the U. S. A. do? Send men and loan money to England and France as we did during the World War? Does she not remember what happened after the war was over? Does she not remember the "Dead," the "Lame" and the "Halt" and those who will continue to live a "Hell on Earth" for the rest of their natural earthly life? Moreover, does she not remember that the war loans were never repaid and that her own husband spent and is still spending the Nation's money to repair damages to life and hope for human kind caused by the last war?

FREDERICK E. HORSTMANN.
Flushing, N. Y., Sept. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As Mrs. Roosevelt did not speak or suggest any specific efforts for peace, we, the people, can only assume the contrary thought to be intended, namely prolongation of the war. Regardless of assumption, does it mean that we should submit our skins, namely our lives, before guns and cannons on foreign soil and if there be anything left of us to then submit our last dollar for financing Europe's war in order that we and our children who are left here shall starve to death?

Thanks to the New Deal we have now before we even go to war millions out of work; millions who cannot make ends meet; all of us with a "bankrupt" Government debt; but this is apparently just part of what we should submit to, according to the statement of Mrs. Roosevelt. Or do I misunderstand our First Lady?

EVERETT H. HOLMES.
New York City, Sept. 28.

Roosevelt's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an intelligent plea for repeal of the existing embargo law, President Roosevelt managed every phase of the issue and offered suitable suggestions to remedy any provocation that might arise. National criticism was favorably disposed to hail his speech as an epic. America was duly proud. So proud, that 24 Senators, who had formed a prefactory bloc, were reduced to the passive resistance of unqualified mutterings about "carrying the fight to its bitter end."

The address might have been "The Sermon on the Mount"; "Lincoln at Gettysburg"; or even "Antony over Caeser" . . . but the irascible two dozen would surely clear their throats with: "Sir, we must not subscribe to your principles."

YOUNGBLOOD.
Washington, Sept. 30.

In Defense Of The Soviet Union

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past few weeks, your newspaper, through its editorials and columnists, has unleashed a terrific attack against the Soviet Union for its refusal to be a catspaw of Chamberlain, and to plunge her people into a war against Germany. You have placed the responsibility for the present war in Europe upon the fact that Soviet Russia and Germany signed a pact not to go to war against each other.

You are undoubtedly correct in your estimate of Soviet Russia as the most formidable military power in the world today, which strength Hitler realizes and fears. And it is highly probable that had a mutual defense pact been established between England, France, and the Soviet Union, Hitler never would have dared to start the present war. Therefore, the blood now being shed is on the hands of the Munichmen, Chamberlain and Daladier, whose sabotage of this pact encouraged Hitler and gave him the signal to go ahead.

The refusal of the Munichmen to sign a Mutual Defense Pact with Soviet Russia is not only responsible for provoking the present war but also indicates the nature and objectives of this war. Behind a cloak of terse communiques hiding their failure to come to the assistance of a bleeding Poland, the British and French tories are even now scheming with Hitler on how to turn this war against Soviet Russia; into a predatory imperialist war; into a struggle for economic power in Europe and on a world scale.

MARTIN CHANCEY.
Washington, Sept. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your vulture cartoon and other denunciations of the Soviet Union's entry into Poland cause me to ask these questions:

First, what was the alternative if Russia had not moved to protect the Russians and Ukrainians in that area? Would not those peoples have been subjected to the brutalities of German occupation, which the Russians know only too well, having experienced it.

Second, what would the United States do if Mexico, or Canada for that matter, were attacked and threatened with permanent occupation by one of the world's strongest military powers, especially one which had been for years filling the air with hate and threats against the United States?

We would "invade" either Mexico or Canada in such a case, and it is not even necessary to cite the Monroe Doctrine, which we have been emphatically reaffirming recently, to prove that we would do that.

As a matter of fact, we have invaded Mexico, Nicaragua, Haiti, and Santo Domingo with far less credible or creditable excuses, and we "invaded" Cuba for the same reason given by the Russians—to protect the Cubans against brutal oppressors from another country.

We had better not be too "holier than thou" about the Soviet march into Poland.

ONE WHO REMEMBERS.

The Post Impressionist

The Bacchante

THERE WERE many things in J. M.'s vital, irrepressible nature for his office staff to marvel at. For one thing, there was his enormous capacity for being a joiner in the interest of his insurance business. In the city he was a Mason, an Elk, a member of the City Club, the University Club, the Caledonian Society—and probably mourned in secret because he couldn't be a Hibernian and a B'nai B'rith.

In the suburban town from which he commuted, he was a Rotarian, a Kiwanis, a Moose and an honorary DeMolay, and I'm sure if certain anatomical limitations hadn't debarred him he would also have been a Camp Fire Girl, a Daughter of the American Revolution and an Eastern Star. He even—at this I blush for him—joined the First Congregational Church. And I happen to know that in his heart he was no Congregationalist.

We marveled at his ability to get where he wanted to get, to procure the business he went after (he got the home town city hall, the fire station and the high school—only the church held out), and to see the people he wanted to see. Sometimes his sheer obstreperousness landed him in trouble. Once he couldn't get into a broker's office because the forepart of it was being painted, so he went around to the alley and climbed in through a back window, having first squeezed his huge bulk (210 pounds on the hoof) up a narrow fire escape. He stumbled over the rolled-up rug when he stepped in at the window, and at the same time got a smart clout on the head from the window sash which sent him sprawling before the elders of the city's stuffiest brokerage house.

He came back to us with a lump on his head as big as an ostrich egg, and with his hair, the long thin strands of which were usually plastered across the bald place, in frightful disarray. But though he carried on his business by telephone the rest of the day, holding an improvised icepack over the lump, his humor remained sunny and beamish. A purposeful, tenacious fellow this J. M.

He was, furthermore, choleric and erratic, but kind-hearted and generous withal. Just a big loonie as well as a big softie. The thing, however, we most marveled at in him was a perfect indifference to strong drink. That a big strong Scot in his prime—a Scott, mind you!—should be so utterly oblivious to the joys of the bottle was a subject for frequent wonder and remark. This is not to imply that J. M. was any of your Temperance League sympathizers (though he might have joined the league to get the business), or any of your conscience's sake teetotalers. No, he just didn't like the stuff.

And being, as I have said, a man of sometimes generous impulses, he was wont, when there was cause for celebration, to invite the office force to dinner and the theater. The time, for instance, when he renewed the 5-year policies for Glinkus, the furrier, and got all the Walgreen chain restaurants' insurance in one fell swoop. There was nothing else for it but we must all dine with him at the City Club and then see the mystery play that was thrilling the city for its second straight season. This, despite the fact that we had all seen the play at least once, which was after all a petty consideration to a man of J. M.'s caliber. Well, that was the occasion on which we pretty nearly did him in. And I like to remember how he came up smiling.

Babe, the bookkeeper's pretty clerk, apparently did not trust J. M. to remember that grownups at a party might like something stronger than tomato juice. She therefore took the precaution to bring to the office a gallon jug of what she said was applejack. The rest of us went home to change our clothes, leaving Babe in the office with J. M. Albert, the bookkeeper, and Willoughby, the office boy. We returned to a scene of interesting but not surprising disorder. Albert was drooping over his desk like a pallid fading lily; Babe was dancing on top of the long counter used by day for heavy insurance maps, and accompanying her dance with imaginary tamborines, and Willoughby was stalking about muttering to himself, "Gosh! Gosh! Gosh!" That was the one time the office boy was nearly right.

J. M., who had been somehow induced to take a tumblerful of the stuff in the jug, was then in the barber shop downstairs having water spilled over his head. When he reappeared on the scene, the sparse locks of his hair were raked neatly across the dome which now shone with a festive glow, and a valiant smile sat firm on his face among the ruddy splotches produced by excitement and firewater.

That Babe herself had taken five tumbler-size drinks, and hooted at the traffic cops all the way to the club, and missed her dinner, and had to be taken for a ride that lasted until the climax of the play, is all relatively unimportant. The significant thing was J. M.'s behavior when Albert came into the theater supporting Babe down the aisle and failing completely to keep her from shouting "Hi, stiffs!" at us where we sat in the orchestra. (Albert should have known better than to bring her in, and he dragged her right out again, but that's neither here nor there.) And all through the consternation of ushers, the craning of outraged necks and shocked clucking of dignified ladies in the most sedate and frosty theater audience you'll find anywhere in America, J. M. sat, smiling imperturbably, without turning his head, and looking steadfastly in the direction where he thought the stage was. The most beautiful part of it all is that he never held the occurrences of the evening against the Babe in any way, nor even asked her where she spent the three days following.

Like almost any normal office crowd, we had a little list of those who never would be missed, on which J. M.'s name had always led the rest. But after that memorable evening we took his name off and wrote in the empty space: "Removed for extraordinary valor."

Those Black Sox

THE SOLEMNIZATION of any World Series involving either the Cincinnati Reds or the White Sox for the first time since the historic fake of 1919 was bound to evoke memories of that series in which several members of the White Sox kicked away the championship and shook the fair escutcheon of the national pastime to its very marrow if not to its wellsprings. It is an interesting and accurate, if not encouraging, commentary on American citizenship that this really unimportant malfeasance became at once in the public heart a betrayal second only to that of Benedict Arnold.

It so remains, and today the names of the underpaid wretches who succumbed to temptation and resentment are carved in the American hall of shame, while hundreds of judges, mayors and political bosses who jeopardized the liberties of the people by sabotaging democracy are forgiven or, at worst, merely forgotten.

A Few Facts In Mitigation

INASMUCH as these individuals are being paraded again in their chains, I think I will just point out a few facts in mitigation, the first being that they were not not actively corrupt, but were corrupted. They were corrupted by a dirty little sneak sent out from New York by Arnold Rothstein, who was known as a professional gambler but who in truth was no gambler at all but an uncommonly foul and contemptible thief.

Rothstein knew that the White Sox, the greatest ball team ever assembled up to then and possibly the greatest up to the date of these presents, were vastly underpaid by a rich boss who made great show of his open-handed generosity by buying drinks for political barflies and sports writers and contributing to charities.

Rothstein knew also that there were a couple of players on the team who had a pronounced streak of larceny and by promising bribes of $10,000 each to those who were in the plot he fixed the series. He knew that if he could string them along with small down payments until they had booted away the first game he would have them on a spot and wouldn't have to come up with the rest of the bribe money.

Salaries Called Indecently Stingy

THOSE WHITE SOX were simply marvelous. Bill Evans, the old American League umpire, said he used to stand behind the plate and just give a guess when Eddie Cicotte would throw up that shine ball of his. Cicotte would rub the ball on a patch of paraffin wax on his pants till a spot about the size of a quarter shone like a full moon and then sling. It would seem to explode like a meteor.

Moreover, they were a great fielding club, two of the square guys being Eddie Collins and Cracker Schalk, who are really historic stars, or immortals.

After the story broke in a great splatter, late in the summer of 1920, and the corrupted men were banished in national disgrace, a young Milwaukee lawyer named Ray Cannon, who afterward served a couple of hitches in Congress, took over their case and sent me the salary figures. They were indecently stingy, for old Charlie Comiskey, the noblest Roman of them all, as he was called in print in Chicago, was one kind of man to the public but a very different man to the help.

A Liberal Host Was Comiskey

I HAVEN'T the figures just now, but for all his display of hospitality to his barfly friends Charlie thought $3,000 was enough to pay a star member of the greatest ball team ever assembled. He would roll out a keg of venerable whisky, as smooth as honey, and set a long board of free lunch at a cost of a hundred dollars or so, and people would get to singing harmony and toasting the Old Roman with never a thought of the salary standards of the greatest ball club ever assembled.

The sports writers saw only the hosty side of Old Charlie, and, anyway, in those days many of the players were ignoramuses or illiterates, and most people thought they were lucky to be paid at all for playing a game. The players got almost no hearing, and some of them thought the writers silenced their grievances in print for free drinks.

Even after the expose, which was said to have broken Charlie's health, although fair wear and tear could have accounted for that, the noblest Roman of them all was incredibly callous and ungrateful to a little scrawny pitcher, named Dick Kerr, who won two games in the fake series with most of his own team against him.

Refused A Raise, Dick Kerr Retired

KERR WANTED a little raise. Comiskey wouldn't give it to him, and when Kerr dropped around to talk business as the club passed through Texas on the training trip Charlie's son, Lou, wouldn't talk to him. So Kerr retired and lost his career merely because he asked for a raise. That was what loyalty to the noblest Roman got him.

After 20 years some people's memory gets fuzzy, but let me tell you that not a soul had the story until it was over. The one who cracked it then was Hugh S. Fullerton, who merely said that seven members of the Sox would never play again, but didn't say why. He knew what was up, but didn't have the facts, and the guilty men not only did play next season but had almost won another pennant when the blowoff came. After they were expelled the team collapsed, and the White Sox haven't won a pennant since.

Text Of Chamberlain's Statement

Says No Threat Can Induce Britain, France To Abandon Struggle

London, Oct. 3.—Partial text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech follows:

In the last week events of great importance have occurred in the international field. On September 26 the German foreign minister (Von Ribbentrop) paid a visit to Moscow and on September 28 the results of this visit were proclaimed.

These results were threefold. In the first place, a fourth partition of Poland has been attempted and an agreement has been signed recognizing as final the frontier between Russia and Germany. The line agreed upon was considerably more favorable to Germany than the provisional line of military occupation which had previously been laid down.

In the second place the German and Soviet governments have declared that their agreement has finally settled the question arising out of the collapse of the Polish state and has created a solid foundation for lasting peace in eastern Europe. In their opinion the liquidation of the present war between Germany and England and France would be in the interests of all nations.

British Aims Unaffected

Both governments, they go on to say, will endeavor to achieve this object as quickly as possible. They assert that should their efforts prove unsuccessful England and France will bear the responsibility for the continuation of the war and they add that the German and Soviet governments will then consult together as to the measures they will take.

In the first place an economic agreement between Germany and Russia is foreshadowed under which Russia will supply raw materials to Germany and Germany will supply industrial goods produced over a lengthy period. There has been in some quarters a demand that His Majesty's government should define their attitude in the face of these developments, but I see nothing in what has happened that should lead this country to modify the attitude which it has felt it right to take.

The agreement between Germany and Russia and the subsequent partition of Poland between them has, of course, changed the position in Poland, but it by no means follows that the arrangement will endure to the ultimate advantage of Germany and still less should it affect the aims of His Majesty's government.

There is nothing in that agreement that should cause us to do anything other than what we are doing now—mobilizing all the resources and all the might of the British empire for the effective prosecution of the war. The reason for which this country entered the war has been frequently proclaimed. It was to put an end to the successive acts of German aggression, which menaced the freedom and the very security of all the nations of Europe * * *

The passage in the Russo-German declaration about the liquidation of the war is obscure but it seems to combine a suggestion of some proposal for peace with a scarcely veiled threat as to the consequences if the proposal should be refused. I cannot anticipate what the nature of any such proposal might be, but I can say at once that no threat would ever induce this country or France to abandon the purpose for which we have entered upon this struggle.

Nazi Assurances Worthless

To attempt—as German propaganda does—to saddle us with the responsibility for continuing the war because we are not prepared to abandon the struggle before this purpose is achieved, is only another instance of German war technique. The responsibility for the war rests upon those who have conceived and carried out this policy of successive aggression and it can neither be evaded nor excused, and I would add one thing more: No mere assurances from the present German government could be accepted by us.

For that government have too often proved in the past that their undertakings are worthless when it suits them that they should be broken. If, therefore, proposals are made, we shall certainly examine them and we shall test them in the light of what I have just said.

Nobody desires the war to continue for an unnecessary day but the overwhelming mass of opinion in this country, and I am satisfied also in France, is determined to secure that the rule of violence shall cease and that the word of governments once pledged must henceforth be kept * * *

On the Western Front some further progress has been made by the French which has enabled them to secure useful points for observation over the German position.

A large British army has been transported to France and is taking its place alongside our French allies * * *

Reconnaissance flights both by day and by night are being made by the Royal Air Force units in France and there have been encounters with enemy fighter aircraft. An account of the heroic combat above the Siegfried Line, in which 5 battle aircraft fought 15 Messerschmidt fighters has already been made public and has attracted the warm admiration of our French allies.

Aircraft of the coastal command have continued, throughout the week, to carry out antisubmarine and other routine patrols, escort work and special reconnaissances, and advantage has been taken of the light of the moon to continue the relentless hunting of submarines during the night hours. A number of U-boats have been sighted and attacked.

As already announced, attacks were made on units of the German fleet by aircraft of the bomber command on September 29. As a result of one of these attacks, prosecuted in the teeth of fierce opposition, both from antiaircraft gunfire and from enemy fighters, we suffered some losses, but the Germans have admitted that two of their attacking fighters were shot down.

At sea the war against the submarine has continued with unabated vigor * * *

Trade is flowing to and from our ports in an ever-increasing volume. As I speak, hundreds of vessels are moving over the great ocean routes. They are protected both by convoy and by the unremitting and relentless action of our anti-submarine forces.

Between the 11th and 20th of September 1,485 vessels of a gross tonnage of 3,679,000 entered or cleared the ports of the United Kingdom. During that period only 1.25 per cent of these ships and 1.75 per cent of the total tonnage was lost by U-boat attacks or by mines. No ship has been lost in convoy.

Unrestricted Sinkings Due

Between the 20th and 24th of September three British ships of an aggregate tonnage of 7,627 tons were sunk by German submarines. Since then, that is to say for a period of over a week, no British ship has been reported sunk by enemy submarine action. This may in part be due to the fact that the U-boats at sea at the beginning of the war are now being relieved by others putting out from German ports. But there is ample evidence that submarines are still operating round our coasts. The absence of sinkings therefore is, in the main, due to the successful measures adopted by the navy. * * *

Another and more sinister development of the U-boat warfare is the announcement by Germany that she will regard every vessel of the British merchant navy as a warship. If this means anything, it means that she will pursue an unrestricted submarine campaign. The right to arm merchant ships for self-defense is one of the well-established principles of international law * * *

Further evidence of unrestricted submarine warfare is to be found in the number of neutral merchant ships Germany has sunk. Since the outbreak of war the total of these sinkings amounts to seven ships of a gross tonnage of 13,194 tons. In addition, eight ships with a gross tonnage of 27,765 tons have been sunk by mines or bombing.

Evidence has been received that a German raider is operating in the South Atlantic. One of our ships has been sunk and the crew has been picked up by a neutral ship. This fresh menace will be dealt with according to prearranged plans.

The reiterated misstatements of the German broadcasts have given prominence to the action in the middle of the North Sea on Tuesday, September 16, between German bombing planes and certain units of the home fleet. The Germans have claimed the sinking of the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, later changed to Glorious or even Furious, and severe damage to battleships without loss to themselves.

No Warship Damaged

The facts are that no British ship was damaged and that all of them, the Ark Royal included, are carrying out their normal duties sublimely unconscious of these rumors. The only casualties incurred in that action were suffered by the German aircraft themselves. Four of the crew of these aircraft are prisoners in our hands.

The preparations of the dominions to which I have referred in previous statements are continuing and I should like this week to tell the House of the splendid help we are receiving from two other parts of the empire, Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia. In Newfoundland arrangements are already being made to recruit for the royal navy some hundreds of men from the Newfoundland fishing fleet.

The house will recollect the magnificent service rendered by Newfoundland men in the last war. Southern Rhodesia has mobilized its forces and is giving us very welcome assistance by providing officers and men for service both on land and in the air, outside the borders of this self-governing colony.

There is little that I need say today about developments on the home front. As the honorable members know national registration day was fixed by order as Friday, the 29th September. During the week beginning 17th of September the local officers in charge of the enumeration mobilized their enumerators; and on the 24th September these enumerators, totaling 65,000 in Great Britain, began delivering schedules for the purpose of the returns due to be made on the 29th. Enumerators are now making their rounds for the collection of schedules and the writing and issue of identity cards.

Enumeration Going On

The difficulties usually experienced by enumerators in finding people at home to receive or deliver the schedule were greatly increased by the present unusual family distribution and the blackout conditions at night. I am glad, however, to be able to say that so far as reports are available the whole machine appears to be working well and smoothly.

Finally I have a statement to make about a matter which has attracted considerable attention and given rise to anxiety in the House and the country—the work of the ministry of information. As I stated on Thursday last the responsibility of the ministry for news has not extended in any way beyond the provisions of means for its communication to the press. A review has now been made of the arrangements for the distribution of news, including the question of direct contact between the press and the departments. The subject has been fully discussed with the representatives of the press with a view to meeting their convenience in the matter.

As a result it has been decided that there shall be a reversion to the practice existing prior to the outbreak of war, whereby the press representatives had direct contact with the various government departments, those departments themselves furnishing the press with all official communications in such manner as was found most appropriate. Each department will therefore now make its own arrangements for communicating news to the press representatives.

It has, however, been represented to the minister that the mechanical facilities provided in the building occupied by the ministry for the receipt and distribution of government communications have proved of great convenience to a large section of the press. There is no present intention to do away with these facilities, which will continue to be utilized as a channel by which official communications will be issued to the press.

In any case in which official communications are made direct by departments, the same communications will be issued simultaneously through the central channel.

I should add that some difficulty must be expected in connection with the supply and distribution of news in time of war; the revised arrangements now proposed are intended to reduce difficulties to a minimum and I feel sure that I can rely upon the press to cooperate in their smooth working. The new arrangements will come into force on Monday morning next.

As regards the censorship, which is at present housed at the ministry of information, the responsibility for censorship must rest like the responsibility for news and its distribution upon the departments which are concerned with the subject matter. Departments will of course exercise their own control as regards the news that they give out. The central censorship which is concerned with material or messages submitted by the press (voluntarily in the case of matter for use in this country) will as before be operated by censor officers guided by the directions of the departments.

In the event of questions arising as to any particular censorship operation, the minister in charge of the department affected will answer for it in Parliament.

Sir Walter Monckton has been appointed controller of censorship; he will at the same time supervise the arrangements for the central communication of news to the press.

Appraising Our Interest

By Ernest K. Lindley

Behind Neutrality Debate

BEFORE BECOMING committed to the details of neutrality legislation, the question before the President, Congress and the American people is: "Where does our national interest lie in the European war?"

Many times in the last year or two I have heard these questions put: "Can we afford to see Nazi Germany conquer and control Great Britain and France? Can we afford to see the British Empire broken up by a German-Italian-Japanese alliance, or (more recently) by a German-Russian alliance?"

Our national interest in the current European struggle can be appraised more accurately (although not with finality) by asking a series of questions.

French Diplomacy Created Poland

FIRST, does our national interest require the restoration of Poland and, if you like, Czecho-Slovakia as independent states? These are now among the professed aims of Great Britain and France. However, during Great Britain's century of supremacy following the Napoleonic wars neither Poland nor Czecho-Slovakia existed. Neither, it may therefore be presumed, is necessary to the British from the purely British viewpoint of preserving a balance of power in Europe. Both, in the last analysis, were the creatures of French diplomacy, their original service being to assist in preserving the French hegemony over the continent of Europe which France, alone, was incapable of creating, but which was brought about, finally, by American intervention in World War I.

The British refused to guarantee the borders of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland or any other central or eastern European state until a few months ago when they jumped into the Polish alliance. The decision to make Poland the occasion for war on Germany was theirs. Whether they would have made it if they had known Poland would prove to be so weak is extremely doubtful. But it was their decision, not ours. While Germany was the aggressor against Poland, it was the British and French who decided to make the invasion of Poland the occasion for attack on Germany.

Western Stalemate Is Conceivable

THE SECOND question, related to the first, is: "Does our national interest require the destruction of Hitler's Germany?" This is now an avowed objective of the Anglo-French alliance. Whether this means the destruction of Germany and its separation into several states is an open question. The stronger Russia becomes, the greater becomes the interest of Great Britain and France in the preservation of a strong Germany. However, from our viewpoint, it is necessary to remark only that a strong Germany does not necessarily mean the destruction of the British and French empires, or, to state it differently, the destruction of British sea power and its first line of defense, the French army. A stalemate in the west is altogether conceivable.

The third question is: "Is it preferable, from our viewpoint, to see the British Empire preserved?" The word to emphasize is "preferable." Again it must be emphasized that the preservation of the British Empire, and of British sea power, is not necessarily dependent on the destruction of Hitler's Germany or of Germany under any other leadership. The British have chosen to fight a preventive war. They may fail in the offensive war in which they are now engaged, but still be safe from destruction at the hands of Germany.

The fourth question is: "Is it necessary, from our viewpoint, to see the British Empire preserved?" The word to emphasize is "necessary."

Preferable To Keep British Sea Power

MY OPINION is that the short answers to these four questions should be: (1) No. (2) No. (3) Yes. (4) No.

It is "preferable" but not "necessary" to us to preserve British sea power. It is "preferable" because Great Britain is a "satisfied" power harboring no ambitions inimical to our well-being. Secondarily, the British, having institutions and traditions which we understand (at least in part), make comfortable neighbors.

But to say that the preservation of British power is "necessary" to us is to belittle our own strength. Undoubtedly if British sea power were destroyed we would be tempted to embark on imperialistic ventures of our own. Canada and the British possessions in the Caribbean and near our Atlantic Coast already are American protectorates. We might well be moved to declare that Australia, New Zealand and all the British and Dutch East Indies are within our sphere of influence. The character of the world would be changed, and our policy would have to change accordingly. But if, with all our resources, we cannot deal with such eventualities, we do not deserve to survive.

These questions, of course, omit many complicating factors. At the moment they hinge chiefly on the policies of Russia. But these uncertainties only add emphasis to the argument that while, so far as we can now see, it is preferable that Great Britain and France should not be destroyed, it is not indispensable: that while we may be justified in giving them the "breaks" we would be extremely short-sighted if we committed ourselves irrevocably and unreservedly to their cause.

On The Record

The Shape Of Things To Come

AS AN ISOLATIONIST measure, the Administration's bill is far more stringent than the existing legislation.

The existing legislation is built on the thesis that we got into the last war because we sold arms and gave credit to the Allies.

The proposed legislation is built on the thesis that we got into the last war because our ships were sunk and American lives were lost.

This column does not believe in either assumption. It thinks we got into the last war, after three years, because its continuance at stalemate had become an intolerable strain, threatening the social and economic structure of the whole world, and that we cast our lot to end the war on the side where the national interests clearly lay.

Diplomatic History On Pittman's Side

THE DIPLOMATIC history of the last war is, however, much more strongly on the side of Senator Pittman than on that of Senator Borah.

During the war, we, like all neutrals, suffered interference with and infringements of our neutral rights from both sides. What inflamed popular opinion, however, was not our quarrels over possible infringements of international law but the sinking of the Lusitania and the loss of American lives.

The Marxian, materialistic interpretation of history, which has been strong in our schools and colleges for the last 20 years, has bred a generation of youth who have simplified the whole war to a question of Mr. Morgan's credits—the House of Morgan being a symbol—and the profits of the traffic in arms.

This is the mentality which animated the munitions investigation and resulted in the embargo bill to stop the traffic in arms, prevent profit from it and thus remove what was envisaged as the only cause which could get a Nation into war.

The present war is the answer to that. By no possible stretch of the imagination can any capitalist interests profit from it. Already its beginning and certainly its end will see the most profound modification of the economic systems of all countries which participate in it, and inevitably of the neutrals as well.

It was started by Nazi Germany which has, itself, undergone a radical revolution, and with the free hand and the aid of Soviet Russia.

British Capitalists Reap No Benefits

AND IT IS interesting and significant that the Nazi government is telling the world in its short-wave propaganda broadcasts that England and France are waging the war for the profits of British capitalists. If Germany were a member of the Soviet Union, the propaganda would not be different.

The British war taxes reveal the truth. The war is already leveling income in Britain and France in a manner that only a social revolution could otherwise have accomplished.

Therefore, whatever merit the argument may have had as perhaps a partial explanation of the last war, it has none whatever applied to the present situation.

The Administration's bill, rejecting this argument, holds to the idea that we can keep out of war by keeping American ships and Americans themselves out of the war zones.

With a great deal more logic than that displayed by Senator Borah, Senator Pittman urges that in the modern totalitarian war everything that men eat and wear, all the materials with which weapons are created, the machines to make weapons—nearly everything that comes out of the ground or is manufactured—is directly or indirectly a war weapon.

It is therefore as sensible to embargo one as the other; if the traffic in arms is dangerous, so is the traffic in wheat. And, actually, the contraband lists of Britain and Germany show that this is so.

THEREFORE, the Administration argues, we will defend the territorial waters of the United States and confine our trade to foreign ships that can come and get our goods and carry them away.

We will abolish credit, so that we have no further economic interest in our goods after they leave our shores. If the ships on which they are carried are sunk, the cost will not be ours, and no American lives will be lost.

We shall be isolated.

If one believes that there are no issues in this war which will powerfully affect the United States and that only motives which could impel us are economic, then the Administration's measures ought, certainly, to keep us out of war. They represent a much more radical withdrawal from Europe than the exisiting legislation, sponsored by Senator Borah.

As far as neutrality is concerned one is as neutral as the other. The present arms embargo operates against both belligerents, and if it operates more powerfully against the Allies than against Germany, that is because of the form of economic organization of the allied countries and because of the geographical and marine position of Great Britain; it is not because of any act of ours.

If the cash-and-carry policy advocated by the Administration would operate against Germany, that is because of the geographical and marine position of Germany and its barter trade policy and is not due to any act on our part.

No Laws Can Make Our Position Safe

THE OBJECTION that this column has to the arguments advanced by both sides is that both are promising the American public more security than it is wise for Americans to think they can have. Not a single people in the world today is safe. There is no longer, and until this war is over, any honesty in pretending that laws passed by this Congress will or can make our position safe.

This is a war, but it is also a revolution. It is being fought for a hundred different motives, of which the power politics left over from the last century is only one, and I think we shall find eventually that it is a very minor one.

This war—or possibly the succession of wars which became virulent in Europe with the Spanish civil war and the conquest of Austria—is certain, if it drags out, to take many forms, see new alignments, bring great surprises.

Civil war has been, from the beginning, one of its ingredients and it will continue to be one.

The conjunction of the Nazi and Communist revolutions is a far more important factor in this war than the frontiers of Czecho-Slovakia, or Poland, or the Treaty of Versailles; and whether that conjunction is real, or strategical, or what modification it will bring in both systems, and what repercussions it will have on belligerent and neutral countries is a far greater question than any concerning Congress at this moment.

We Must Comprehend Challenge Of Events

THE DANGER that we dimly apprehend is not outside us. It is inside us, in our minds and hearts, and expressed in our day-to-day behavior.

If, in the hope of safety and security, we fail to comprehend and face the challenge of the titanic events of the times, if we think that geography will absolve us from the necessity of deciding, each of us, in his mind and heart, what is it that we really believe in, then we shall find no peace, either outside or inside, or abroad, or on this soil.

For this war, in all its manifestations—not all of them military by any means—will determine the shape of things to come.

And either we shall help form that shape of thought and by action—not necessarily by military action—or that shape will be imposed upon us—not necessarily by war.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Would Girl's Marriage to Premedical Student Help or Hinder His Progress?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing in behalf of a friend. She is 20 years old, very intelligent, capable and independent. Two years ago, at college, she and a brilliant young Italian pre-med student commenced a companionable friendship which blossomed into a devout mutual love. At the outset her parents (of English and Dutch descent) were gracious enough to him, inviting him to their home during vacations, etc.

However, as the romance continued in the second year of her college course, her parents put up rigid objections and finally forbade her to see him at all. They objected mainly because of the difference between their nationalities and backgrounds. Despite this parental command, she continued the relationship—not flagrantly but secretly, so as to spare her parents' feelings.

She had in no way promised obedience to their command, so she was not acting dishonestly. Eventually the parents found out and as life at home became extremely unpleasant for her, she estranged herself from them. This year, instead of returning to college on their money, she is supporting herself at a job in another city.

They want to get married and are resolved at the same time that he shall continue his training. She would continue supporting herself. I believe that both are sensible, mature persons who are completely realistic in their outlook on life. They have many common interests, likes and dislikes. In the event that they married, the relationship would be very little changed, since they have been quite inseparable for some time now. Do you think that marriage would be a help or a hindrance to them?

SHELLEY.

Marriage Benefits Some Students

DEAR SHELLEY: Since the girl has already given up both family and invaluable educational opportunities in favor of the companionship of the man she loves, it seems to me that marriage is the least return he can make, if he accepts her sacrifice. Moreover, to judge from your subtle reference to the nature of their relationship, a marriage ceremony now would only confirm and acknowledge an already existing (but undeclared) arrangement whereby they are attempting to lead a shared life.

Supposing they have drifted into an illicit alliance (as your statement implies), while sincerely loving each other and fervently committed to the proposition of getting married eventually, then the question of whether marriage would be a help or a hindrance is not the pertinent question at issue. That question should have been decided before the girl defied her parents and withdrew from college in order to demonstrate complete allegiance to her forbidden suitor.

The vital question confronting them now, as I see it, is which is the lesser of two evils: (a) marriage, when they are not fully prepared to finance it, and when it might work a professional handicap to the young man; or (b) a continued affair which, while supposedly granting the young man a helpful margin of personal freedom, will inflict a continuous moral, social and psychological strain upon both.

If conditions are as suggested, then immediate marriage is certainly the wiser choice, from the long-range point of view. Regardless of whatever sacrifices or inconveniences it may impose, it could never be as detrimental to the bond of mutual devotion which currently exists, as an indefinitely protracted affair would be. The latter would eventuate, most likely, in no marriage at all.

It is not uncommon for undergraduate university students—pre-medical as well as those in other classifications—to marry and complete their education with their respective wives' assistance. And it is sometimes argued that the married student makes the best use of his potentialities, because of the stabilizing influence of marriage.

He is far less susceptible to the temptation to spend miscellaneous evenings in futile revelry, and if he has the good fortune to have married "a very intelligent, capable and independent girl," he is sustained by an extraordinarily good companion during his study hours. She makes his intellectual interests hers, and his creature comfort and physical well being her first concern, thus giving him tremendous additional impetus toward success.

Return to Comfort in Shoes

Identical in styling are the "Mary Jane" pumps above, both as comfortable as they look. A smooth calf and square toe of suede are used for the flats at left, while the all-over suedes at right are just a shade more formal in material and may be used for dressier occasions. Many flat-heeled adherents are selecting companion shoes like these designed by Palter De Liso

Shoes Strike A New High In Comfort

85% of Smart Women to Keep Their Toes Covered

IF THERE'S a man within earshot, ask him what he'd say if you told him you planned to wear none but comfortable shoes this fall. He'd probably chuckle and say, "Listen, darling, even if a shoe kills you, you'll keep on wearing it just because it's high fashion."

The boot will be on the other foot when he discovers how trim and pretty your new shoes look, yet how easily you tread in them. There's real comfort in the elegant, well-turned little flats which many of the smartest women all over the country are adopting for both town and country wear. These women seem to have agreed that nothing is fashionable that isn't really comfortable. Dan Palter and James De Liso, two of the most distinguished designers of fine American footwear, are advocates of the solid comfort given by the lower heel in either "Mary Jane" pumps, or in wedge soles, which they are even making in dressy afternoon and evening versions.

These co-designers maintain that if you have paid little attention to your last, you had betbetter look to it now. The wearing of open toes during the summer, they point out, has caused your feet to grow—that is why walled lasts and the new restful apple shaped shoes give the feet extra room to breathe in. They approve the closed toe as an antidote for too much summer freedom and state that 5 per cent of the really smart American women will wear closed toes for daytime this fall and winter.

Farewell to Summer

I

They hang neatly in their garment bags, cellophane wrappings—all home from the cleaner,
And ready for winter's long hibernation.
I say goodbye to them sadly—the gay print ensemble in which I welcomed the spring,
The black sheer with its pert trappings in white, the cool linen, the sharkskin of summer,

II

Like an aura around them events seem to hover—last Easter's parade with its verve, magic brightness,
A lecture where "peace will be saved," was the promise,
A farewell to friends who later canceled their sailings; a view of the sun dropping into the river,
A reunion with one whom the years had enriched, a vacation walk in the quietude of a forest,

III

Six months hence I will take them down—unchanged except for the subtle process of aging.
Shall we merge once again, or shall we be strangers?
Shall I perchance have grown so prosperous I spurn them for things smarter, newer?
Or shall I have expanded beyond them in waistline or hips?
Oh, perish such a suggestion!
After all it will be but six months—yet half a year's history.

IV

What kind of a world will it greet—my gay, challenging print—on next April?
A world of war or peace, of despair or new vision?
On what kind of a spring will my black sheer flaunt again its white trappings? How hopeful a summer
Will my linen, my sharkskin, my floating chiffon meet for second best service—even best, who can tell.
At a time when events seem so far beyond thinking direction?

V

Yes, the world will be different—for better or worse—by next spring, but shall I myself,
Also be changed when I don my clothes of last season?
Yes, older perhaps—still, of course, I won't look it—but shall I be in other ways subtly different,
A little more complacent, more set in opinions, more calloused to cruelty, more molded to form of my tribe,

VI

Will I, when I put on these once treasured garments and find them a bit drab and listless,
Still incased in the intangible husks of last season,
Discover the person within them is equally swathed in past certainties, past theories, past axioms,
No, heaven forbid, for though helpless I am in halting the world's retrogression,
The spirit is still mine to be nourished, mine to lift to the rain and the sunlight.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 3.

FIVE YEARS AGO an attractive woman from Utah became president of one of the biggest and smartest stores on the Avenue, but at the time pretty much of a dying duck. Her name was (and is) Hortense M. Odlum, and at the time she was parting, matrimonially, from Mr. Floyd Odlum, probably the ace financial manipulator of the depression, and don't ask which one, either.

When the marriage went busto, Mrs. Hortense said she'd like the presidency of this big and glamorous store. Floyd said all right, and some time later he became the husband of Jacquelin Cochran, the pretty girl who is our top feminine flier since the death of Amelia Earhart. Mrs. Odlum-that-was went at her storekeeping with vim. She was smart enough to surround herself with experienced merchants and many keen talents in all branches of the mercantile art. The fading store began to glow again.

She initiated all sorts of new stunts in the place, such as consumers' advisory committee, and new and colorful shops and departments were installed. By the use of all factors, these five years have seen the great store become a live and vigorous institution again. Its receipts have trebled in that time, I am told, and the number of employes more than doubled. Its show windows are one of the sights of the great shopping street. She moves!

Mrs. Odlum's store is a going baby, now. A couple of days ago I wrote a piece about Estelle Hamburger, who began at the bottom of the fashion business and is now an inspired store vice president. Mrs. Odlum began at the top, and is doing all right, too. All of which would seem to prove that a woman who has something on the ball can get along very good in the store business here, whether she begins at the peak, the basement or somewhere in the middle layer.

FALL HANDBAGS? Soitenly —this way, moddom. Looking over the arm trunks for the season, I seem to note that black suede is at present out ahead of the pack in popularity. The new satchels are not overtrimmed with gold and things, either. Pretty simple. Now, ladies, just dope out how we're going to get something beside keys and gum to fill those bags, and we'll be all set for the winter.

Overweights Get That Way Because They Drown Boredom in Food

THAT OLD THEORY about overweights being happy-go-lucky seems to have been all wrong. It is now the conviction of some of the leading medical authorities that the overweight is anything but happy—that she is more likely to be a person who is downright bored with life and who takes to overeating as an escape from boredom.

Is that true of you? It is apparently true of a great many women. And, in that case, the solution is not merely to go on a diet, but also to fill your life with so many other interests that eating is relegated to its proper place.

A 2 o'clock one morning, one of these unhappy overweights quit fighting insomnia and put her story into a letter . . . She weighed more than 200 pounds and she couldn't get her weight down! Her size was so acutely embarrassing to her that she was becoming a recluse. There was one organization she was keenly interested in, but she couldn't make any effort to belong because she thought the members wouldn't want her. She didn't seem able to do any of the things she really wanted to do. Being very intelligent, she recognized that she had turned to constant eating to assauge a general dissatisfaction. As a result, she was gaining more weight and life appeared utterly futile.

Joined Study Groups

But she was game enough to try again! This letter, written in the lonely hours, was intended as a pledge to herself to persevere on her determined course. She had to get her weight down in order to re-establish her self respect!

It goes without saying that she dieted, but the amazing thing is the part played by outside interests in the subsequent weight reduction. She succeeded in losing 10 pounds, and as soon as she had done that, she made a definite effort to participate in worthwhile activities. She joined study groups and other women's organizations. And the more interested, she became in their activities, the easier it became to stick to her reducing program.

Just one year later, she wrote a very different letter . . . "Tonight my weight worries me not at all. I am still a little overweight, but I know that I am master of the situation. I exercise regularly and my life is so full of a number of things that I don't often lie awake at night."

You Need Interests

Then she went on to tell what she had been doing. She was president of the very organization she had thought wouldn't want her! And this letter was written on the eve of departure for a convention as president and leading representative.

Now it may be that your story closely parallels hers—up to the turning point. What you may need, just as much as you need a diet, is some absorbing outside interest. If you are bored, get into some work in which you can be useful to your community. Life should hold so much for you that eating ceases to be anything but a necessity.

Embargo Issue Argued Whenever Ladies Meet

Statement That War Discussion Is Taboo Finds Contradiction in Capital Society; One Party Leads to Others to Continue Talk

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN LADIES MEET these days they have to watch themselves to keep from arguing about the embargo as hotly as a flock of Senators. At a small luncheon yesterday, for instance, the debate got under way with the cocktails and was still going strong by the time the last course went the rounds.

That's the usual thing at luncheon parties these days. That's why I was so amazed to read in a recent society column that it's taboo to mention the war at parties this season. That is, I haven't been in any gathering this season when both the war and the lifting of the embargo haven't been discussed pro and con from every angle you can imagine.

At yesterday's party both made up virtually all the table talk; and while I'm fairly sure nobody convinced anybody else of anything, the argument went along at top speed just the same.

Among the guests was Mrs. Donald Richberg who refused to debate the embargo question, but who stated rather firmly at the beginning that she thinks cash-and-carry might be a good policy. Mrs. William Stanley, who came up from Laurel, Md., especially for the party, wasn't quite so definite about it, but I had the impression that she, too, thought that might be the best way to keep his country out of war.

Recently back from a trip to war-torn Europe, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the president of the Export-Import Bank, was among those arguing with special emphasis on the lift-the-embargo side. Incidentally, Mrs. Pierson who, like the others present wants America to stay out of the conflict if it's possible, has as good a line of reasoning for her point of view as any I've heard lately. But like many another Washington resident she feels that the die is cast already to the extent that war victims at least must be helped and that Red Cross bandage rolling is therefore very much in order; so she is devoting four days a week to that work—not in the capacity of an amateur but as a teacher.

Mrs. Grady To Broadcast

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who joined the party late, having attended a previous luncheon, is another who feels the embargo should be lifted and will give her reasons in detail today at 4 p. m. over the radio. She and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the latter of whom favors keeping the embargo since she believes it is a safer way of avoiding war, talked the question over from a number of points of view. Miss Mary V. Johnson and Mrs. Bulkley Griffen, also among the guests, put in a good word now and then for both the cash-and-carry on the one hand and isolation on the other.

Anyway, it was a stimulating gathering; quite typical, I think, of many a luncheon party that will accent this season's social calendar. If no conclusions were reached, and no great issues settled, it was because they seldom are in open debate. But it was refreshing to listen in while a group of exceptionally well-informed women "had it out" across the luncheon table.

"Don't put it in the paper," said the hostess just as I was leaving. And I promised I wouldn't; at least, that I wouldn't tell who gave the luncheon. But by the way, before it was all over, several future parties were planned so that the argument could continue. The next session will take place at Mrs. Stanley's home in Laurel, Md., on October 11. Guests will have luncheon there and then take time out from their embarg debate to enjoy an afternoon at the Laurel races, which, incidentally, started yesterday

Brazilian Tea This Afternoon

Speaking of parties—the Charge d'Affaires of Brazil and Senhora de Guimaraes will entertain at tea this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock in honor of Senhor and Senhora de Amral Peixoto, son-in-law and daughter of the president of Brazil, and Senhorita Zazi Aranha, daughter of the former Brazilian Ambassador to the United States. The distinguished visitors, who arrived here recently, are staying at the Brazilian Embassy, but this afternoon's party will take place at the Guimaraes residence at 2923 Foxhall road.

Changing the subject: Visiting in the hunting country this week is Miss Virginia Van Upp, who wrote the script for the current motion picture, "Honeymoon in Bali." She arrived a couple of days ago in Charlottesville from New York and may come to Washington before returning to her home in Hollywood. She expects to visit for some time in Richmond and other Virginia points, where she has many friends and is being widely entertained. A native of Fort Worth, Tex., she went to the West some time ago. In addition to "Honeymoon in Bali," other of her stories that have been screened include "Pursuit of Happiness," "Swing High, Swing Low" and "Cafe Society."

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard will leave Saturday for Philadelphia where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bok and will attend the season's opening concert of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. The Boks, who have frequently visited in Washington, have a host of friends here. At one time, Mr. Bok was prominently mentioned as the next United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union. Mrs. Stoddard will return from Philadelphia Monday.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, who is lingering on at Newport, is not expected to return to Washington until November . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers are expected to be back from their summer home in Connecticut on October 17.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Jack Vietor, of Washington, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Church 2d at their home near Warrenton, has bought a one-third interest in the Red Fox Tavern property in the village of Middleburg. George Garrett, of Washington, and William Stevenson, of Middleburg, also own a one-third interest in the place. Now that they have leased it to Mr. Vietor he plans to remodel and open the place. It is a landmark in the village and one of the first four buildings of Middleburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, who have been abroad all summer, are now in Switzerland. They will return to America this fall in time for fox hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Wilbur have purchased Chatter Box, near Warrenton, on the Bethel road. This place was formerly owned and occupied by Mrs. Virginia Abbott, of Long Island. The Wilburs have rented the house since their marriage in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Gould Shaw turned Sunday's dreary day into a merry one by gathering many friends into their lovely Warrenton home for cocktails.

The Middleburg Hunt met recently at New Ford with the largest field it has had out since cubbing started. The riders are getting in condition for the regular fox hunting season which begins November 1. Maddux huntsmen moved off with hounds at 6 o'clock in the morning followed by the joint-masters, Daniel C. Sands and Miss Charlotte H. Noland. They had a glorious run of over two hours.

Miss Noland entertained some of the Foxcroft girls who were hunting at her home, The Covert, for breakfast. Among those out that morning were Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Miss Nancy Iselin, Miss Barbara Iselin, Miss Catherine Hulbert, Miss Helen Hulbert, Mrs. Robert Maddux, Miss Willet Leach, Miss Anne Leith, William Hulbert, Crompton Smith, James B. Skinner and James McCormick.

Foxcroft School opened on Monday. Among the new girls are Miss Lucy Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Thomas B. Byrd, of Winchester, and the late Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, and Miss Marjorie Daniel, daughter of State Senator and Mrs. Robert W. Daniel, of Brandon on the James River. Miss Anne Bullitt, daughter of the Ambassador to France, William Bullitt, arrived here in time for the opening of Foxcroft. She has been in France with her father this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Filley, of Long Island, have arrived at their Virginia estate near The Plains for the fall season. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Phillips have returned to their home, Locust Hill, from Sakonnet, R. I., where they spent the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Filley, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, have cub hunted the past week with the Orange County hounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Shepard, Washington, spent Sunday in Middleburg, with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fred. The Shepards have recently returned from abroad where they spent the summer in Paris, and Switzerland.

The Townsends Returning to D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who have spent the summer in the Adirondacks, will return to town tomorrow to reopen their home on Twenty-first street.

With the Townsends at their summer place, Beech Hill Farm, on Schroon Lake, has been their daughter, Yvonne.

To Meet Thursday

The first meeting of the Osteopathic Women's National Association Auxiliary will be a luncheon Thursday at the Iron Gate Inn, 1734 N street. Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton is president.

Stork Brings Boy To Herbert Bryants

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bryant, of Alexandria, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, weighing 7½ pounds, at Garfield Hospital on Monday evening.

Mrs. Bryant is the former Mrs. Margot Couzen-Chewning, daughter of Mrs. James Couzens, of Detroit, and the late Senator Couzens. Mr. and Mrs. Bryant, who were married in Detroit in January, have been making their home in Alexandria. Mr. Bryant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Bryant, of Alexandria.

Donald Downs Gives Dinner At His Home

Members of Wedding Party and Others Attend Function

Donald Downs, who will marry Miss Florence Harris October 17, was host at a dinner party last evening at his home, Downcrest, near McLean, Va. Included among the guests were members of the wedding party and several friends of the couple who will entertain at parties in their honor before the wedding.

During dinner the assembled company was entertained by a group of musicians, including Evelyn Knight, the singer, and a guitarist and pianist from the King Cole Room.

Mrs. Russell Bennett, mother of the future bride, was among the guests, and Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil, who will give a dinner for Miss Harris and Mr. Downs Saturday at the Chevy Chase Club, were also in the party. Walter Abell, who will be an usher, drove over from Baltimore for the event with Mrs. Abell, and others of the wedding party present were Marshall Exnicios, who will be best man, Fred Roy and Will Ryan.

Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, George C. Vournas, Mrs. Exnicios, Mrs. Sims Snow, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Eleanor Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Wolcott Waggamn, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Miss Lilita Dawson, Winslow Van Devanter, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Miss Mary Montgomery, Lieut. Donald MacDonald, Count Oleg Cassini and Count Igor Cassini.

G. T. Rosses Hosts at Party

Entertaining at cocktails from 5 until 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon at their home on N street were Mr. and Mrs. George Tayloe Ross. Guests of honor were Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, who leave tomorrow for Alaska, where Dr. Gruening will take over his new duties as Governor. Since the announcement of his appointment the Gruenings have been in a swirl of farewell parties.

Mrs. Ross is the former Mary Steele. She was married to the son of the former director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, last spring. The elder Mrs. Ross attended yesterday's party.

Other guests included Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blair, Dr. and Mrs. George C. Ruhland, Col. and Mrs. Henry Waite and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Edwards. Mr. Edwards is an Administrator for the Works Progress Administration.

Mrs. Myers Feted Before Leaving For Canton

Enjoying a whirl of parties before she takes off for China is Mrs. Myrl Myers, wife of the American Consul General at Canton. She will leave Saturday to join her husband at his post.

Mrs. Walter Adams entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Myers. The party was given in Mrs. Adams' apartment at Hotel 2400.

Guests included Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Joseph Jacobs, Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton and Miss Elizabeth Johnson.

Studies will keep the two Myers girls, Misses Helen and Barbara, from joining their mother on her journey. Helen will attend George Washington University here while her sister has enrolled at Holton-Arms.

Lieut. and Mrs. Link To Live in Norfolk

Lieut. and Mrs. Everett Mottet Link, jr., who were married on Saturday in Scarsdale, N. Y., will make their home in the Larchmont Apartments in Norfolk, Va., where Lieut. Link is attached to Air Squadron VF-4 of the U. S. S. Ranger.

The bride is the former Miss Rosalind Lovejoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woods Lovejoy, of Scarsdale, and Lieut. Link is the son of Everett M. Link, of Briarcliff, N. Y. They were married in the Hitchcock Memorial Church, the Rev. George Hugh Smythe officiating, and a reception for members of the family was held afterwards at the Scarsdale Women's Club.

Mrs. Link, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of periwinkle blue with a matching veil and carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Frances Woods Lovejoy, was maid of honor and Robert Hudson Barnum was best man.

The bride attended the New York Academy of Fashion Design. Lieut. Link was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1936.

Mr. and Mrs. Camp At the St. Alban's

Mr. and Mrs. Irving L. Camp, jr., who were married last Saturday, are stopping at the St. Alban's for the present and are spending most of their spare time "apartment hunting." Mrs. Camp is the former Miss Sally Holmes, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes.

The couple were married in the afternoon in Richmond, Va., at the Second Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Camp were accompanied by Sterling Bolling and Mrs. Irving L. Camp, mother of the bridegroom.

After spending the week-end in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., they returned to Washington.

The Stokeses Send Train Schedule With Invitations to Daughter's Wedding

WITH THE invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Olivia Stokes, to John Davis Hatch, which arrived in the mail yesterday, the Rev. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes thoughtfully enclose a schedule of trains from New York to Hillsdale, Mass.

Near there, in Lenox, the ceremony will take place at 12:30 October 14, at Trinity Church, and will be followed by a breakfast at 1 o'clock at Brook Farm, the Stokes home. Automobiles will be provided to meet the guests and drive them to and from the station, the church and the farm.

Though Miss Stokes' many friends are disappointed that the wedding will not be held in Washington, some of them plan to drive up for the event. The Berkshires should be at their most beautiful at that time of the year.

Gerhard Van Arkel, who will be an usher, will motor to Lenox with Mrs. Van Arkel, and Baroness Serge Korff is another planning to go. Mrs. Huston Thompson will be in New York October 15 to see the automobile show and hopes to be able to go up on Saturday for the wedding.

MANY WASHINGTONIANS are wondering why, when Czecho-Slovakia and Poland continue to be recognized by our Government, little Albania should have been stricken from the "blue book," the State Department list of foreign diplomats stationed here. Especially when Faik Konitza, the former minister, has not left the country, as was reported, but is right here in his apartment at the Mayflower, which used to be the headquarters of the Albanian Legation.

A State Department official says that the foreign office in Teheran announced that it would recognize no more representatives of other governments, and that Minister Konitza "withdraw." Mr. Konitza declares that he was "withdrawn" by the State Department and that he still considers himself the "moral representative" of Albania in this country. He is still busy with the writing of two books, one a history of his homeland and the other a treatise on philosophy and literature.

Mr. Konitza had planned a trip abroad to consult with former King Zog this fall, but like many others he had to cancel his journey.

MAEVE BRENNAN, daughter of the Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan, perfers a job to a round of card-leaving and parties. She has been working in the Intimate Bookshop in Georgetown recently, but has given up her position there to study library work. Eventually she hopes to go back to Dublin and get a job.

SINCE ADMIRAL Adolphus Andrews left to become commander of the scouting fleet, Washington has seen little of his attractive family. Mrs. Andrews and her daughter, Frances, are now at the St. Regis Hotel in New York, but will leave shortly to spend the winter in Honolulu.

MRS. ROYCE POWELL has switched from the so-called gay whirl to the pursuit of a pre-medical course at one of the local universities. She goes several mornings a week for courses in psychology and chemistry.

The nursery which Mrs. Powell has fixed up for her infant daughter is decorated with amusing murals of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, but the bad witch has been left out, child psychologists saying that she frightens the young.

AMERICAN DELEGATES to the Pan-American Conference have been high, wide and handsomely entertained between meetings, according to reports. Among the most indefatigable hostesses has been Miss Ramona Lefevre, who is widely known here, having frequently visited the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles. She is half Panamanian and half French, and makes her home in Panama City.

WITH FEWER large, elaborate evening parties scheduled this season, perhaps Washington will begin to take more to the night clubs, and even develop a slight "cafe society." Anyway, that's what impresarios are hoping as the local haunts in the Capital stage gala openings in an orchid and chromium atmosphere.

Last night a large number turned out for the opening of the Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh, to dine, dance and watch a floor show put on by the Arthur Murray dancers. At one table we noticed a party which included Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, George Howe, Robert Coe and Miss Marcia Umbsen. The latter looked unusually attractive in a black satin dress made with short puffed sleeves and a bodice of Burgundy satin.

Others seen were Peggy Townsend wearing a black dinner dress and a bow in her hair, accompanied by Count Oleg Cassini; Leone Fumasoni Biondi with a glamorous looking friend; Miss Francesca McKenney with a beau and Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell. Also there were "Tommie" Thompson with Mrs. Lewis Jeffries; Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffler entertaining a large party of friends; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joseph Mack, and Mr. and Mrs. John Viedt.

Mary Wright Is in Wedding At Mount Kisco

To Be Bridesmaid At Marriage of Anna Glen Butler

Miss Mary C. Wright, of Washington, will be a bridesmaid at the wedding on October 28 in Mount Kisco, N. Y., of Miss Anna Glen Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wellman Butler, of that place and New York, to Alexander Orr Vietor, son of Mrs. Carl L. Vietor, of New York and Edgartown, Mass., and the late Mr. Vietor. The ceremony will take place at St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church and will be followed by a reception at Chestnut Ridge Farm, the country home of Mrs. Butler.

Mrs. Anthony A. Bliss will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, besides Miss Wright, include Mrs. Alfred C. Harrison, Mrs. Fitzwillian Sargent 3d, and the Misses Eileen Gillespie, Margaret McGrath, Sybil A. Prichard, and Louise Whitehouse.

Baldwin-Trego Wedding Oct. 21

Miss Helen Louise Baldwin, whose engagement to Lynton L. Trego 2d, of New Rochelle, N. Y., was announced recently by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Baldwin, has selected October 21 as her wedding date.

The marriage will take place in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Baldwin will have two attendants. The matron of honor will be Mrs. Benjamin Young, who will come from Baltimore for the occasion. Miss Barbara Page will serve as maid of honor.

Mr. Trego will have his father, Lynton L. Trego, of Columbia, S. C., as best man. Among ushers will be Lee McHenry Rhoads and Thomas Anglia.

There will be a small reception at the home of the bride-elect's parents.

Friday evening, after the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin will entertain at a buffet supper for members of the bridal party.

Mikado, Pinafore To Be Given for Hospital Benefit

Former Senator James E. Watson, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Bates Warren and Mrs. W. Senton Nicholson are among the boxholders for performances of two of the most famous Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "The Mikado" and "Pinafore," to be given the evenings of October 12 and 13 at Constitution Hall for the benefit of Children's Hospital.

Other boxholders are John E. Waterfield, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, J. C. Blake, the Rev. Edmund Lifris, B. L. Hartz, A. B. Caldwell, Stanley Woodward, W. A. Rogers, John Dolf, Charles A. Carry, A. S. Gardiner, C. Ashmead Fuller and Vincent Saccardi. A block of seats also has been reserved for students at Gunston Hall.

Children's Hospital, facing a deficit of more than $30,000 this year, will receive the net proceeds of the two plays. Director David Niles promises a special surprise for the patrons attending the performance of "Pinafore" the second night.

N. E. A. President Here To Help Plan Year

The Post Club Editor.

Miss Amy Hinrichs, of New Orleans, newly elected president of the National Education Association, is spending a week at headquarters here, meeting with the executive committee and working out organization plans for the season.

The educational leaders conferring here are devoting serious attention to the place of training for citizenship and democracy in the schools of the nation.

This will be the subject of a survey to be undertaken this year by the Educational Policies Commission, which met Monday. This commission is composed of 20 members from various parts of the United States, all members of committees within the National Education Association and the American Association of School Administration, a department of the N. E. A.

Commission Makes Extensive Survey

The commission, formed four years ago, is to continue its study of various phases of "Education in a Democracy" over a period of five years. This season it will take stock of education for citizenship and the value of exercises conducted in many cities in connection with induction into citizenship, possibly following its survey with recommendations.

Publications following its investigations during the four previous years have been "The Unique Function of Education in the American Democracy," "Purpose of Education in the American Democracy" and "Social Services and the Public Schools."

Miss Jones Hostess At Quota Luncheon

Miss Hinrichs, who is a member of the Quota Club in New Orleans, was among the guests at a luncheon given yesterday by Miss Gwladys Jones, international secretary of the organization. The affair was in honor of a member of the Sydney, Australia, club, Dr. Marietta Bolton, who, with her husband, Dr. Stanley B. Bolton, has been in this country since June. They had planned to make a world tour but, because of the war, were obliged to change their plans and will return home as they came, by way of San Francisco.

The luncheon yesterday was at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women. Other guests included Dr. Mary Howell Northam, international director of Quota, and her husband, Dr. Edgar Northam, of Baltimore; Mrs. John Capers, founder of the Washington club; Miss Minnie Byers, secretary; Miss Mary Jane Winfree, a past president; Miss Lynn Moore, president of the Montgomery County Quota Club, and Mrs. Wilna Enright, a member. Mrs. Blanche Knight, president of the local club, was unable to be present.

Dr. Bolton said there were few married women in business in Australia in comparison to the number in this country. Many of them give much time to volunteer work in the field of social service but do not hold paying positions, she said.

The luncheon was at the clubhouse of the A. A. U. W., 1634 I street.

Exhibition to Aid Scholarship Fund Of Victory Chapter

Proceeds from an exhibition Wednesday afternoon, October 11, of the paintings and designs of the late Otto Edward Philip Gaertner will go toward the scholarship fund of Victory Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. The pictures will be on display at the home of the artist's daughter, Mrs. Henry Rogers Pyne, of 6351 Utah avenue, and the showing will begin at 2 p. m.

Mr. Gaertner was the youngest son of Eduard Gaertner, court painter for Fredrich Wilhelm IV, of Prussia, and Czar Nicholas I of Russia. After coming to this country in 1872, he made his home in New York where he handled commissions for leading American families in the closing years of the nineteenth century.

During the afternoon Mrs. Pyne will give a program of songs, and Mrs. Royal E. Burnham, chairman of the ways and means committee of the chapter, will act as hostess at an informal tea.

Group to Discuss European War

A dinner-discussion on the European war and the problem of the Spanish refugees will be held Friday at the 2400 Hotel at 7 o'clock. Among the sponsors of the dinner are Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, William E. Dodd, sr., Mrs. Clifford Durr, Leon Henderson, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, and Brig. Gen. Henry Clay Newcomer.

It is under the auspices of the Spanish refugee relief campaign of which Harold L. Ickes is honorary chairman. The committee has been raising funds for children who have been resettled from French camps into private homes or into the children's colony at Ile de Re in southern France. The committee has also raised funds to send supplies of food, clothing and medicine to the men, women and children who remain in the camps, beside aiding in the emigration of families to Mexico, Chile, and other American countries.

Jubilee Group Of Federation Is Entertained

Mrs. Ernest Daniel Hostess; Card Party Planned to Aid Fund

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday was hostess at a meeting of the Golden Jubilee Committee, headed by Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, former president of the district.

Plans were discussed for the District's participation in the General Federation's Golden Jubilee and contribution to its foundation fund. Proceeds of an auction of cakes brought to the meeting by the committee members were added to the contribution. The district plans a card party November 15 at Hotel 2400 as another money-raising event. Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, president of the Housekeepers' Alliance, is chairman.

The tea table in the dining room was decorated with varicolored dahlias in tall silver vases and three ice cream cakes in pink and green, bearing the inscriptions "GFWC" and "District Federation." Pouring tea and coffee were Miss Velia A. Winner, editor of "The Clubwoman GFWC;" Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the house and headquarters committee, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, past district president and chairman of the division of Indian welfare of the General Federation.

Members of the committee who were present included Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, general federation director; Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Mrs. Ellis Logan and Mrs. Virginia White Speel, all past presidents of the District; Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers, Mrs. Minnie Frost Rands, Mrs. T. C. Atkeson, Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, Mrs. Harold Heffner.

Meade Soldiers Shiver in Mud; Await Attack

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Oct. 3. "Pity the poor soldiers on a night like this" and not only on the Western Front. The Washington brigade, encamped here for maneuvers, may not be facing live shot and shell, but the ankle-deep mud and chilly dampness is all too real.

The cavalrymen from Fort Myer and the doughboys from Arlington Cantonment, sleeping in pup tents on wet ground and eating from mess-kits aren't grousing too much, however. There's a silver lining to those dark clouds over Fort Meade the past two days—tanks dislike mud worse than the foot-soldiers do.

The mock war will get under way sometime between 7 p. m. today and dawn tomorrow and the horses, mules and shank's mare of the defending Blue Army may be able to outfight the mechanized attackers in the muck, and the swollen fords of the Little Patuxent.

Similar to Poland

The situation presented in the week's maneuvers here is strangely similar to the line-up in Poland. There a highly mechanized German war machine ran over a Polish army principally composed of cavalry and infantry, and not equipped with up-to-date antitank weapons. Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray's unmechanized forces haven't the latest antitank guns either, but then the weather man is on their side and he wasn't a Polish ally.

Black Army soldiers, however, have one advantage over their opponents during the rain and cold spell. Most of them were permanently quartered at Fort Meade, and were able to return to their comfortable, warm barracks and eat in their own mess halls in the preliminary phases of the field exercises.

Lieut. Col. Gilbert S. Brownell of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, will command the Black Army, it was announced today, in place of Col. Charles B. Elliott, who is ill.

Social Pressure Urged to Curb Dictatorships on Playgrounds

The problem of curbing dictators—not confined to the international scene—cropped up at the Institute of District Playground Workers yesterday as they pondered: "What to do about bullies?"

Empires may be baffled about how to dispose of the question on an international scale, but a ready answer for playground purposes was forthcoming from Edward D. Reed, principal of Chamberlain Vocational School, speaker at the institute at Force School.

"Social pressure!" was his formula. "The playground leader should set the standards of the group in such a way that the children themselves will enforce the standards."

"But what about Mickey, who bullies his way about the playground?" asked a voice from the back of the room where more than 100 playground workers were gathered.

"Social pressure!" Reed repeated. "If the group disapproves of the way he acts, they'll put him in his place," he added, after indicating that the playground worker must be tactful enough to get this group spirit functioning.

Speaking on "Adolescent Problems," Reed pointed out that girls have more emotional problems than boys, and suggested that the playground workers could help girls to understand how to dissolve emotional conflicts by substituting other emotions.

The two weeks' institute, sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies and the District Recreation Commission, will continue through Friday, to prime playground and community center workers for this fall.

While the white workers are meeting at Force School, colored workers are holding sessions at Temple Church, Eleventh and S streets northwest.

The latter group yesterday was addressed by Fred Watts, instructor in psychology at Howard University, who said adolescents should be provided recreational activities to develop better personality characteristics such as cooperation, leadership and service to others.

Court Is Asked To Rule 'Corn' and Bourbon the Same

The District Court is neck deep in mash again. The Maryland Distillers Products Corporation yesterday asked it to instruct the Treasury Department that "corn likker" and bourbon whisky are the same thing.

The distillery produced 2,600 barrels of whisky under its bourbon formula and bottled it as "corn" for its Southern trade. But the Federal Alcoholic Administration ruled that "if the barrels were marked 'bourbon,' the bottles are 'bourbon,' too.

The suit asked the court to enjoin the FAA from interfering with his client's project.

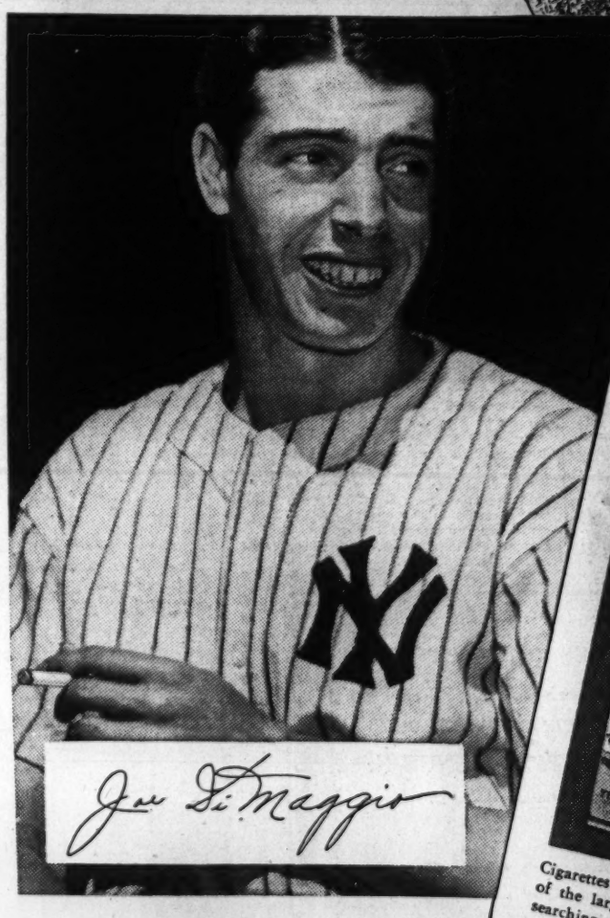
FRIENDLY ENEMIES

It's batting power vs. pitching skill when Joe DiMaggio and "Bucky" Walters meet face to face in the World Series. But they agree on smoking—they're both Camel fans!



LEADING BOTH LEAGUES in hitting—the great Joe DiMaggio. Can "Bucky" Walters stop him? Joe's a tough customer any time . . . an old hand at this World Series business . . . been in three World Series . . . batting for an average of .301. And Joe's a stone wall on the defense. Whether Joe or "Bucky" comes out on top, a Camel fan wins either way. "I'm often asked about my favorite cigarette brand," Joe says. "Well, it's Camels. Camels are long-burning. They give me the economy of extra smoking per pack—a real saving if you're a steady smoker like I am—and they're milder, cooler, with a hearty flavor. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!' "

Whatever price you pay per pack, it's important to remember this fact: By burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels give a smoking plus equal to

5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK

Cigarettes were compared recently...sixteen of the largest-selling brands...under the searching tests of impartial laboratory scientists. Findings were announced as follows:

1 CAMELS were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

"BUCKY" WALTERS... No. 1 pitcher of the National League... a hitter likely at any time to win his own ball game in the batter's box... It will be one of the big moments in the history of baseball when Walters and the Cincinnati Reds meet Joe DiMaggio and his New York Yankee team-mates. "Bucky" calls himself a "dyed-in-the-wool Camel fan." He says: "I've never found any other brand—at any price—that gives me anything like the down-right smoking enjoyment that I get from Camels. Boy, do they taste good after a long, hard game! Camels burn longer, and that means a nice bonus of extra smokes in every pack."

Citizens Hear Roberts Ask For D. C. Vote

Ex-People's Counsel Backs Simplified Government in Talk To Columbia Heights

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association opened its season with a discussion of reorganization of the District Government, following a talk by William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel, who advocated a single administrative officer and legislative counsel to replace the present system by which "the District government has too many heads."

Regretting that President Roosevelt had "done so little for the District," Roberts asked, "Why doesn't he give us representative government instead of giving us back to the people who have been giving us the wrong kind of government."

Indorses Seal's Proposal

The association adopted resolutions indorsing Corporation Counsel Seal's proposal to publish the names of persons who get traffic tickets "adjusted," and requesting the District Commissioners to put an end to all "ticket-fixing;" and approved the bill for registering professional engineers that passed the Senate in the last session, with the exception of the clauses giving the board power to classify engineers, and requiring engineers to have no financial interest in enterprises on which they are employed.

The streets and alleys committee was directed to consult with the Health Officer, the trash collector and the Thirteenth Precinct on means of keeping the streets cleaner. Mrs. Ernest Howard made the first report for the special committee on rising food prices.

N. Cleveland Park

Advocating "District jobs for District residents," the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night urged appointment of William J. Neale, one of its members, to the vacancy left on the District Court by death of Justice Cox.

Other resolutions asked that a traffic signal be placed at Connecticut avenue and Van Ness street northwest and that additional policemen be added to the Eighth Precinct.

J. B. Dickman, jr., was elected president, Wilbur A. Gallahan, vice president, and J. W. Howes, treasurer. Election of a secretary and delegates to the federation of citizens associations will take place at the next meeting.

Southeast Council

The Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, on a motion from the Congress Heights group, voted to send a letter to the President asking him to instruct the Attorney General and the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate the recent rise in food prices and to use every law available to curb profiteering.

The council also went on record in favor of discontinuing assessment of property owners for widening or repaving streets, and to cut the present rate of assessment for new streets in half, and to make up the loss of revenue from the gasoline fund. The motion was made by the Southeast Washington association.

Orin Davy, of the Southeast group, was elected president, and E. J. Read, of Congress Heights, vice president. Other officers elected were W. J. Smith, of Summit Park, secretary; Ural Fisher, Summit Park, assistant secretary, and Charles A. Baker, Randle Highlands, treasurer.

Georgetown Council

To push solutions of problems in health, recreation and welfare, new committee chairmen were announced at the meeting of the Georgetown Neighborhood Council yesterday afternoon, and they immediately prepared to organize their groups of coworkers.

Miss Fern Chapman was named health chairman; Dr. Andrew Kress, recreation; Miss Frances Bird, welfare. Dr. Kress will hold the first meeting of his committee this afternoon at Georgetown Boys Club.

James Ring, chairman of the central co-ordinating committee, spoke on "Principles of Neighborhood Co-ordination." Mrs. John Ihlder, chairman of the council, presided at the meeting, which was held at Georgetown Children's House.

Gang Suspect Trapped by Victim's Ruse

A victim's ruse yesterday trapped a suspected member of a kidnap-holdup gang, and within a few hours police here had rounded up four other alleged members.

Monday night William Scheer, 30, of 1201 West Virginia avenue northeast, a Navy Yard worker, stopped for a red signal at Third and I street southeast, Two gunmen forced their way into his car, ordered him to drive around, and later left with Scheer's wallet and suit jacket. Scheer was the fourth such victim within the past week.

Scheer was en route to the Fifth Precinct Police Station yesterday to help detectives with a detailed description of his assailants when at Massachusetts avenue and Third street northeast he sighted one of the gunmen crossing the street.

Stopping short, Scheer rushed out and acting as if he had a gun in his jacket pocket, ordered the suspect into a store and called police.

U. S. Holds Carolinian On Extortion Charge

The Justice Department announced yesterday that Mitchell P. Farris, 24, of Farmville, N. C., was being held in the Farmville jail awaiting a hearing before the U. S. commissioner at Wilmington, N. C., on a charge of violating the Federal extortion act.

European War Most Absorbing Subject, D. C. Libraries Find

By Christine Sadler

The most absorbing reading subject in Washington today is the current European war, with ramifications leading up to the World War coming second, and possible war effects upon the United States running a close third.

A city that digs into a subject once the interest is aroused, the National Capital is going in for details that include maps of the Maginot Line, location of United States Army camps in 1917, and everything that anybody says on how to analyze propaganda.

This is shown specifically in records being kept at the Public Library and its 11 branches, and is reflected generally in books being clamored for at Washington's numerous circulating libraries.

"Escape" Trend Starts

Already, however, an "escape" trend seems started and some library users are beginning to ask for "anything except something about the war." In circulating libraries, the escapists are said to be preponderantly older women.

With 604,754 Public Library volumes to draw from, 5,000,000 volumes in the Library of Congress accessible to researchers, and circulating libraries on every corner, Washingtonians rarely have to wait very long for books in which they are interested.

It's the Public Library that carries the brunt of responsibility, though, and since 1904 Dr. George F. Bowerman, the librarian, has made his annual fight to get more library money. Even Congressmen have been known to say the city should be satisfied with the Library of Congress, which, of course, is not a local institution any more than the Supreme Court is.

The Libraray of Congress is open to Washingtonians for research or for reading on the premises on just the same basis it is open to Oklahomans, and it's great to have it so near. Its informational service answers questions for local citizens every day—anything within reason, unless the Congressional business is rushing.

Borrowers listed with the Public Library total 143,595, of whom 100,501 are adults. Circulation last year totaled 3,237,890, with children accounting for 1,456,122 checkings in and out, showing that Washington children use the library more frequently than adults. At least, their turnover of books is proportionately greater.

Consistently pulling more readers han any others in the library, on a month in and month out basis, are the books which deal with the problems of job getting. Anything dealing with personality problems in general and how to train for a certain profession in particular is a best circulator.

Hobbies Aided

Through its distinctive services of personal aid, the Public Library constantly gives advice on hobbies, makes out reading lists on a given subject, and shows users how to go about learning what they wish to know.

While the library does not frown on fiction reading, Dr. Bowerman and his professional staff of 186 assistants never fail to stress that to fulfil its mission a library must be more than a fiction lender—and they have made the Washington system much more than that.

The music service which the library offers is so popular Washingtonians sign up for as far as two months in advance to go down and have an hour of Beethoven played to them from records. Circulating music includes 24,240 pieces of sheet. A retired businessman recently came in and said he had put aside $300 with which to further his musical education. The library advised him how best he could spend his money—and taught him about many things he could get free.

Art Circulates

More than a quarter million prints and photographs of "old and modern art masters" circulate from the main library at Eighth and K streets northwest. Clippings on almost every subject in which study groups and individuals would be interested circulate, too. Through its "basket service" the library works intimately with the school system of the District, serving public, parochial, and private institutions. In its Washingtoniana division it keeps an up-to-the-minute record of the Capital city and has a complete and much-used local historical service.

Teachers and their entire classes visit the library with increasing frequency. Required library reading begins at a very early school age in these days and children surprisingly young are constant library users.

Reading habits of Washington youth show an alertness of intellect and unwillingness to be "taken in" and a wide range of interests. Aviation is the favorite reading subject with boys, with radio just behind. Both boys and girls like books centered around a particular profession and both "hold their noses" at the Alger type of hero who always ends up married to the rich boss' daughter.

"Little Women" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" are as popular as they ever were, but Washington's girls will have none of the heroine who broke into tears on every other page—such as "Elsie."

Nature books are high on the juvenile list of favorites, and the demand for star books can never be supplied. All new books on science are absorbed quickly, and adults themselves are beginning to be science minded.

Circulating libraries in the suburbs show a leaning toward fiction, but those downtown show fiction and non-fiction running neck and neck. Mysteries and non-fiction usually circulate together, some of circulating groups have found, with the persons who take them out "shunning the usual fiction altogether."

Tomorrow—New Hampshire Heights, a new suburb.

Truckers End Social Security, Census Tie-ups

Construction Resumed As Result of Contract With Building Firm

Work has been resumed on construction of the Social Security Board and Census buildings as the result of a contract negotiated between the truck driver's union and McCloskey & Co., contractors, union officials said yesterday.

The projects were tied up by a jurisdictional conflict between the truck drivers union and the union of operative enginrs, both A. F. L.

Charls Bell, teamster's union business agent, claimed yesterday that four other companies, dealing in premixed concrete, are negotiating with the truck driver's union for contracts to replace those they now have with the engineer's union.

He said the truck driver's union, Local 639 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, will accept drivers now members of the engineers' union.

The jurisdictional conflict led to continuation of strikes after the struggle between the drivers and District builders was submited to arbitration last week. The arbiters' decision is expected today or Thursday.

A meeting here (on October 23) between Dan Tobin, president of the International Teamsters Union and John Possehl, head of the Engineer's International Union, is expected to discuss jurisdiction over 15 types of equipment.

A second jurisdictional conflict involving the teamsters' union was submitted to District Court Justice Goldsborough yesterday for decision.

The court battle arose out of the fight by the brewery workers union to block an order of the American Federation of Labor giving jurisdiction over beer truck drivers to the teamsters' union.

William Chilton Rites Tomorrow At Forest Glen

William Chilton, 81, connected with the Coast and Geodetic Survey for 51 years, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a brief illness. Services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. John's Church, Forest Glen, Md.

Born in Washington in 1856, he retired from service in 1926. A charter member of the Arts Club, he was a recognized authority on the geneology of Washington and Maryland families. He was a graduate of Gonzaga College.

Surviving are two sisters, Miss Bertha Chilton, of Washington, and Mother Alberta Chilton, of a sacred order in New York State; two brothers, Carroll B. Chilton, of New York City, and Robert Chilton, of San Francisco.

Boys Beat Adults

Good news for Washington's harried traffic officials—indications that the next generation of District drivers will be more regulation-conscious than present motorists—came yesterday from the Abbot Vocational School.

Out of 68 'teen-age boys who took examinations in District traffic regulations for their learner's permits only eight failed to pass, M. B. Huffman, traffic instructor, announced. This is a 20 per cent improvement over the average

500 Methodists To Dissolve Conference

Baltimore Group Of M. E. Church South Gathers at Roanoke

By the Associated Press

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 3.—The 500 Methodist laymen and ministers, gathered here to dissolve the Baltimore annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South disposed of a mass of routine business this afternoon, preparing for the memorial and ordination service tonight and for the consideration of resolutions dissolving the conference and sending its ministers to new conferences at the final meeting Tuesday morning.

Earlier today, Dr. Frank S. Hickman, member of the faculty of the Duke University Divinity School, predicted a crumbling of the old social order, "the defeat of a civilization that we thought would stand forever," if the present armed conflict of nations continues long. The only hope, he held, was that some men, with the faith of an Isaiah, could retain a vision of the eternal and everlasting God, unchanging despite the crash of worlds.

The conference today elected deacons and elders and advanced a number of ministers on trial, as well as retiring six pastors from active service and placing them on the superannuated list.

Those superannuated were: The Rev. Frank A. Tyler, Easton, Md.; the Rev. S. J. L. Dulaney, Trappe, Md.; the Rev. James M. York, Queene Anne, Md.; Dr. William H. Best, Baltimore, presiding elder of the Baltimore district; the Rev. D. M. Brown, pastor of Grace Street Church, Roanoke, and the Rev. Wallace O. Talbert, Winchester.

Elected to deacons and advanced to the class of the third order were: Quade Roy Arbogast, Alleghany, Lewisburg district; Gilliam Claude Bently, Fincastle, Roanoke district; E. A. Swann, Remington, Washington district. Elected to the class of the third year was Esdras S. Gruver, of the Washington district.

Accepted into the conference on trial were: Morefield district—Kenneth Moore Plummer, Meredith Nathaniel Dehaven, Charles William Ambrose, jr., Virgil Russel Gillum; Roanoke district, Claude Roy Collins, Christiansburg; Washington district, Charles Samuel Jarvis; Winchester district, William Emory Cooley.

Cab Driver Found Dead in Parked Car

Paul K. Jones, 29, cab driver, was found dead early yesterday in a cab parked on a lot at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue with a rubber hose connecting the exhaust to a slightly opened window. All the other windows were sealed. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Jones lived at 1212 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Friends said he had been in ill health.

Dr. Marvin Holding Up Governmental Study For Formal Request

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday said he saw no necessity for an additional independent study of the District government, preparatory to reorganization, as he called an informal conference with the District Commissioners for the latter part of the week.

Upon learning that Commissioner George E. Allen had asked Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, to enlist his staff of instructors in a new study, Senator King said:

"It seems to me that we have ample data on the subject in the several investigations that have been made. Of course, if the Commissioners feel that they need additional information, they have a right to it."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Dr. Marvin has not yet started the inquiry proposed by Allen but is awaiting a formal request from the full board of Commissioners.

Senator King said he has given the problem of District reorganization considerable thought during the Congressional recess and is ready to make definite recommendations to the Commissioners. He said he did not wish to disclose his plans before discussing it with city heads.

He pointed out that studies by the Senate District Committee, the House District Committee, the Brookings Institution, and E. O. Griffenhagen and associates have covered every aspect of fact-finding. All that is needed, he said, is an agreement with District officials on reforms.

District officials have been working on a report for the Kennedy sub-committee of the House District Committee since adjournment of the first session of Congress. This report will contain a criticism of the Kennedy-Griffenhagen plan and a proposal to be sponsored by the Commissioners.

Baltimore Parents Seek Son, 16, Believed Here

DOYLE

According to the boy's mother, Mrs. Thomas Doyle, the youth had left the morning of September 16 for classes at Baltimore City College and never returned. Jack, she said, has been seen in Washington and she believes that he may be working here. Mrs. Doyle asked persons seeing the boy communicate with her in Baltimore or with police here.

Rising Toll Brings Drive On Autoists

Speeders Face Curb; Permit Suspension Urged for Both Parties in Accidents

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, aroused by a sharp uptrend in automobile casualties, proposed yesterday that all motorists involved in accidents be deprived of their driving privileges pending a thorough investigation by the police.

Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, yesterday announced plans for a concerted enforcement drive, directed principally at speeders.

If adopted, the suspension rule would apply "on the spot," Van Duzer declared, and neither driver in an accident would be permitted to operate his car from the scene. The police inquiry, he said, would include not only cause of the accident itself, but the past record of drivers involved.

"We are rapidly losing ground in our fight to curb accidents," said Van Duzer, "and it appears we must resort to drastic steps if we are to keep within or lower our last year's record. The public must learn to take this problem seriously—or take the consequences."

By the permit suspension method, said the traffic chief, authorities would be able to weed out drivers with bad accident records and bar them indefinitely from the streets. Should Washington adopt his system, it would be the first major city to resort to such stringent accident-prevention measures.

Four persons have met death within the past four days. Careless driving, according to police, accounted for at least two of the killings. Police precinct commanders yesterday were ordered to intensify efforts to curb excessive speeds, and instructions were issued calling for rigid enforcement of motorist-pedestrian right-of-way rules.

John J. Niehenke, 50, of Takoma Park, was held for Police Court action yesterday under the negligent homicide act in connection with the death of Herbert D. Owen, 81-year-old pedestrian, killed Sunday.

U. S. Courtesy Urged

The United States Government with a fleet of 190,000 vehicles, should take the lead in highway safety and set a national example in motoring manners, delegates to the second annual meeting of the Federal Interdepartmental Safety Council were told yesterday.

Charles G. Morgan, jr., manager, division of operations, American Trucking Association, said a methodical and systematic program is necessary if fleet safety is to be preserved and accidents prevented. He said Uncle Sam should show the way.

H. H. Kelly, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, chairman of the council's committee on automotive and highway safety, said the Government operates 67 fleets, including 18,000 passenger cars, 370 buses and 163,000 trucks.

D'Artagnan Rides Again In New Dumas 'Shocker'

'Man in Iron Mask' Both Chills and Thrills; The Belasco to Reopen as Picture House; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE WHO ENJOY shudders mixed with their thrills will find a double-barreled appeal in "The Man in the Iron Mask" when that United Artists release reaches the screen at Loew's Palace Theater—probably this Friday—as the successor to "The Women." That close to the women in "The Women" any mere man, one supposes, would have to be in an iron mask to be even moderately safe.

BELL

However that may be, the Edward Small picturization of the Alexandre Dumas swashbuckling tale of seventeenth century France, adapted to the screen by George Bruce and directed by James Whale did contrive to give the drama desks a mild attack of gooseflesh along with the tingling up and down their spines at yesterday afternoon's preview screening.

You know the Dumas penchant for this sort of thing from "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Three Musketeers," if from nothing else. Action is the keynote of all his romantic fictions and it is action that translates itself perfectly into terms of the cinema. In "The Man in the Iron Mask" you will meet again the most valorous quartet of swordsmen that ever lived, even in Dumas' imagination, in D'Artagnan, Porthos, Aramis and Athos, your old friends the Musketeers. This time they are engaged in the commendable pastime of doing right by the twin sons of Louis XIII, one of whom ascends the throne while the other is spirited away to D'Artagnan's home in Gascony and reared in ignorance of his true identity.

Louis XIV turns out to be a very elegant no-good, while Philippe matures into a valuable and useful citizen. When the two come together in the royal palace, it is all a little confusing to the Princess Maria Theresa, just over from Spain to become Queen of France, but that is getting away from the fact that "The Man in the Iron Mask" is more than a little on the "horror" side. The torture scenes in the Bastile dungeons are almost as much that to the spectator as to the innocent victims of the thumbscrews and other exquisite gadgets designed by a sadistic monarch, and that iron mask they rivet onto Philippe's head is no thing of beauty, either—until it is transferred to Louis. Then it doesn't seem quite so bad. But it seems bad enough.

There is a huge cast in the picture, led by Louis Hayward, who does a surprisingly able dual impersonation of both twins, and Joan Bennett, in the role of Maria Theresa. Warren William plays D'Artagnan, with Alan Hale, Miles Mander and Bert Roach as his three sword-swinging cronies. It is a little astonishing to find Mr. Roach, the rotound comic, in this sort of thing, but his presence may prove to be just another of the film's numerous sources of wonder.

As already has been implied, in the matter of direction "The Man in the Iron Mask" is a Whale of a picture.

Yesterday's brief visitors to the steam-heated luxury of the drama department were Theron Bamberger, doing a little avant courtiering for the new Clare Boothe play, comihg to the National for the week of October 16, and Dick Maney, who stopped by again just to make sure we had not lost everything he left us last week pertaining to the local engagement of Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale, opening next Monday night in "Ladies and Gentlemen." Mr. Bamberger's hot tip was that Otto L. Preminger, who is directing Miss Boothe's "Margin for Error," will himself play an important role in the piece—that of a German consul in an American city. This will be Mr. Preminger's first appearance in this country as an actor, although that is the way he began on the other side. He will be remembered as the director of John Barrymore's "My Dear Children" and the revival of "Outward Bound," here last January for the President's birthday "command performance" and returning for a full week later this season. Mr. Preminger's decision to act in "Margin for Error" came after a week's steady urging by the author, who insisted that he was "just the type."

So the Belasco Theater is to reopen on Friday of this week, October 6, at 11 a. m., under a motion picture policy. The first attraction will be "The Unashamed," filmed in an authentic nudist colony, to be shown here for the first time. Performances will be continuous daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., with a midnight performance each Saturday night, all at popular prices.

The Belasco, this time out, in under lease to Cine-Grand Films, of which Alfred T. Mannon is executive head in Washington. The house will be under the management of L. Stoddard Taylor, whose name has been associated with the Lafayete square theater for more than three decades. Gene DuBarry will be in charge of publicity.

The Children's Theater of New York will inaugurate its season's series of six Saturday morning performances in the National Theater on October 28, with "Dick Whittington and His Cat." This will be the eighth season of the Children's Theater in the Capital. Seats are now on sale at the Washington office of the organization, 1734 F street northwest.

Paul Vincent Carrol's "Shadow and Substance," which scored a tremendous hit in this city before going into New York to become one of the outstanding successes of its season, will be given a public reading in Blackfriars Guild Hall, Fifteenth and V streets, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The Blackfriars will present "Shadow and Substance" as one of their scheduled plays for this season and the opportunity is now given those interested in trying out for a place in the cast to acquaint themselves with the play—one, by the way, that presents no simple task, as those who remember Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Julie Haydon in the leading roles will attest. Casting will be decided upon shortly after the reading.

Hollywood will be represented by its own "suicide squad" when the Variety Club stages its "Cavalcade of Thrills" at Griffith Stadium on Friday and Saturday, October 13 and 14. Heading the thrill unit from the cinema city will be Miss Ula Holt, double for Dorothy Lamour, Madeleine Carroll, Binnie Barnes, Gail Patrick and many other feminine stars when the going gets too rough for them. Ula is a specialist in danger—and likes it! Equally at home on land and water, her repertoire of hair-raising stunts would take your breath away—and probably will.

What's-in-a-Name Note

Probably they pronounce Bali "Bally" in "Honeymoon in Bali" so the publicity boys can hook it up with "hoo." Or maybe I'm wrong.

The Boys Spend a Quiet Evening at Home

A BIT OF ACTION FROM DUMAS ROMANCE

The King's Guards visit the home of D'Artagnan, in Gascony, to take in the Three Musketeers and Philippe, the hidden twin brother of Louis XIV, and are given an exceedingly pointed reception. The scene is from "The Man in the Iron Mask," coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday, with Louis Hayward and Joan Bennett costarred.

The New Yorker

New York, Oct. 3.

"... and if you hadn't listened to me, we might have been stranded in Europe now ... What? ... You'd want to be in Europe now? ... Well, just remember—there's no table-hopping in the Maginot Line. You stick to the fights on Broadway."

12 P. M.: "My madcap days are over and I've settled down," George Roosevelt confides at the Stork. "But I just couldn't resist it today. I bought a jew's-harp, discovered I couldn't play it—so mailed it, via the Clipper, to Adolph Hitler" ... "The Princess Pudukota," one of her friends states at the Barberry Room, "denounced three men at the Newsreel Theater yesterday because they applauded for Hitler" ... "A rich Kansan managed to get into Sinclair Lewis' hotel room," a producer relates at the Tavern, "said he'd like Lewis to autograph some books—and then sent his wife downstairs to buy them. After a half-hour Lewis wanted to work, so he asked the Kansan to leave, just as the stranger's wife returned with four copies of 'Babbitt.' 'Mr. Lewis,' was the man's parting angry shout, as he hurled the 'Babbitts' away, 'I'm rich—I can buy you and sell you.'"

1 A. M.: "Natalie Wynn, of Lew Brown's show, will become one of the wealthiest women in show business," a director assures at Colbert's. "She's just inherited a gold mine" ... "I've signed Stepin Fetchit and Louis Armstrong," Herman Stark announces at the Cotton Club, "to star in my new show here" ... "Elaine Bassett, who posed for Canada's 'War Nurse' poster, didn't keep the money she got for posing," an agent reports at Leone's. "She contributed it to U. S. peace organizations" ... "That's the cutest pair of kids I've ever seen," a patron beams at Moore's, pointing to Jockey Sammy Renick and Dixie Dunbar. "I'm not a kid," Renick roars at him, "and I'm with the cutest filly around here" ... "The A. F. V. A.," a union official informs at Ruby Foo's, "has given Harry Richman exactly two weeks to join their organization."

2 A. M.: "I still can't find a leading lady for my movie, 'Heart of Darkness,'" Orson Welles laments at Sherman's. "Joseph Conrad didn't know it, but when he wrote the book, he had Hedy Lamarr in mind—and I can't sign Hedy" ... "Tommy Manville's gone berserk again, up at his estate," a visitor reports at the Paradise. "He fired all his servants again" ... "Life magazine," a reporter declares at the Intl. Casino, "is preparing a new layout—on War fashions, for women" ... "I just met Jerome Kern, and confessed that I hate music," Hiram Sherman states at Sardi's. "So Kern answered: 'I'm getting that way myself' ... "Collier's has Winston Churchill under contract," a writer informs at Tony's, "but Churchill has had to cancel it, because now he's a Cabinet Minister."

3 A. M.: "Alexander Woollcott had a strange feeling," a ringster reports at Ciro's "when he saw the new Kaufman & Hart show, with Monte Woolley playing the role which had been written for Woollcott. 'Monte does a great job,' Alec said, 'but it's just like seeing "Hamlet" —without Hamlet'" ... "Hal Roach put up all the money required for the movie version of Steinbeck's 'Of Mice and Men,'" a film executive declares at Leon & Eddie's. "The picture cost exactly $240,000" ... "The titled Britishers feel that it's smart for a tall woman to remove her shoes, before dancing with a short man," a Londoner reveals at La Conga. "That fad was started by Georgie Price at a party attended by the then Prince of Wales. Price convinced a tall lady to remove her shoes—and told her it was an American custom."

4 A. M.: "Tony Galento will become a night club master of ceremonies," Joe Jacobs informs at the 18 Club. "I've booked him for a two weeks' engagement at the French Casino on the Coast" ... "Look at this, from Jack Benny," a band leader exhibits at the Versailles "He says he's adopting another baby" ... "Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., has rejected all offers to repeat his one radio broadcast," a radio executive assures at the Kit Kat. "He's been offered a high price, but his wife says he doesn't need it" ... At Jimmy Kelly's, Prince Omar tells the past and future for the customers who prefer the occult. "Yes, Omar is very good, and I think he'll be here for at least three years," Kelly informs. "He's great at telling things ahead—except in pinochle. He owes me $2,000 already."

5 A. M.: "Write all you want to about my staying up late now," Harry Danning, the Giants' catcher, approves at Reuben's. "It's okay now—the ball season's over" ... Bert Wheeler spies an apple on the table at Longchamps, bites into it—as he does onstage—and states: "All I need is two introductions, a forte—and I'm on" ... "Look at this letter I just received from Ireland," a corner-sitter offers at Lindy's. "Although Ireland's supposed to be neutral, this letter's been censored."

6 A. M.: "I was playing chemin-de-fer at the casino in Cannes last month," Edward Duryea Dowling, the producer, confesses at Dave's Blue Room, "and one dusky player kept yelling 'Banco' and winning my dough. I became stubborn and said: "That Filipino isn't going to trim me for long. I'll shoot the works quick until either I go broke or he goes broke' ... The dusky man bowed and said: 'I am not a Filipino,' and one of the Casino attendants whispered to me: 'It will be difficult to break him. He's the Nizim of Hyderbad, one of the world's richest men.'"

Film Moguls Are Harassed By Problems

Motion Picture Industry Works in Face of Many Accumulated Difficulties

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Oct. 3.—With wars to the left, labor troubles to the right, the Government's antitrust action above, and embattled exhibitors below, the movie producing business is on the spot. Yet it continues to turn out big-time pictures on schedule and some of them were real sockdolagers.

Previewed last week were "Elizabeth and Essex" and "Intermezzo," two smash hits. Coming up this week are "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Hollywood Cavalcade," both in the multimillion-dollar class. To be released hereafter in rapid succession are "Eternally Yours," "Victor Herbert," "Balalaika," "Gone With the Wind" and many another film of similar caliber.

All the studios in town, nonetheless, are trying to economize by discharging hundreds of hired hands, while the exhibitors are beginning to worry about what kind of kitchen stoves and living room suites they'd better give with every ticket this season.

Resort to Give-Aways

The Fox West Coast theaters, comprising one of the biggest groups of movie houses, are planning to give away a fleet of eight-cylinder automobiles to lucky ticket holders Such give-aways are liable to reach a new high in absurdity the country over this winter.

Numerous independent theater operators in the East, meantime, are planning upon a revival of vaudeville to bolster their seat sales, while exhibitors everywhere are trying to inject cancellation clauses in their contracts whereby they may reject up to 20 per cent of any studio's output.

If that isn't trouble enough for the movie makers, the technicians last week obtained a flat 10 per cent raise in salaries, retroactive to last August, while the press agents got a flat minimum salary of $100 per week for experienced men.

Union painters are demanding another 15 per cent tilt in their wages, while the Screen Actors Guild has decided to sneer at any suggestions for pay cuts for its membership.

Government Takes Hand

These numerous headaches for the producers bring us to Attorney General Frank Murphy's projects in connection with the movie business. The Department of Justice is working now on antitrust proceedings against the major producers, while the income tax division is peering into the bookkeeping of numerous movie big wigs.

Complete reorganization of picture distribution, stiff fines and possibly prison sentences are in the offing, if the Government presses all its actions against the movie makers successfully.

Last, but far from least, is the European war, which has ruined the movie business in the countries involved. Many a Hollywood concern owns strings of theaters in England, France and elsewhere. If the theaters aren't closed altogether it's impossible to get new pictures across the Atlantic. And if some theaters are open and have movies to show their customers, the Hollywood manufacturers can't get their money back to the United States.

Working Harder Than Ever

The wonder of all this to us is that the studios are open at all. No business ever had so many troubles, no group of executives so many serious pains in the neck.

If we were head man and had plenty of cash in our sock, we'd close up the whole town and go fishing. But the movie makers keep banging away at the job and working harder than ever before. All we can say is that they're gluttons for punishment. At this very minute they have 52 motion pictures in production, almost a record number.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 3 (INS).—George Brent is a very sick boy—so sick that his doctors will not move him from his Coldwater Canyon home to the hospital. George took cold while he was working in "The Rains Came," but thought nothing of it until he gradually grew worse. He now has a very bad streptococci throat and threatened pneumonia with a dangerously high temperature.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Unless George improves greatly, he will be unable to report to Warners for "The Fighting 69th." Up to tonight scenes were being shot around him and grave fears were expressed he would not be able to play his role of Wild Bill Donovan. Too bad, because Donovan personally chose him and Hal Wallis has felt he was so right for the part in this story of Father Duffy's famous regiment.

"Ninotchka" and the war will have a definite influence on Greta Garbo's screen future. In Europe they like their Swedish favorite somber, tragic and emotional. America is expected to prefer her gay, happy and smiling and so Melchior Lengyel, who authored "Ninotchka," has been commissioned to write another comedy for the Garbo. As we said, with the foreign market what it is, "Madame Curie" will not be made for some little time. The loss of the European trade affects Garbo more than other stars, for her pictures have always done a tremendous business abroad.

Technicolor does a lot for Alice Faye in "Hollywood Cavalcade." It brings out the blue of her eyes and the yellow of her hair and makes her a raving beauty. I never put Alice in that class until I saw her in "Cavalcade." She will have her work cut out for her, however, in playing "Lillian Russell," since so many people remember the gorgeous charmer of the gay nineties. Don Ameche will probably play Alexander Moore, newspaper publisher, one-time Ambassador to Spain and the actress' third husband. When I met Lillian Russell she was 64 and was writing beauty hints, and even at that age she was lovely. Such characters as Diamond Jim Brady, Tony Pastor, Gilbert and Sullivan, Weber and Fields and others of the period will be introduced and this movie ought to be to the musical comedy stage what "Hollywood Cavalcade" is to the silent movies.

When Jeanette MacDonald was on her concert tour, she introduced "Let Me Always Sing," written especially for her by Gene Raymond. So well did it go over, she had to respond to encore after encore. Now Gustave Schirmer is bringing it out and it's the first of the songs Gene has been working on while he has been off the screen studying and really devoting his time to music. That doesn't mean he is not coming back to pictures. He has been waiting for the right vehicle and don't be surprised if his next movie appearance is made in a Frank Lloyd production. Frank has an idea for him and Gene has been willing to remain off the screen waiting for just such an opportunity.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jinx Falkenberg is very sick at the Cedars of Lebanon and Bob Taplinger has scarcely left her bedside; the cutest couple at the Victor Hugo were Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul, holding hands between dances, and unless both of them change greatly, I look to see these two marry when Deanna is of age; Gail Patrick is in Santa Monica Hospital with an infected ear; the Ranee of Sarawak arrives Thursday to confer with Warners on "The White Rajah," a 1940 Earl Flynn number; the Helen Parrish-Forest Tucket dates continue. He is described as a movie-struck Virginian with money and social position; Joseph Pasternak and Peggy Moran, a Universal starlet, a La Conga twosome.

Tennis-minded flimites will gather at the La Maze tomorrow night to applaud Champion Alice Marble, who opens there as a singer. Marcel, who started this cafe, is back, and many of the stars who will attend the big "Hollywood cavalcade" premiere have made their reservations after the theater; Natalie Kalmus gets here Thursday from Europe, her first visit in many months; Andrea Leeds is busy preparing her trousseu for the big event, October 23; Vicki Baum doing a rumba with her son, and doing it mighty well; Mrs. Harry Ritz's father passed away in New York a few days after she reached his bedside. He was only 47; something to see May Robson and Eddie Horton playing badminton between scenes at RKO; Bob Montgomery is back in his old dressing room, which Fred Astaire used while Bob was in England.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif. Oct. 3.—For those who do nothing but criticize our movies, I think they should stop long enough to give them a pat because they're getting braver; now that they're actually producing "Grapes of Wrath" and "F. O. B. Detroit." Both go in mightily for that capital and labor situation, which is so acute. And up to date it's been taboo on the screen, because Hollywood was afraid of it. But after seeing the delicate way Dwight Taylor, who thus far has devoted his talents to writing frothy stuff, handled the situations in "When Tomorrow Comes" Paramount's taken him on to put the samc touch in "F. O. B. Detroit" which I hope will star Carole Lombard—I hope.

HOPPER

Walter Pidgeon's been on a vacation for three months, and when sent for to begin work in the Nick Carter series, studio discovered he had a sty on his eye. I wonder if you can bring those things on by wishing? He wishes to see the tennis tournament, as is his usual custom.

Pidge always had a desire to meet Katie Hepburn, so this summer while he was back in New York, after seeing her in "Philadelphia Story" went backstage. Made the above confession to her, adding: "Since you knew nothing about my desire, therefore did nothing about it. I thought I should. Here I am." That's why we call him Pidgeon.

Cecelia Parker tells me she and Dick are taking a belated honeymoon on wheels, station-wagoning from Hollywood to Park avenue. And will they have corns on their whoosis?

And now Lewis Stone has turned father in real life. He's building a study desk for son Mickey, in his own carpenter shop.

Wonder when the Eugenie Leontovitch divorce is due from Greg Ratoff? Also wonder what the outcome of Greg's private life will be? "Intermezzo" with Kay Aldrich . . . "a love story" mayhap?

Walter Brennan looks 25 for the first part of his character role in "A Call on the President." You won't recognize him. He didn't when the beauticians finished with him. He goes from 25 to 42, 54 and 62. A bit of emotional gamut-running. Sounds like an imitation of Bette Davis!

First time I ever heard of an actor turning down a chance to show himself off. It was George Raft, after Bill Holden had given him a black eye and he had to have three stitches put in it.

They say Bill's fist slipped, but methinks it was his subconscious. 'Cause George knocks him out in the film.

After miniature hurricane last week-end, Jene Markey's boat is up for sale. Lucky thing Hedy wasn't in distress at Catalina; no other woman would have been saved. Can you picture a sailor helping me if Hedy was near screaming: "Help, Help."

"In Hurricanes I get up at night
And dress by yellow candlelight.
And when it's hot, my directors say
I seem to go to sleep by day.

A communistic writer trying to work up a little sympathy for Italy showed a picture in Australia of the gala meeting between Mussolini and Hitler. Before it had run five minutes the audience was shouting for a Mickey Mouse.

Our little Annie "Oomph" girl showed good sense in Chicago. She was so nervous at her first appearance on big time she went over to the South side and gave her first show. Yes, they liked it.

Alfred Hitchcock watched a scene for "Rebecca," said: "Put that one in a pillbox. It's too bad for the ash can."

It took Roger Marchetti to make agents stop embarrassing their clients by attaching their salaries every time they rowed with them. He proved it to be illegal. So a new law has been passed. Hurrah for our side!

Hedy Lamarr Serves Notice On Employers

By Louella O. Parsons.

Hollywood, Oct. 3 (INS).—Hedy Lamarr, who answers the definition of glamour in a big way, in a surprise move today demanded cancellation of her Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract through her attorney, Barry Brennan. Hedy, who was getting $575 a week, which is a pittance compared with the huge salaries paid other top actresses, states in her complaint she has not been paid since July, 1938. Hence she is no longer in the employ of the M.-G.-M. organization.

When Hedy was brought here from Europe by Louis B. Mayer following her great success in "Ecstasy," she was loaned to Walter Wanger for "Algiers." Following the applause given her in that colorful drama she was immediately ticketed as the most promising new actress in some time.

Her original contract called for $750 weekly on a 40-week basis. That was later pro-rated so she was paid on a 52-week basis which amounted to $575. Now her attorney claims Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer abrogated their agreement when they failed to pay her according to terms of her contract. In a very long and legal telegram that complaint was forwarded to the film company with a formal declaration Lamarr is no longer with M.-G.-M. and therefore is in a position to accept any other film offer.

Production of Best-Sellers a Movie Gamble

Filming of the best-selling novel is supposed to be dangerous business. The danger lies in the gamble that script writers will be able to translate it successfully into the dramatic medium. And that, they explain, is the reason Hollywood today pays far less for best-selling novels than it does for hit plays.

But some of the biggest productions now in preparation are adaptations of popular novels.

There is Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With The Wind." David O. Selznick paid $40,000 for this one, and then its immense popularity frightened him into postponing production for two years.

Lloyd C. Douglas authorized Paramount's forthcoming "Disputed Passage," which features Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff and John Howard. And Paramount is breathing easy, for the picture is done and Douglas has given it his approval.

The same studio has also completed a picturization of Percival Wren's novel of the French Foreign Legion, "Beau Geste," with Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston starred.

Then there's Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed" at Paramount, with Ronald Colman under direction of William A. Wellman.

Twentieth Century-Fox has bought John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" for $75,000. And Fox cameras are now shooting Louis Broomfield's "The Rains Came" and Walter D. Edmonds' "Drums Along the Mohawk."

Bull-Frog in Bog Is Found in Fog

Production of Warner Bros.' "The Lady and the Knight," co-starring Errol Flynn and Bette Davis, was held up for over ten minutes while the entire company of 300 turned frog-catcher.

Over a recent week-end a bull-frog took over the foggy Irish bog set, which occupies the entire interior of stage 11. The noise of his croaking so interfered with sound recording that production had to be held up until the elusive amphibian could be located and removed.

Reds' Cockiness and Team Loyalty Match Yanks' Confidence

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Commodore Hotel, New York, Oct. 3.—(Editor's Note—Our conception of World Series reporting if the series followed the war trend and baseball news were suddenly censored.)

New York, Oct. 3.—The Yankees issued an ultimatum tonight to the Cincinnati Reds to show up for the series tomorrow or Fuehrer Joe McCarthy would declare the National League nonexistent. National League atrocities on the art of baseball must cease, Herr McCarthy declared.

POVICH

Cincinnati, Oct. 3.—Cincinnati is mobilizing for "any eventuality," Chief of Staff Bill McKechnie told the city tonight. He is holding the Reds in readiness for an advance on Yankee Stadium and awaiting the command of High Commissioner Landis to start firing.

THE FIRST GAME (YANKS, 4; REDS, 1)

New York, Oct. 4.—Yankee forces scored a smashing victory on the Eastern front today, the general staff asserted in its regular evening communique. With traditional bravery in action, the Yankee columns drove the Reds from fortified positions and in a pincer movement cut off Paul Derringer from his sources of supply, taking him captive.

Cincinnati, Oct. 4.—The Reds made contact with the enemy forces today and conducted several successful reconnoitering expeditions, the general staff announced in its regular communique. All attempts to counterattack by the enemy were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

THE SECOND GAME (YANKS, 10; REDS, 1)

New York, Oct. 5.—Yankee arms were rewarded with victory in another smashing offensive on the Eastern Front today, a general staff communique announced. Four Cincinnati pitchers were completely encircled and Yankee heavy artillery demolished Cincinnati strongholds. The attack delivered Pitcher Bucky Walters into our hands and Cincinnati forces retreated in disorder.

Cincinnati, Oct. 5.—The Reds continued to reconnoiter on the Eastern Front today, with scattered successes, it was stated in high offiial circles, today in the absence of the regular general staff communique. Heavy firing in the Yankee Stadium sector was reported with the Reds maintaining the outposts they established yesterday.

FRIDAY, AN OPEN DATE ON THE SERIES SCHEDULE

New York, Oct. 6.—Yankee columns penetrated deep into Cincinnati territory today in pursuance of Fuehrer McCarthy's blitzkrieg maneuvers, the regular morning communique announced. Meeting no organized resistance save for desultory civilian sniping, the Yankee forces advanced rapidly behind engineer divisions who hastily repaired bridges destroyed by the Reds in their retreat from the Eastern Front.

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—Cincinnati's advancing columns won a major victory today, the regular headquarters communique announced. Field Marshal McKechnie's forces dislodged the Yankees from Yankee Stadium and forced them to fall back beyond the Ohio River. The propaganda ministry declared that any peace move by Fuehrer McCarthy at this time would not be entertained and that Cincinnati would pursue the war until Yankeeism was crushed.

THE THIRD GAME (YANKS, 9; CINCINNATI, 3)

New York, Oct. 7.—The Yankees' general staff announced today that Cincinnati resistance had virtually ended and that the Reds were delivering themselves in large numbers to attacking Yankee forces. Yankee heavy artillery made a shambles of downtown Cincinnati and citizens were taking to deep shelters, recognizing finally the stupidity of the Reds' leaders.

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—The Reds made contact with the enemy again in scattered sectors and obtained valuable information about the enemy's movements in several reconnoitering expeditions, the Cincinnati general staff announced in its regular evening communique.

THE FOURTH GAME (YANKS, 5; REDS, 0).

New York, Oct. 8.—Cincinnati fell to the Yankee forces today, a brief general staff communique announced this evening. Remnants of the enemy forces defending National Leagueism laid down their arms and delivered the city. Cincinnati will be incorporated into Yankee Stadium.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—Yankee forces who had entered the suburbs of Cincinnati were driven far beyond the outskirts of the city by counter-attacks, the Cincinnati general staff announced in its regular evening bulletin. The Cincinnati radio station warned all citizens to disregard mysterious broadcasts announcing the city had fallen. Then it suddenly went off the air.

2-Hit Shutout By Starr Gives Texans Series

Nashville Beaten, 6-0, by Fort Worth In Dixie Classic

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 3.—"Iron Man" Ray Starr pitched Fort Worth to its eighth Dixie baseball title tonight, muzzling Nashville's Vols with a masterful, two-hit, 6-0, shutout in the seventh game of the Southland's baseball classic.

Ol' Ray set out to emulate Fred Marberry's one-hit stunt of last night, but the same villain who spoiled Marberry's chance at a hitless game bobbed up again tonight—Shortstop Woody Williams. He punched out a clean single and Centerfielder Charley Gilbert beat out a close infield hit in the ninth.

The Texas League champions worked three Nashville pitchers for 13 hits, and some weird fielding on the part of the Southern Association champions helped.

The Fort Worth triumph climaxed the amazing drive of a fourth place club that barely hung on in the first round of the Shaughnessy playoff, waded through Dallas in the titular series, and then outplayed Nashville.

World Series Fan Undaunted by 21 Hours of Waiting

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Sherwood Charles Bower, 27, of Allentown, Pa., intent on being the first World Series fan into the Yankee Stadium bleachers tomorrow, took his position at the ticket window at noon today, facing a 21-hour wait.

He trotted briskly back and forth to keep warm. He had no competition.

Bower, who made his initial visit to a big league park—to see the Reds and Phillies play a twin bill in Cinicinnati last July, said he had $3 and would be glad to part with $1.10 for a bleacher seat.

Giants Draft 'Daffy' Dean, Surprise All

Arm Is Believed 'Dead;' Silas Johnson Joins Phillies on Call

New York, Oct. 3.—Paul Dean, half of one of baseball's most famous brother acts, was obtained by the New York Giants tonight as the major league annual draft meeting got under way here.

Dean, who was sent to Columbus of the American Association this summer by the St. Louis Cardinals after failing to be of much help to them in their drive for a National League pennant was the eighth name called in the draft.

When Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Club, called out his name, there was much surprise for it is believed that Dean's arm is no longer of major league caliber.

Another veteran who was snapped up was Silas Johnson, who is now playing with Rochester of the International League in the Little World Series. He was obtained by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The first name called was that of Allen Strange, the shortstop on the Seattle Club, of the Pacific Coast League, who went to the St. Louis Browns under the draft arrangement that gave the last place American League club the first call on available talent.

Dick Lanahan, Washington sandlotter who pitched last year for Chattanooga, went to the Pittsburgh Pirates, and Tom Seats, a Sacramento pitcher, went to the Detroit Tigers.

Washington Gets Righthanded Hurler

New York, Oct. 3.—The Washington baseball club secured Paul Gehrman, righthand pitcher, in the annual draft meeting here tonight. He won 14 and lost 13 with the Albany, N. Y., club to whom he had been farmed by Birmingham.

Game Moved Up

Spartanburg, S. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Oglethorpe-Wofford football game, originally scheduled to be played here Saturday, has been advanced to Friday afternoon, Wofford athletic officials announced today.

The Brighter Side:

Attell Keeps Secret Of Big Sport Scandal

Former Famous Old Champion, Now Near 60, Has Never 'Stooled' on His Friend; Some Day He Might Reveal the Facts

By Damon Runyon.

Until a few years ago, a certain chap of high repute in professional gambling circles of the East and South was still alive and he was Abe Attell's friend.

Abe Attell, now in his midfifties, was once featherweight champion of the world and one of the five greatest fighters of American ring history. He was exceptionally clever with his dukes and inordinately crafty in ring mind.

Twenty years ago he was taking most of the "fall," or blame, for bribing a group of the Chicago White Sox to throw the World Series of 1919 to the Cincinnati Reds, now having their first World Series since that time. Abe Attell, then and afterwards, kept his mouth shut for the reason, as we now conjecture, that he wanted to protect his friend.

RUNYON

How that chap ever permitted himself to get mixed up in the fixing of the series was always a deep mystery to those who knew him. He was a man of impeccable honesty and principle in his own business. He just somehow let his ethics get tangled when it came to making a cinch proposition of the series and while there was then no legal offense involved (though there now is) his subsequent realization through the public reaction of the odium of the matter had him living in years in deadly fear that his part in the fixing might be revealed.

Some day Abe Attell may sit down and tell a detailed story of the incident that threatened to destroy baseball, though we doubt it. Abe comes of an old and well nigh extinct school of the sporting world that deems "hollering copper," or informing, a definite

27 Reds Slice Series Melon; Simmons 'In'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—The Champion Cincinnati Reds today split up their shares of World Series receipts.

Wally Berger, Tony Bongiovanni, Stanley Bordagaray, Harry Craft, Paul Derringer, Lonnie Frey, Lee Gamble, Ival Goodman, Lee Grissom, Willard Hershberger, Eddie Joost, Ernie Lombardi, Frank McCormick, Lloyd Moore, Billy Myers, Lew Riggs, Les Scarsella, Gene Thompson, John Vander Meer, Bucky Walters, Bill Werber; Coaches Harry Gowdy and James Wilson; Manager Will McKechnie, Gabriel Paul, Traveling Secretary and Trainer Richard Rohde.

Half shares were voted to Milburn Shoffner, John Niggeling, Henry Johnson, and Assistant Trainer Larry McManus, and a quarter share to Al Simmons who signed with the club August 31. The following amounts in cash also are to be awarded: Joe Hurst, bat boy, $750; Park Supt. Matty Schwab $500, and Dick West $1,000.

Joey Green Kayoed

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Oliver White, 135¾, Brooklyn, knocked out Joey Green, 130, Washington, D. C., in 2:46 of the second round of a preliminary bout at the White Plains County Center Boxing Show here tonight.

Garcia Offered Bout With Hostak

Seattle, Oct. 3 (AP).—Promoter Nate Druxman said today he had offered Ceferino Garcia, conqueror of Freddie Apostoli, a championship match here against Al Hostak, N. B. A.-recognized middleweight champion in the 46 States not recognizing the Garcia claim.

Bob Feller Bows To Cousin, 7 to 1, In 'Homecoming'

Van Meter, Iowa, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bob Feller, who won 24 games for the Cleveland Indians this season, went down to defeat before a cousin from the minors as 12,000 fans looked on at the "Bob Feller" homecoming celebration here today.

Feller pitched five innings, but was charged with the loss as an Adel, Iowa, team defeated Van Meter, 7 to 1. Pitching for Adel was Harold Manders, Bob's cousin, who hurled for Beaumont in the Texas League this season, but will go to Detroit next spring.

Despite the disappointment at seeing Feller lose, the crowd made a gay occasion of the fourth annual homecoming for the youthful star. Gov. George A. Wilson and other State officials paid tribute to him as an Iowa product that fulfills the State slogan, "Of all that is good, Iowa affords the best."

Series Recalls '34 Card-Tiger Scrap; No Razz Expected

Derringer Quotes Case of Sports Writers Building Up Louis Before Schmeling Scrap; Concedes Yankee Strength

By Bob Considine.

New York, Oct. 3.—Not since those abusive gents from St. Louis swept into Detroit in 1934 and frightened the Tigers right out of the series has there been a National League team as confident of beating the American League bunch as the Cincinnatis are of beating the Yankees.

One can't spend ten minutes in the hotel which coops the Reds without becoming imbued with the confidence of the club. It isn't the same cocky air that surrounded the old Gashouse Gang. There won't be any Dizzy Dean strutting into the American Leaguers' batting practice, shoving some startled junior leaguer out of the way and taking his raps. There may be a little razzing from the Cincinnati bench, but it will be a seemly kind, for there are no masters of the sulphuric phrase on the Reds. There won't be any Medwick, daring 'em to hit him with old cabbage

The cockiness of the Reds is as quiet as the serene confidence of the Yankees themselves. There isn't a player on the squad who openly scoffs at the Yanks, as the Cards would have done, but not one can understand why otherwise sane baseball writers are picking the Yanks to win from four to six games.

Louis Case Quoted

"You fellows are doing about the same thing to the Yanks as you did to Joe Louis," Paul Derringer told us today in his quiet drawl. "You all built him up as absolutely unbeatable, but a fair to middling heavyweight named Schmeling knocked him out, and a couple of old guys like Braddock and Galento knocked him down. They're a swell team, of course, but nothing's unbeatable in sports. Don't forget, they lost 45 games in their own league this season."

The Cards hated one another with sporadic enthusiasm all through the 1935 pennant season and during the series itself. The brotherly love of the current Reds makes the amity of Damon and Pythias look like a rude scram between two drunken dockwallopers. If you want to know something about Derringer, the guy to see is Walters; if you want to find out something about Walters, the best fellow to see on that would be Gene Thompson; Bill Werber, the scrappy third baseman, is an authority on Manager Bill McKechnie; Lonnie Frey has made a study of all the good deeds ever done by Billy Myers; Ival Goodman thinks that the finest first baseman he ever saw is Frank McCormick—and so on. The team has been called "One Big Family." But no family ever lived that got along as well as the Reds.

Reds' Confidence Curious

The players exhibit extreme modesty when speaking of themselves, but grow lyrical about the ability of their teammates. Walters will tell you he's no great shakes as a pitcher, but he'll look at you as if you're nuts if you don't agree that Derringer is the finest pitcher in the land. Derringer told us with undeniable sincerity that the finest pitcher he has seen this year is Thompson. Thompson personally thinks Walters is the champ.

In other words, about every Red you speak to gives you the impression that he himself contributed little or nothing to the cause, but just happened to be lucky enough to be associated with the greatest ball club on earth.

When Billy Myers made three er-

attempted a home remedy which aggravated the injury. Already troubled by a weak throwing arm, and boasting a batting average of .264, Berger has not been deemed essential to the Reds. McKechnie declared yesterday that either Simmons or Rookie Lee Gamble probably would replace Berger.

Plenty of Power

The Reds may be the world to their mothers and the darlings of Cincinnati, but in New York, they are being regarded as sacrificial pieces for the might of the Yankees. In the face of the feats of Derring-do by Derringer and Bucky Walters, and the Reds' reputation as opportunists, Yankee power is expected to prevail.

Only thrice in the last 28 times the Yankees have taken the field for a World Series game have they left the field a beaten team, and this year again it is Yankee batting power that accounts for the odds in their favor.

The same array of sluggers—Joe DiMaggio, Bill Dickey, Charley Keller, Red Rolfe, Joe Gordon, George Selkirk—that demolished American League pitching is the powerful hand McCarthy holds as he sends his club against the Reds. The high probability of a home run bouncing off one of those bats has been the key to Yankee success, and Frankie Crosetti, a .235 hitter, demonstrated in the last World Series that he, too, can hit a game-winning home run.

Lou Gehrig Missing

For the first time since 1926, the Yankees will be in a World Series sans Lou Gehrig, always a potent figure when the National League challenged Yankee superiority. But offsetting Gehrig's absence in a measure is the spectacular fielding of weak-hitting Babe Dahlgren, which has made of the Yankees a standout team defensively.

Scarcely rating comparison with the Yankees' offensive power is the batting lineup of the Cincinnati Reds whose regular lineup will contain only two .300 hitters, Young Frank McCormick, the first baseman who batted .332 and led the National League in run-production, teams with Outfielder Ival Goodman, a .324 hitter, as the chief batting threats of the Reds, but Yankee pitchers are not disposed to underrate big Ernie Lombardi, whose .286 average belies his proven ability to whale all types of pitching.

Pro-Amateur, Prelim to P. G. A. Open, Slated Here Today

35 Teams Due To Compete At Columbia

Byron Nelson and Henry Picard Will Play in Exhibition Tomorrow Afternoon

A preliminary pro-amateur to the District's biggest golf tournament in years, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Open, is scheduled for the Columbia Country Club course today, with a field of 35 teams expected.

With a $5-per-man entrance fee, the event will not only serve as a practice round, but the winning team should spend quite a profitable afternoon. A Calcutta pool and P. G. A. meeting will follow tomorrow night.

Tomorrow morning at 8 a. m. Al Houghton, the promoter of the event, will head the field of 74 off the tee after 15 pro prizes, with top money of $400, plus an attractive list of amateur awards.

Tomorrow afternoon's program will be topped by the visit of the two biggest names in golf today—National Open Champion Byron Nelson and P. G. A. Titleholder Henry Picard. They will play with Fred McLeod, the host pro, and the leader of the morning round, an honor that is expected to lie between Houghton, Defending Champion Leo Walper, or the respective aces of the Maryland and Virginia delegations, Andy Gibson, Baltimore, and Errie Ball, Charlottesville.

The match will start about 2:30, with no charge to the public. Programs will be sold to help defray the cost of the exhibition.

Friday's program calls for the final 36 holes, and the testimonial dinner to McLeod with a guest list including many of the leading pro golfers, with the list not completed.

Myer Weinberg, Mary Fleming Set Pin Marks

Meyer Weinberg and Mary Fleming, rolling in different leagues but on the same Lucky Strike alleys, smashed early season records last night for individual game and set as bowlers all over the city went through a full night of activity.

Weinberg, toppling pins for the Friendship Liquor team in the Liquor Distributors League, turned in an impressive 157 for high game and 414 for set, assisting his team to a best 2 out of 3 victory over the Cardinals. Miss Fleming checked in her brilliant effort in behalf of the L. A. A. L. H. five in the Ladies Catholic League. She had a 138 and a 336 set, good enough to give her team two games over St. Joseph's.

The Ladies District League announced three important matches for tonight over as many alleys. Lucky Strike will play host to Red Circle; Rosslyn will entertain Ice Palace on its alleys, and Arcadia will oppose Arcade Pontiac at the Arcadia alleys.

Lutheran Church League

Honors were well distributed in the Lutheran Church Men's League, four teams taking high laurels in four departments. Dan Eberly, of Atonement No. 1, had a 139 for high game; Harry Crow, of Reformation, 383 for high set; Keller Memorial's 566 game was the best of the night, and Luther Place No. 7 had a set of 1,634.

Ladies of the Lutheran Church League saw several stars dominate the rolling. Margaret McDonald, of Zion, had 114 for high game and tied with Margaret Willard, of Keller, for high set with 314. The Grace club walked away with team honors, cracking 505 for game and 1,408 for set.

In the U. S. Housing Authority League the best performances of the night were credited to Dick Hausman, of Office Service, who pounded out a game of 138, and Construction's Jack Murray, who had a set of 352. The latter effort helped no end in Construction's two-game win over Finance.

Gifford Ladies Win

Maryland-D. C. Ladies League went through its weekly session at Silver Spring Alleys, with Gifford Ice Cream moving into first place with three straight triumphs over Occidental Hotel. Shepherd Park Wine and Liquor was the victim of the displacement, though it managed for two games from Shaffer's Flowers.

R. E. A. Cleaners turned in an all-time league record when it rolled a team game of 581, but lost a pair of games to Liberty Wall Paper. Winnie Hiser led the latter to victory with a high season game of 154. The only other match was won by Adell Beauty Shop over National Ale.

Washington Catholic Bowling League, which began its existence eight years ago under the name of the Holy Name Society League with but two teams in the running, announced last night that tomorrow night's hostilities will feature 80 teams—with the prospect that 10 more will be added soon. Instead of alternating at four different alleys, the Section A unlimited section will henceforth do all its rolling at Charley Olive's northeast Temple Alleys and Section B at Takoma.

D. C. Eagles, Under Mackenzie, Start Training This Month

Redvers Mackenzie, a wiry, friendly little little fellow with a background of professional golf playing and writing, besides unlimited ice hockey experience as player and coach, was introduced to the press and radio yesterday as the pilot of the Washington Eagles, the city's entry in the Eastern League this season.

The introduction was made at a luncheon given at he Raleigh Hotel by Severine Loeffler, owner of the Riverside Stadium, which is to be the site of the Eagles' 34 home Eastern League encounters during the season.

The Eagles' squad, which will number 18 players when complete, will begin training in Canada late this month for their league opening. It will play four or five exhibition games around Montreal and Quebec, just as major league baseball teams do in the South before their championship seasons, and probably as many Eastern League contests before returning here for their Washington debut November 24.

Having brought six members of his last year's fourth-place Sea Gulls to form a young but experienced nucleus, Mackenzie predicted the Eagles would be in the running, though usually a new team requires several years to be developed.

The Riverside Stadium, Loeffler said, is now closed in by canvas canopies and a steel roof, and spectators for the ice hockey games will not suffer from cold as they did last year when several ice troupes exhibited at the new plant. The stadium can seat 4,400 as it is constructed now and at least 700 additional chairs could be added in an emergency.

After the ice season is over, in April, Loeffler said, his stadium would be available for college and professional basketball and for boxing. In all cases it will be leased, for Loeffler plans to do no promoting himself.

Cocky Redlegs Are Unworried About Chances

rors in one game, during the grueling stretch drive, and imperiled the chances of the team's winning the pennant, not one harsh word was said to him in the locker room after the game. Bucky Walters had a 4-1 lead after four innings against Pittsburgh last Sunday, and could have gained his twenty-eighth victory of the year simply by pitching another half inning. But he retired, to give Thompson the opportunity to get credit for the victory in a relief role. When it came time to split up the series melon, the Reds were so fraternal that they cut in everybody remotely connected with the team, including the groundkeeper at Crosley Field.

Dislike Close Comparison

They don't like to compare the teams, position by position, but if you prod them they'll tell you that in only one position—center field—do the Yankees have a clearly defined edge. And they believe that their pitching will more than make up for that disadvantage. In this department they come closest to exhibiting a quiet sneer when you mention the Yanks in their presence. For six months they saw Walters, Derringer, Thompson and Moore turn in one great pitching job after another, always under pressure. They saw them refuse to buckle when, after winning 15 out of 18 games the Reds still found the Cards shaving their margin.

They saw Myers grit his teeth late on the afternoon of September 12 and hit a home run against Luke Hamlin to start the team on its final winning burst of speed. They saw Bill Werber throw himself into Medwick's spikes to stop him and beat the Cards in a keeroshial game and they saw what they say is the coolest kid in the business, Thompson, win the deciding game of the flag race.

You can't blame them for feeling that a Reds drive of this kind can't be stopped by the Yanks—whose biggest guns were silenced in the All-Star game by Derringer.

Interior Bowling League Starts Play Tonight

Romona Harris, selected as Miss Interior of 1939, will perform the "First Ball" ceremony tonight as the I. D. R. A. Men's Bowling League gets under way at Columbia Alleys at 8 p. m. President Charles Dey, of I. D. A. R., will second her as the first matches between the 14 teams representing bureaus of the department are rolled.

91 Women Vie In Field Day Golf Tomorrow

Additional Entries Are Due From Baltimore For Indian Spring Play

A field of 91, plus Baltimore entries, will compete in the Maryland State Golf Association Women's Field Day tomorrow at Indian Spring, over the 18-hole medal play handicap route.

Mrs. K. S. Giles, who announced the pairings, and Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, three-time president of the District Woment's Golf Association, chairman of the event, warn the visiting players to bring caddies for the play.

Kiesling Signed To Coach Pirates

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3 (AP).—Walter Kiesling, 270-pound assistant coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates, signed a new contract tonight to take over the job of head coach of the National Pro Football League team, vacated early today by his close friend, Johnny Blood.

During the day the Pirates traded Frank Souhcak, former Pitt start end, to the Bears for Coley McDonough, a halfback, who played with North Carolina State and Dayton University.

crime and a deep disgrace. Moreover, he would have to bring in the very thing that kept him silent long years ago—the name of his friend.

Attell has never denied a certain culpability on his own part but he never went into any lengthy explanations. About all he ever said was that it was the only bad thing he ever did in his sporting career and that he had truly repented, a statement we are inclined to believe. It cost him much one way and another down through the years.

Correct Version

It is from nothing that Abe Attell ever told us, but more from information from other sources and some surmise that we have pieced out what we think is a reasonably correct version of the fixing. It is our belief that the fix was well on before Attel learned of it and that he then merely stepped in and grabbed a piece for himself—the old game of cheating cheaters.

The plot was first offered by White Sox players, through agents, to Arnold Rothstein, then king of the gamblers of the East, afterward shot and killed for welching on card game debts. Rothstein ostensibly turned the fix down. He was too cute to deal directly in a thing of that kind. If Abe Attell knew of the approach and of the turn-down, he probably paid no attention to the matter, thinking as anybody else would then that the very idea of fixing a World Series was too utterly fantastic to be considered.

Then one day he heard that a mysterious man was out in Chicago actually dealing with the White Sox players on the fix and though another name was given a description of the man convinced Abe that it was his friend, who was at that time more or less associated with Rothstein. Probably Abe craftily figured out that Rothstein was going in for the fix in a roundabout way, and on the basis of that theory he went West to take advantage of the situation by betting on the Reds.

Just Peanuts

He had no considerable money himself at the time but he was able to raise some on the strength of his theory, which he is said to have substantiated by contacting some of the crooked players, putting himself away as representing the famous Rothstein by showing them telegrams signed "A. R." sent by an Attwell stooge in the East.

And what Abe and his associates won in bets was just peanuts compared to the winnings of the real fixers. They won close to half a million. To the day of his death, Rothstein denied complicity in the fixing. He admitted he bet on the Reds and also admitted it was because of his belief that something was doing in the series, but swore it was without his connivance. He pointed a long digit of suspicion at Abe Attell.

The fact remains that his associate, Abe's friend, is believed to have done most of the negotiating and it is said one reason Rothstein and this man fell out later was because of Rothstein's claim that he had not won as much money as the man thought he must have won. Rothstein had his own personal share-the-wealth platform.

Meanwhile, Attell's part in the proceedings was gradually magnified into a regular masterminding, but Abe kept quiet. He was not fond of Rothstein for his digit pointing, but whatever he knew of Rothstein's role in the fix, if anything, he could not divulge without also naming his friend.

The fixing of that series was a most curious incident in every way. We never felt baseball showed up in it any too well, because it was primarily made possible by underpaid players and the magnates let the series go through to a conclusion and pocketed the gate money when many persons in baseball were hinting that something was wrong. Even Abe Attell was going around telling all his friends to bet on the Reds saying if they lost they could call him a Chinaman. No one called Abe a Chinaman.

Cox-Dusek Mat Match to Have Good Support

Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, and Ernie Dusek, the ferocious Nebraskan, headliners on tomorrow night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena, will have a number of the "Riot Boys" wrestling in supporting bouts, the complete card announced yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner revealed.

Such one-man rebellions as Bibber McCoy, Joe Maynard, Abe Yurist, Bob Wagner and Johnny Katan have been mustered for action.

Hader will oppose Maynard, who hasn't been seen here in a long time. Yurist, Jewish star, will face Bob Wagner, a rough Norwegian, and Katan, former Canadian champion, will take on Don Evans, another newcomer.

Naturally, all of the boys in the supporting bouts want a crack at the winner of the Cox-Dusek bout, and indications are that Promoter Turner will pluck out the man who makes the best showing, and pit him against the victor.

Army Polo Player Dies of Injuries

Junction City, Kans., Oct. 3 (AP).—Lieut. Scott M. Sanford, 30, died in Fort Riley Hospital today of chest injuries caused as his horse fell on him Sunday during tryouts for selection of the equestrian team to represent the Army at the 1940 Olympics.

Post's Trophy Tourney Set For October 16

Original Starting Times and Pairings Retained for Event

The Washington Post Women's Medal play tournament, originally scheduled for yesterday on the Chevy Chase course but postponed due to the rain and soggy turf, has been reset for Monday, October 16, with the original pairings and starting times prevailing.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the District Women's Golf Association, made the announcement yesterday after conferring with Mrs. Landra B. Platt, chairman of the golf committee at the host club.

A two-week postponement was necessary as the remainder of this week was taken up with the Maryland State field day tomorrow at Indian Spring and the Open tourney at Columbia, that would conflict from a spectator's standpoint as well as from the Columbia members using the Chevy Chase course. Next week the Middle Atlantic Women's tourney at Washington Golf and Country Club fills the first five days, Monday through Friday.

The Post tourney drew an entry of 193, tying the biggest field in the history of local tournaments, and is one reason why the tournaments will be divided over two courses next year. The players will be split by handicaps.

Cincinnati Mayor, Sans Ticket, Gets World Series Bid

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The mayor of Cincinnati is going to see the first World Series game here tomorrow, between his Reds and the New York Yankees, after all.

His Excellency, Mayor James G. Stewart had planned all along to attend the game, but it suddenly dawned on him today that he did'nt have a ticket.

He tried and tried to get one of the precious pasteboards—but to no avail. And then, by chance, New York's mayor, F. H. LaGuardia, heard of Stewart's plight.

Said LaGuardia: "He'll see the game as my guest."

Krause Lost to Redskins for Season Due to Knee Injury

Operation Looms for Ace Fullback

Baugh, Irwin, Turner And McChesney Also Unlikely Starters in Dodger Game Sunday

Max Krause, for three years one of the Redskins' most valuable fullbacks, will be lost for the remainder of the season as a result of a knee injured in the Giants game Sunday, Coach Ray Flaherty revealed last night.

At present in Emergency Hospital, Krause will submit to an operation within the next few days to remove a loose cartilage in his right knee. Although Krause probably would be recovered in time for next month's games, Dr. Robert E. Moran, Redskin club physician, advised Flaherty that complete rest until next season was most advisable for the veteran from Spokane.

Rest Needed Badly

The injury is such, explained Moran, that it might be aggravated easily if Krause played before it is entirely healed. He will remain with the team, however, as assistant coach and scout.

The absence of Krause and Sammy Baugh, Don Irwin and maybe Jay Turner from the Redskins' line-up for Sunday's game with the Brooklyn Dodgers will result in much juggling of the backs, Flaherty said, for it breaks up both his first and second string combinations.

Turner, one of the four 'Skins hurt last week, could play Sunday, as could End Bob McChesney, but neither will be used unless it is absolutely necessary.

Meantime, in daily morning drills Flaherty is experimenting with several of his more or less untried rookie backs, including Jimmy German, Boyd Morgan and Dick Todd. Todd, impressive in his brief trials to date, is expected to see considerable action as safety man because of his unusual speed and elusiveness in the open field.

Young Backs Alternate

In order to pare the squad to the limit of 30 maximum allowed under National League rules, Flaherty yesterday asked waivers on a pair of his first-year candidates—Jimmy Lawrence, fullback, from Texas Christian, and Carlton (Bud) Erickson, center, from the University of Southern California.

Weaver Pitches Louisville to 5-to-2 Victory

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 3.—Big Jim Weaver pitched the Louisville Colonels of the American Association into a 3-to-2 lead in the Little World Series tonight by setting down the Rochester Red Wings of the International League, 5 to 2.

Weaver, scoring his second triumph of the series, had a shutout until two were out in the ninth. Then, with two players on, Estel Crabtree hit a single, scoring both. But Jim Bore down and forced the next batsman to ground out and the belated rally was over.

The two clubs resume their four-out-of-seven struggle in Rochester tomorrow night. If Rochester wins, the seventh and deciding game will be played there Thursday night.

Louisville opened its scoring in the second inning when successive triples by Fred Sington and Peewee Reese and a single by Buddy Lewis produced two runs.

Whizzer White Enters Yale; Grid Days Over

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 3.—Byron (Whizzer) White, an All-America halfback, today enrolled at Yale where the Elis and quite a few professional football teams could use him—but you can take it straight from the former Colorado University ace, his "football playing days are over."

Not even another offer of a record $15,000 which he received last year for playing with Pittsburgh of the National Professional Football League "would tempt me" said the Whizzer, who was admitted to the Yale law school this morning, a week after classes started.

A report from Art Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh club, that the New York Giants of the same league were seeking White's contract, was news to him, but it was easy to see that the modest Whizzer was pleased about it all.

White, a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University, arrived in New York Saturday on the Manhattan after the war in Europe caused the cessation of his scholarship.

The Whizzer, who weighs about the same as when he was playing football, basketball and baseball at Colorado a couple of years ago—about 182 pounds—said he was "sorry about having to leave England, but naturally I am glad to get back to the States."

"But, even if I do, my football playing days are over. I'm started on a law career. Don't get me wrong, though. I would like to play football again. Why anybody who has ever played the game and loves it the way I do wouldn't feel any different, but I'm studying law school now, and my classes wouldn't permit it. It's just impossible!

"Yes, sir, you can quote me as saying my football playing days are over. I've unpacked my clothes and books here and if there is anything I dislike, it's packing and unpacking."

'Iron Men' to Bid For Irish Supremacy

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 3.—Notre Dame, long accustomed to rolling over foes by sheer force of numbers, will bid for national gridiron honors this season with a small band of "Irish Iron Men."

A year ago, Notre Dame routed Kansas, 52 to 0, in the opening game of the season, using some 80 men. Last Saturday, squeezing out a 3-to-0 win over a tough Purdue eleven, Notre Dame used only two dozen players. And while this year's curtain-raiser was a lot harder test than that of 1938, the fiercely fought duel indicated clearly that for the first time in years the Irish hopes rest principally on one team rather than four or five.

This lack of capable reserves—and observers agree the 1939 Irish second team is not nearly so far advanced as was the 1938 second eleven at this date—is certain to be a handicap in the "suicide schedule" Notre Dame will play out. But after watching the Irish Saturday observers were convinced that unless injuries riddle the starting eleven, Notre Dame is going to win a lot of games.

No Cinch—Purdue

Make no mistake about it—the Irish beat a very good team in Purdue. The Boilermaker line, with Dave Rankin, Whitey Johnson and Felix Mackiewicz the standouts, is one of the best in the Midwest. On offense, Mike Byelene, Jack Brown and Lou Brock constitute a ball-toting combination that would delight any coach, and the Purdue attack will be better when Brock recovers fully from an ankle injury.

Yet Notre Dame's first team outplayed the Boilermakers. The Irish line met charge for charge, and on defense Notre Dame backs blocked more effectively than did Purdue runners. Notre Dame, with Bob Saggau and Milt Piepul doing the booting, was superior in the punting department and covering opponent's punts. Time after time Irish forwards nailed the Purdue receiver within four or five yards of where he caught the ball, and this fast defensive work will pay Notre Dame big dividends in games to come.

Pushed Second String

Purdue's highly touted attack came to life only once against Notre Dame. In the fourth period, the Boilermakers drove from their own 20-yard line to Notre Dame's 37—making the push against the Irish squad second stringers. Then the Notre Dame first team rushed to the rescue and the Purdue spark fizzled. In the first three periods, Purdue could get no closer to the Irish goal line than the Notre Dame 47-yard marker.

From time to time Elmer Layden will spring a new boy, but for the most part these 11 players will be both the "shock" and regular troops in the Irish drive this fall: Kerr and J. Kelly, ends; Gallagher and Harvey, tackles; De Franco and Riffle, guards; McIntyre, center; Sitko, quarterback; Saggau and Zontini, halfbacks, and Thesing, fullback.

Redskin-Pirate Tickets Await Winners in Post Grid Contest

Come and get them. Ten tickets to the Redskins-Pittsburgh Pirates game at Griffith Stadium on October 14 await the folks who this week prove to be Washington's best football prognosticators.

Today The Washington Post's third weekly football picking contest starts, with a dozen of the outstanding games in all sectors of the Nation comprising the list to test your skill at forecasting winners.

To the five contest entrants who select the most winners in the list of games, The Post will present two tickets each to the attractive Redskin-Pittsburgh battle.

G. W. Line-up For D.-E. Clash Announced

Sam Babish, End, Shifted to Quarter With 2 Weeks Work

By Jack Munhall.

Four 1938 regulars, three holdover lettermen and a quartet of sophomores are expected to be the starting lineup for George Washington Saturday at Griffith Stadium when the Colonials open their season against Davis and Elkins in one-half of a doubleheader. Georgetown plays Roanoke in the other game.

Following the varsity's strictly defensive scrimmage with the freshmen at the Polo Field yesterday, Coach Bill Reinhart announced the tentative first-string team, which is surprising only in that Sam Babich is listed at quarterback.

Babich, a star end last season, was moved to the signal-calling position for the first time less than two weeks ago, and his presence in the regular lineup is downright startling. Usually it requires a newcomer quarterback at least two weeks to learn something about calling plays correctly before he even begins to familiarize himself with the tricks of the mechanical end of a strange job.

Reinhart Is Hopeful

However, Reinhart is convinced that Babich not only is ready to be entrusted with the welfare of the Colonial squad but is set also to be one of its leading blockers and ball carriers. Babich has not shown singular passing or running ability, but that may come later, Reinhart believes.

The 1938 regulars listed as Saturday starters, with the exception of Babich, are Murphy Booth, a right halfback picked on some All-District elevens last year; Sunny Jones, a 205-pound tackle, and Bob Nowaskey, an unanimous All-District end choice. The heldover lettermen who have been promoted are Billy Richardson, tailback; Bruce Keahey, tackle, and John Kokoski, a guard-fullback in 1938, but now established at the former position.

The brash rookies who have beat out veterans for starting roles are Frank August, end; Walter Monchlovich, center; Stan Ziobro, guard, and Walter Fedora, fullback.

Richardson and Fedora probably will divide the playing time of each game with Ken Batson and Lud Urick, named as alternatives in Rinehart's tentative line-up.

The team, if you've missed it, is: Ends, Nowaskey, August; tackles, Keahey, Jones; guards, Ziobro, Kokoski; center, Monchlovich; backs, Babich, Richardson or Batson, Booth, Urick or Fedora.

If Georgetown trackmen who are conjuring visions that they will be a godsend to the offensively weak Hoya backfield don't get settled soon Coach Jack Hagerty will be an interesting case for the psychiatrists.

Monday, upon digesting newspaper reports that the G. U. backfield needed a fast, shifty runner like Joe Mellendeck worse than Hitler needed a bodyguard, four of these thin clads dropped their batons, scooped up pads and breathlessly reported to Hagerty for practice.

Batons Replace Footballs

"So," quoth John Hagerty, appraising the streamlined legs of Mort Alnwick, Vinnie Braun, George Tucknott and John Motzenbecker, "Learn the signals and we'll throw you in against Roanoke Saturday. Maybe the referee'll let you carry batons instead of footballs."

Came yesterday, but no Motzenbecker. He had changed his mind. But in his place came John Buckley, a hurdler, along with Braun, Tucknott and Alnwick. Buckley explained to the distraught Hagerty that Motzenbecker had decided his 135 pounds were not made to be bounced around on the gridiron so he sent Buckley to substitute. "I'll make a good man to hit the line," opined Buckley, who could hurdle the oncoming linemen for minimum gains of five yards per try.

What with Al Blozis, shot and discus thrower already with the football squad and practicing for the track season by tossing his best linemen all over the field, and Hap Hardell, the track coach, tutoring the freshman gridders, Coach Hagerty couldn't be blamed if he challenged Syracuse to a meet instead of a football game.

Novak to Arrive Tomorrow to Prep For Benefit Fight

Though his bout with Washington's heavyweight hope, Jimmy DeChard, is not scheduled until October 11, word was received last night from Tommy Novak, National A. A. U. champion, that he would make his appearance on the local scene tomorrow.

"Doc" Reilly, former Washingtonian who trains Novak, will put his charge through stiff workouts at Jewish Community Center the remainder of this week and the early part of next for the bout that will headline 34 rounds of amateur boxing for the benefit of the Washington Society for the Blind.

Midget Race Plant Adding 2,000 Seats; Hanson to Enter

Despite a war with Old Man Weather, who insists upon blocking his celebration plans for the Capitol Speedway tomorrow night, Ray Alvis, midget auto racing's new sponsor here, last night announced that the addition of 2,000 seats was near completion and the infield of his plant is being leveled.

Mel Hanson, winner of last week's battle of the midgets, will be back in the running tomorrow as a feature of 50 laps instead of the usual 30. A special attraction will be the "grudge" race between Cowboy O'Rourke and Rex Records, who last week engaged in fist swinging as one accused the other of "cutting out."

Return Archibald-Jeffra Bout Urged by Rep. Kennedy

Threatened National Investigation of Fistic Industry

By the Associated Press

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday that he would urge the National Boxing Association to arrange a return bout between Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra, featherweights, as a result of a decision for Archibald last week which many fans booed.

He made the statement after a conference with Ernest W. Brown, District of Columbia police superintendent, and Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, chairman of the national association.

Kennedy said that if the return match was not arranged, he would join Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, in requesting an investigation of boxing nationally.

"I feel that rank injustice was done to Contestant Jeffra in the Archibald-Jeffra contest," Kennedy said. "When such things as the Archibald-Jeffra decision can happen, no matter how honest the mistake is, and steps cannot be taken to immediately correct such gross errors, there's something wrong with the conduct of the ring sport."

Gilbert Hall Tops Advance In Net Event

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 3.—J. Gilbert Hall, defending champion who has two legs on the cup, defeated C. Maury Jones, of New Jersey, 6—2, 6—4, today in a second round match in the fall invitation tennis tournament here.

Edward McKnight, of Boston, who won, 6—3, 3—6, 12—10, from Fred C. Baggs in a first round encounter, trounced George Reindell, 6—3, 6—2.

Winning by default in the first round, Charles Halsey, of New York, was beaten in a second round match by Thomas Moorhead, of Washington, 6—0, 6—1.

Harry Berno, of Cleveland, defeated J. Reindell, 6—4, 6—2, after Reindell, a Detroiter, had eliminated T. Bolling, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4, and Fred C. Anderson, of Plainfield, N. J., won, 6—2, 8—6, from Hugh G. Whitehead.

In first round matches, George Du Manoir, of Spring Lake, N. J., defeated Hoyt Smith, 6—3, 6—1, and Earle Bache, of New York, won from Peter Belin, by default.

Some first round matches in the women's singles were also played today. Seeded players are Katherine Winthrop, Manchester, Mass.; Louise Raymond, N. Y., and Florence Leboutilier, Long Island.

Mrs. Arnold McCaffrey, of New York, won, 6—3, 6—1, over Helen Kuhn; Barbara Nields, of New York, defeated Julia Lipps, 6—1, 6—0; Margot Lee, playing Mrs. Cedric Major, won, 6—0, 6—1; Mrs. Earle Bache, of New York, defeated Mrs. Hugh Whitehead, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Leboutillier won from Jane Handwork by default.

Variety Club Adds Events To Cavalcade

Yet another event was added to Variety Club's Cavalcade of Thrills, set for Griffith Stadium on October 13 and 14, yesterday when it was announced that the Four Flying Kimras, a quartet of daring trapeze artists, would be on hand for the first showing of the touring thrill spectacle here.

The Kimras, a French family, have appeared in most large cities in the world and their addition is expected to do much to draw customers to the show for the benefit of Variety's charity fund.

Assurance was also given yesterday by Musty Murgrave, Los Angeles promoter in charge of the program, that the winners of the Madison Square Garden rodeo would be on hand for the gala occasion. They will combine with more than 100 other performers to make Washington's edition of the Garden rodeo one of the best.

C.U. Contact Drills Delayed Due to Sloppy Field

In deference to the small quagmire that is the rainswept field of Brookland Stadium, Coach Dutch Bergman is delaying further contact drills for his C. U. gridders.

Waiting for dryer footing, the Cards went through a dummy scrimmage yesterday, gaining needed experience at handling a slippery ball. Bergman, however, has little fear of wetness hampering the backfield because Saturday's game with South Carolina was played immediately after a heavy rain.

Reports on Elon, which invades C. U. this Saturday, indicate the Southerners will bank heavily on a forward passing attack to offset the Cardinals' superior weight and running attack. The Christians' team has been molded from 23 lettermen, and Coach Horse Hendrickson is confident it'll add a few more white hairs to Bergman's silver thatch before C. U. wins. If.

St. John's, Central Ready For Night Game

Bredbenner Injury Slight; First Strings In A-1 Physical Shape

St. John's and Central, principals in Friday night's first schoolboy night football game, increased the tempo of drills yesterday on their respective practice grounds with only one casualty reported after a week of hard, gruelly scrimmages and dummy sessions.

He was Johnny Bredbenner, first-string halfback of the Mount Pleasanters, whose shoulder ligaments were painfully sprained. Coach Hardy Pearce, however, said he would be available for use Friday night at Griffith Stadium. As a precaution Johnny Dawes, substitute quarterback, will be started in Bredbenner's place, but the latter will definitely see action unless he sustains further injury.

All other Central regulars are in perfect condition and keyed up for the clash which is a belated fight for the 1938 schoolboy championship of Washington. Benny Steiner will start at quarter, Harry Martin at half and Jimmy Porter at full. The same line that engaged in most of Central's winning effort over Gonzaga will pobably start.

St. John's had no major injuries after two weeks of rest since its opener against Roosevelt. Coach Gene Augusterfer expressed dissatisfaction with the way his first team was looking in practice, but confided that it would hold its own Friday. Joe Brogan will be calling signals for the line bucking and end runs of Frank Cady, Joe Daly and Tony Chisari. Augusterfer's heavy and experienced first string line is in tip-top shape.

Gopher Defense Is Strengthened

Minneapolis, Oct. 3 (AP).—Defensive plays designed to combat Nebraska's offense were outlined today to the Minnesota football squad by Coach Bernie Bierman as he put the first and second teams through a strenuous workout.

After warning his charges they will have their hands full Saturday keeping the Nebraska offensive in check, Bierman outlined plays designed to halt the Cornhusker running and passing attack exhibited against Indiana last Saturday.

Sun Egret Wins Capital Handicap, Laurel's Inaugural Race

Clodion Runs Second, Two Lengths Back

Victor Pays Backers $10 Ticket; Rough Time Takes Down Spoils for Show

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 3.—All Maryland tracks and all Maryland fields seem to look alike to Sun Egret, a little hard-running colt sired by Sun Briar. After winning the Susquehanna Handicap and an overnight race at Havre de Grace, Sun Egret moved here today and celebrated the opening of the 25-day meeting by galloping off with the chief money in the twenty-first running of the Capital Handicap.

Performing in the white and green colors of the A. C. C. Stable, Sun Egret reached the imaginary wire two lengths in front of R. A. Moore's Clodion and four lengths in advance of J. Yancey Christmas' Rough Time. Five other sprinters were left up the race track to form the "also ran" department. Of these, only Gustav Ring's Lady Maryland, which went to her knees leaving the gate, had an excuse.

Sun Egret was only lukewarm in the betting due to the fact that Rough Time, New York stake winner; Jay Jay, Howard Bruce's speed ace, and El Chico, former Derby hope, were in the starting group and alleged to be at top form. Sun Egret paid a $10 mutuel and stepped the six furlongs in 1:13 2-5, over a track that dried surprisingly fast to be at a slow stage for the day's feature.

The return of racing to the No. 1 highway section brought out a crowd of some 7,000. Betting was comparatively light for an opening day at this track.

Rough Time, in trying to win the Capital Handicap for three years in a row, found the high weight of 122 pounds too much and tired in the stretch run. However, Sun Egret carried his 120-pound assignment in good fashion under clever handling by Jockey Al Shelhamer.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCREW DRIVER (entry), $4.30, $3.10, $2.60; WINDSOR CHIEF, $36.20, $16.70; PACING, $7.70.

SCREW DRIVER, off alertly, took command over WINDSOR CHIEF approaching stretch and held away thereafter under strong handling. WINDSOR CHIEF was rushed to top in opening furlong, drew clear, but could not resist winner and closed gamely. PACING ran well placed from start, but was held safe. QUESTRE lacked early speed and gained gradually through stretch. LONELY ROAD closed full of run from slow beginning. POMPE GRANDE dropped back directly after break. WESTLY had early speed. HERE GOES flashed keen speed and stopped.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:11. Off 2:14. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's ch. h. (5), by Teddy—Simpatica. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY PATIC, $13.80, $6.90, $5.40; RADIO GOLD, $8.00, $5.30; ROAR, $7.40.

TEDDY PATIC, improving position early on inside, came through between ROAR and rail to take command and was kept to pressure to end while drawing out. ROAR had speed to take command in run to turn and weakened approaching wire. RADIO GOLD was outrun early, came with good energy under hard drive at close to take place in concluding stride. COURT DANCE raced on outside of leader to stretch and tired.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:41. Off 2:42. Winner, A. B. Parker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES PAL, $7.10, $4.10, $3.60; SETEMUP, $46.00, $15.20; EARLY BROOM, $9.50.

JAMES PAL, first away, drew clear going to first turn, saved ground and was kept to hard drive through stretch. SETEMUP, not hurried in early stages, came to outside for racing room and closed gamely. EARLY BROOM was forwardly placed from start and weakened in final eighth. DARK FRIEND, in thick of contention early, was forced to race between horses and faltered nearing end. FLYING CENTAUR saved ground and weakened. INSOLITA showed nothing. BLOND SPOOK could not keep up. WESTCHESTER quit after a half.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:11. Off 3:11½. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's br. g. (2), by By Pass II—Clodia. Trained by S. Hicks. Value to winner, $860; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHILOSOPHER, $4.00, $3.30, $2.20; GLORIOUS TIME, $4.30, $2.40; ROUGH PASS (entry), $2.20.

PHILOSOPHER, steadied along while saving ground for 3 furlongs, swung to outside for racing room approaching stretch, took command while under intermittent punishment and was kept to drive to end while opening a gap. GLORIOUS TIME, closest to pace of RAWSON, took command briefly in stretch, but could not resist winner. ROUGH PASS closed gamely from slow beginning. RAWSON had speed to go to front at once, but weakened when caught. TRUE STAR was outrun. ROUGH BISCUIT could not keep up.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $7,500 added. The Capital Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:42. Off 3:34. Winner, A. C. C. Stable's dk. ch. c. (4), by Sun Briar—Polly Ford. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Net value to winner, $6,725; second, $1,500; third, $750; fourth, $350. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN EGRET, $10.00, $5.10, $3.30; CLODION, $14.60, $5.60; ROUGH TIME, $3.20.

SUN EGRET, not hurried in early stages, responded willingly when shaken up to come to outside, wore down ROUGH TIME and was opening a gap under mild drive at finish. CLODION, outrun at post, and 6 furlongs gates first stairs, lacked early speed, improved position steadily after 3 furlongs and came gamely at end, but was no match for winner. ROUGH TIME raced close up on outside to turn, went to front while shaking off JAY JAY, but weakened in stretch drive. JAY JAY was hard used running in front with ARIEL TOY going to turn and tired gradually thereafter. ARIEL TOY had been speeded early and weakened. ISAROMA saved ground, but was held safe. LADY MARYLAND went to knees at break and failed to rally. EL CHICO was through after a flash of early foot.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Broadway Juel from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:21. Off 4:22. Winner, E. Hixon's b. g. (8), by Broadway Jones—Ethel Dear. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEW DEAL, $12.70, $7.70, $3.80; BUILDING TRADES, $6.00, $4.00; HIGH TENSION, $3.00.

NEW DEAL, allowed to race on own courage to backstretch, came to outside for racing room, and, although somewhat when shaken up and 4 to up in final strides. BUILDING TRADES, closest to pace of CAIDON, took command when pacemaker stopped and barely failed to stay under strong handling. HIGH TENSION, slow to begin, bore out while closing ground through stretch. ROCKY MEADOW, strongly restrained in early running, moved to leaders with bold rush along backstretch, but weakened at end. BRIGHT MARK was rushed to contention and faltered. BROADWAY JUEL went in air at break, was in trouble at first turn and failed to rally.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:51. Off 4:55½. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's b. g. (10), by Axenstein—Kolinsky. Trained by S. Hicks. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRANDON PRINCE, $4.60, $3.50, $2.60; FOXSTER, $3.80, $3.00; INTERPRETER, $4.50.

BRANDON PRINCE, allowed to settle into best stride, found racing room along rail to improve position readily approaching stretch, wore down FOXSTER to front, and was drawing out at end. FOXSTER, off well and steadied along for three-quarters, moved along with BRANDON PRINCE and held on stubbornly in closing test. INTERPRETER lacked early speed and closed with bold rush. SPARTAN LADY was hard ridden and had no excuses. FRANK BROOKE saved ground while setting pace and weakened when caught. CHALOTAUR forced pace and tired. DOHOEV was forced to race wide.

Life Insurance Here Is 14% Over Year Ago

Ratio of August Gain Tops New York, Chicago Boston and Cleveland

By Thomas M. Cahill

A local gain of 14 per cent in new life insurance written in August over the month last year bettered the records of Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Los Angeles, New York and St. Louis, but failed to surpass Detroit's 41 per cent advance and a 18 per cent gain for Philadelphia. Nevertheless, Washington's 4 per cent increase in the first eight months of this year was better than that of Cleveland and New York, but behind the other cities, the largest gain being scored by Detroit with 36 per cent.

Washington agents wrote $4,950,000 in new policies in August and $41,264,000 in the first eight months of 1938. A year ago in August, sales totaled $4,278,000. This was a 22 per cent drop from August, 1937, and makes this year's gain more significant. Sales in the first eight months of 1938 totaled $39,083,000, 25 per cent off from 1937.

$4,950,000 in Month

Policies written in August this year amounted to $4,950,000, compared with $4,262,000 written in July. Sixty-one per cent of the companies doing business here reported better sales in August this year than last, the survey of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn., reveals.

Sales in the United States in August totaled $479,794,000, off 1 per cent, and for the eight months $4,333,882,000, 6 per cent ahead of last year. Sales in the South Atlantic States amounted to $48,490,000 in August, up 1 per cent, and $402,110,000 in the eight months, up 4 per cent.

Maryland sales totaled $6,430,000 in August, practically the same as last year, and $61,221,000 in the longer period, a gain of 3 per cent. Virginia sales were $6,664,000 in August, a drop of 7 per cent, and $57,169,000 in the eight months, 5 per cent better than a year ago. The figures as a whole add further evidence of steady business improvement in this territory.

Home Mortgages

Savings, building and loan associations again in August increased their lead as the most active lenders in home mortgage financing in the United States by accounting for 33 per cent of all home mortgages recorded in American cities and towns during the month, the division of research and statistics of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports.

Mortgages recorded by these institutions totaled $112,516,000 out of an aggregate of $345,580,000 by all types of lenders. There has been a steady increase this year in the proportion of home financing being done by savings and loan associations as compared with their lenders, the August figure being one per cent above the July total of 32 per cent.

August recordings of all non-farm mortgages were $15,597,000 above July, which is contrary to the usual seasonal decline in the late summer and autumn, an indication of the expansion in home building in many towns and cities, board officials say. The August total raised to $2,473,707,000 the total for the first eight months of 1939.

By types of lenders, volume, and per cent of monthly total, home mortgages recorded during August were as follows: savings and loan associations, $112,516,000, 33 per cent; insurance companies, $30,796,000, 9 per cent; banks and trust companies, $80,049,000, 23 per cent; mutual savings banks, $13,844,000, 4 per cent; individuals, $58,826,000, 17 per cent; others, $49,549,000, 14 per cent; total, $345,580,000, 100 per cent.

Board statisticians make a monthly survey of mortgage recordings with the co-operation of savings and loan executives, other mortgage financing leaders and title companies.

I. B. A. Convention

Lionel L. Eddie, New York economist, will be one of the speakers at the annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association, at Del Monte, Calif., Octobre 9-13, it is announced. Other speakers will include James L. Beebe, Los Angeles attorney; Everett D. Marin, California college professor, and Francis E. Frothingham, Boston, a former president of the association.

The increasing practice of financing municipal government projects through issuance of "revenue bonds" payable out of income to be derived from the undertakings, will be discussed by John S. Clark, of Cleveland, chairman of the association's municipal securities committee. As customary, the association's standing committees, several of which conduct research in their respective fields throughout the year, will report results of their surveys. Y. E. Booker was one of the first local investment bankers to announce plans to attend the West Coast meeting.

Figures assembled by the Virginia State Industrial Commission indicate a business boom in the Old Dominion State. Employment in Virginia in August was 17 per cent higher than a year ago, the report stated, with industrial plants taking the lead.

Selling Wave In Final Hour Tumbles Wheat

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 3.—A sudden burst of selling upset the wheat market in the final hour today, tumbling prices as much as 3 cents a bushel to the lowest level in a month.

December wheat sold down to 80¼, or ⅞ below last Friday's bottom quotation. It was the first time this contract had been below 81 cents since September 2, the second day of German-Polish hostilities.

The reason for liquidation of such volume could not be determined definitely although pit brokers pointed out that moderate selling encountered little buying support and when this was disclosed the falling market attracted heavy stop loss liquidation.

Some orders were understood to have originated with a leading international grain house in France. Late weakness in stocks also encouraged selling here. Trade opinion was divided as to whether the Chamberlain talk indicated some sort of European peace was possible but most dealers were inclined to go slow pending the Hitler speech later in the week. However, peace talk was in the background.

Wheat closed 2-2¾ cents lower than yesterday, or 3-3⅛ below early highs, with December at 80⅝-¾, May 81⅛-¼. Other grains weakened with wheat, corn closing ¾-1 down, December 49-49⅛, May 51⅛; oats ⅜-⅝ off; rye 1¼-½ off and lard 15-25 lower.

Morris Plan Adds $250,000 New Capital

12,500 Shares of 4¼% Preferred Sold Through Brown, Goodwyn & Olds

A $250,000 increase in the capital of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington was announced yesterday by Willard G. Barker, president, who said:

"As a result of a continued increase in business, the bank's board of directors authorized the sale of 12,500 shares of 4¼ per cent preferred stock with a par value of $20 per share. The entire $250,000 issue has already been sold privately, at a premium, through the local investment firm of Brown, Goodwyn & Olds."

The Morris Plan Bank of Washington was organized in 1925. In the past two years, since moving into new quarters at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, its resources have increased from $2,188,030.45 to $4,072,092.77, or a gain of 86 per cent, and the bank is now serving more than 39,000 accounts of individuals, according to Mr Barker. Total deposits as of September 30 were $3,237,898.40.

Colgate Explains Company's Status In War Countries

New York, Oct. 3.—In a letter to stockholders, E. H. Little, president of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., explains the extent of the company's investment in Europe and its profits therefrom, particularly in the countries at war.

"In all of Europe, including England, says the letter, "our total net assets as of June 30, 1939, amounted to $2,456,000, or only 4.6 per cent of the total net assets of the company and its subsidiaries as reported to stockholders as of that date. Only 3.6 per cent of the total, or $1,913,000, represented net assets in England, France, Germany Italy and Poland. Net assets in Poland amounted to approximately $200,000.

"This relatively low investment is partly the result of financing the operations in certain of the countries through local bank loans. At June 30, 1939, our subsidiaries in England, France, Holland, Sweden and Switzerland had foreign currency bank loans totaling $1,133,000. The parent company has guaranteed the repayment of these loans, but the subsidiaries, we believe, should be able to take care of these obligations satisfactorily.

"Cash receipts from European subsidiaries since June 30 exceeded profits earned plus net charges made to them so that, as of this date, the investment in Europe is even lower than at June 30. As will be noted from our annual report, at December 31, 1938, we set up a reserve for contingencies of $1,000,000."

Daily Oil Output Drops 29,028 Barrels

Tulsa, Oct. 3 (AP).—Crude oil production in the United States decreased 29,028 barrels daily to average 3,647,404 for the week ended September 30, the Oil and Gas Journal said today. Production in Illinois rose 4,151 to 344,267; in Michigan, 1,113 to 68,362, and 1,900 in the Rocky Mountain area to 82,890.

Oklahoma production declined 10,025 to 387,525; east Texas, 1,100 to 491,798; Texas as a whole, 10,302 to 1,485,090; Louisiana, 1,485 to 247,075; California, 10,550 to 610,750; Kansas, 3,275 to 157,225, and Eastern fields, 1,300 to 98,500.

Egg Futures Trading Sets September Peak

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—All September records for egg futures trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were broken last month, Lloyd S. Tenny, business manager, said today. Swelled by war-market buying Swelled by war-market buying early in the month and later by transfer operations, volume rose to 105,132,000 dozens, compared with about $2,000,000 a year ago and a ten-year average of about 60,000,000.

Butter futures also expanded, September sales running to 88,870,000 pounds, a gain of more than 500 per cent over the preceding month's 13,344,000, and the largest sales for any month since September, 1930.

B. & O. Carloadings

Baltimore, Oct. 3.—Baltimore & Ohio carloadings for September totaled 225,543, an increase of 46,119 over September last year. September carloadings also showed an increase of 19,338 over August of this year.

Wall Street Begins To Pay Bonuses

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—An evidence of better days in Wall Street was the disclosure today that a number of stock exchange houses have paid bonuses to employes for extra work performed in recent weeks. Other firms indicated plans were being drawn to give employes Christmas bonuses.

Stocks Sag Awaiting Moves in Europe; Steels, Rails and Aviations Chief Losers Government and Prime Bonds in Demand

New York, Oct. 3.—Stocks eased a bit more today as peace reigned on the battlefronts of Europe and in Wall Street. Irregularity characterized dealings throughout the day, and while there were no rallies it was also true that at no time did the selling reach major proportions. Trading amounted to just over 1,000,000 shares, the majority of speculative leaders closing with only fractional changes. This week the stock market has given the appearance of waiting for developments; in the present case the developments awaited are of foreign origin, for in the field of domestic business there are no complaints.

Steels Under Pressure

The composite average registered a net decline of 0.44 point with the greatest pressure exerted against steels, rails and aviation. All groups averaged lower but the net losses of others were moderate. It is surprising that the speculative markets have quieted down to such an extent after the fireworks which were set off by the European war only a month ago.

While it is surprising, it also emphasizes the wisdom of the Stock Exchange officials in deciding to keep this market open, come what may. It seems impossible that only a little more than a month ago there were persons who advocated closing our markets because they feared a big collapse and large scale liquidation from Europe. Their fears were totally unfounded, for we had the exact opposite of a collapse and if there is an European liquidation to be taken care of we have the market that can take it.

Neutrality Debate

The Street is following with interest the discussion in Congress over the neutrality bill, even though the orders which have boomed American business during the last few weeks have been domestic orders rather than demands from the foreign belligerents. Inclusion of the 90-day credit clause in the present discussion of the President's neutrality proposal is considered downtown to be quite beside the point and something that could well be dropped from the discussion without harm to either side in the controversy. Talk of credits ignores the existence of the free buying power already built up in this country by France and Great Britain in the form of earmarked gold, securities and bank balances. If the present embargo on shipments of munitions to belligerents were removed it is likely that both countries would be able to finance their needs for a year or more before there would be any necessity of talking about credit.

U. S. Steel Leads Activity

Steels, rails and motors continued to be the most active stocks today, the top issue being United States Steel, off a point. New York Central led the rails and declined fractionally. General Motors and Chrysler were down fractions, the latter almost a point. Bethlehem was subjected to heavier sales and closed off 2¾. Profit taking made its appearance among the railroad equipment issues, the most active being Baldwin, which was off a half point. Anaconda was the most active in the metal division and was down about a point. Peoples Gas stood out against the trend, advancing 1¼ but most of the speculative leaders lined up behind minus signs. Losses of a point or more were sustained by Telephone, Smelting, D. & H., Harvester, Union Carbide, Union Pacific and Texas Corporation. Westinghouse sold off 2¼.

Treasury Bonds Advance

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular today, with high grade issues moving upward, while most speculative bonds drifted lower. Long term Treasury obligations were in demand, and best corporate issues also improved. Most foreign dollar obligations advanced because of the notion that peace may break out. Speculative mail and other bonds of the domestic list were not in demand, but losses were mostly minor. Turnover in all issues amountd to $8,080,000 par value.

Long term Treasury obligations were marked upward in a range from 1-32 to 23-32 point. In the formal trading, short dated Treasury issues showed smaller gains, for it is assumed in the market that the refunding of the December notes will be expected through an exchange offering of short maturity. The decision of the Treasury to delay the refunding for a time had no apparent effect. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were slightly better.

Canadian issues were up in the foreign section and Australians had a firm undertone, owing to the belief that peace may develop if Hitler can be overthrown. German and Polish bonds showed small gains. Scandinavian, Belgian and other European neutral issues held close to former figures, with the exception of Italian securities, which advanced sharply. Latin-American dollar bonds were dull and uncertain.

Highest grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were firm in the corporate section, owing to the firm tone of Treasury issues. Speculative rails had their least active session in a week, and most moves were toward lower levels, but the movements rarely exceeded a point. Alleghany Corporation bonds receded, and utility holding issues also dropped. The local traction group dipped despite firmness in related New York City obligations. Other special groups were dull.

Pan Am. Air, Santa Fe Plan Big Purchases

Railway to Spend 10 Million, Air Line 6 For New Equipment

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway and Pan American Airways Corp., today added $16,000,000 to the large sums to be spent in this country for railway equipment, ships and aircraft.

Capital expenditures in these fields have attained the largest scope since 1929, stimulated by wartime expansion of business. Jobs and payrolls are expected to increase as industry gets into stride on the filling of orders on its books.

The Santa Fe program calls for an outlay of $10,000,000, including purchase of 1,800 box cars, 200 ballast cars, 250 gondolas, 450 refrigerator cars and 100 flat cars.

Pan American Airways, operating one of the world's largest air transportation systems, including Pacific and Atlantic trans-ocean clipper services, announced plans for spending about $6,000,000 for six additional Boeing clippers and 13 Douglas transport planes. C. V. Whitney, chairman of Pan American Airways, said:

Air Routes Needed

"The outbreak of hostilities in Europe, resulting both in the curtailment of competitive foreign-subsidized airlines and serious restriction of normal steamship services in the international field, has greatly advanced the need for increased facilities for passengers, mail and express on America's international air routes."

These expenditures would add to large backlogs of business for manufacturers of aircraft and rail equipment. Rail buying in recent weeks is estimated to have totaled more than $150,000,000. Pan American plans to raise the funds through issuing rights to stockholders.

Bombay Selling Topples Cotton 50 to 60 Cents

Liquidation of straddle holdings in the cotton futures market by Bombay to the tune of around 15,000 bales was sufficient to overbalance what resistance was offered and the market closed 10 to 13 points lower.

Lack of more definite news from Washington and Europe, however, was a pretty effective clamp on aggressive market action. Hedge selling, still not large, contributed to the decline, which started with a weak Liverpool market. Prime Minister Chamberlain's talk braked the retreat. Trade demand was limited.

Commodity Corp. Cuts Rate From 4% to 3%

The interest rate to farmers on all commodity credit corporation loans will be reduced from 4 to 3 per cent, effective November 1.

These loans, made on surpluses of cotton, corn, wheat, butter, naval stores and several other agricultural products withheld from glutted markets, now total about $500,000,000.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 3.—A note of quiet optimism ran through stock market dealings today while the "city" awaited Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons. A freer market developed in British government bonds, nearly the entire group changing hands. Interest in kaffirs broadened at higher levels and oils held firm.

Paris.—Price lines were firmly held in the bourse today, although deals were made only sporadically. Domestic shares proved resistant to what pressure that did appear and international shares held up. Rentes ended unchanged to 80 centimes ahead.

Amsterdam.—Bourse prices moved indecisively today as the market awaited more definite news on various continental peace moves. Domestic issues on the whole were slightly lower, while the internationals group, off to a shaky start, closed at the day's best levels.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures lost 4 to 10 points today. An easier trend at New York attracted liquidation and Bombay offerings.

Com. Edison Lifts Dividend to 45 Cents

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Directors of Commonwealth Edison Co. today increased the quarterly dividend rate on Edison stock from 40 cents to 45 cents a share, equivalent to an annual rate of $1.80. The initial 45-cent dividend will be payable November 1 to stock of record October 13.

James Simpson, chairman, said directors believed the increase was justified in view of expectations that earnings a share for 1939 would be about the same as the 1938 earnings of $2.40 despite rate reductions put into effect this year and an increase in the number of shares outstanding to a total of 10,200,000 shares.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The dullness of the summer is enlivened by the bridge party of the Donald Tansills at their country home on Long Island. This year the contest was won by Mrs. A. M. Sobel and Cedric Major, national veterans tennis champion. After the match, it was arranged that each of the winners should select a partner and play a deciding hand against the other Mrs. Sobel chose her hostess, Mrs. Tansill, while Mr. Major not unwisely selected Oswald Jacoby, William E. McKenney, secretary of the American Contract Bridge League, played the joker and made up the hand. The cards are shown in today's box. The sequence of the bidding has been lost. No one seems to have an exact recollection of it.

All we can report is that Mrs. Sobel, sensing the situation, opened with a psychic diamond bid and that eventually Ossie bought the contract for six diamonds, which he managed to make.

West: Mrs. Tansill led the jack of hearts; Ossie trumped it in his hand and then ruffed a club in dummy. He returned a diamond, finessing the ten, which held, and ruffed another club in dummy. He finessed the diamond queen on the way back and cashed the ace of diamonds, conceding one club trick to Mrs. Sobel and her weight of high cards.

Six hearts can be made by East and West against any defense except a diamond opening and a club return.

The Duke of Cumberland once played a whist hand very much like Mrs. Sobel's, but, unfortunately lost a couple of castles making wagers on it.

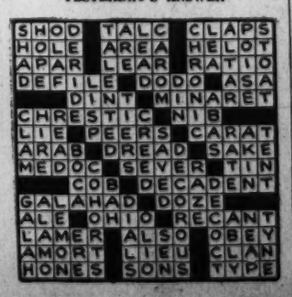
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER



Station PDS Presents Co-ed Violinist

Over station WMAL this morning, PDS presents Miss Marietta Eckam, 608 A street southeast. Miss Eckam, a freshman at Maryland University, is preparing to be a music taacher. She has appeared professionally in an all-girl orchestra.

Miss Eckam

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studios, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Colored Group Formed To Aid Shut-in Pupils

An association for the education of handicapped children has been formed by a colored group which will meet at 8 p. m. Friday at the Y. W. C. A. at 901 Rhode Island avenue northwest to discuss needs and prospects.

The group, which elected Mrs. Geneva Richaux president, is awaiting news of action on the WPA project for teaching shut-ins.

Chapter 11

SUSAN said earnestly, "I wish you could figure out my sister, Delia, this way. It'd help us both such a lot to know whether she really should go to college, or just to normal school. We'd have to fairly work our heads off to send her to college."

He was abashed, and answered in confusion, "I'm afraid there's very little that's reliable to be done about figuring out young people. As far as I can see, even psychoanalysts and psychiatrists can't do much more than guess about them, the way anybody else does. The point is, don't you see, that when everything has happened to a person that's going to—an older person like Mrs. Washburn and Miss Peck, it's easy to figure out what it did to them. But nothing at all has happened to young people, and you have no idea how they'll take what's going to happen. . . ."

She saw the point. "Well then, I wish you'd known my grandfather, Cadoret. He was grand, some ways. But—well, queer! And what you've been saying makes me see that I never even tried to understand what made him queer. I never thought a person could—this way. It's too bad. Things would have been lots better for all of us if I had."

"If you'll tell me more about him some day, perhaps I could . . ." began Mr. Hulme. But he was not thinking of what he was saying. His eyes had been caught by her hands, clasped around her knees. They were brown, country hands, and young. Very, very young. It was astonishing, he thought, remembering his own, how young hands can look.

"Mr. Hulme?"

"Yes?"

"Did you ever . . . I've often wondered about your aunt, Mrs. Henry. She's a wonderful old lady. I'm crazy about her. But there's something ever so—I wonder if you know—this way, I mean—why she doesn't care about a single thing but music?"

Timothy Hulme's face darkened. He said thickly, not knowing that his voice had darkened, too, "My aunt has been, too . . ." and stopped, shaken. How could he answer a question no one had ever thought of asking him?

An old pain that he had never shared, an ache that had never hoped to find expression in words, pounded hard on the wall he had thought would always shut him in to solitude. When he broke his silence, the few phrases of his answer made a breach—the first one—in that wall. Astonished and deeply moved to be speaking of this, "Aunt Lavinia has had to live through things too hard for her to bear. For anyone to bear. And music's the only thing she's sure won't ever let her down," he said harshly.

The girl stepped quickly through the break in his wall, stood beside him there where he had thought he would always be alone, looked at him with kindness, told him with authority, "She knows you'll never let her down."

He was defenselessly open to the first sympathy that had ever reached him. He was painfully moved to feel someone close enough to him to be kind. Memories which for years had slept in the dark, awoke, steamed out to the light, shook him free for an instant from the rigidity of his habitual reticence. He said passionately, 'I owe—I owe everything to Aunt Lavinia. If she couldn't trust me . . ."

Sitting motionless, her young brown country fingers folded together in her lap, she laid a quieting hand on his trouble. "She trusts you," she affirmed on a deep low note, and let a silence round out her reassurance.

Then she drew a long breath, and raising her voice to its everyday pitch and intonation as if to show that she was moving away from where she had, perhaps, no right to be, she asked, "Well, there's old Mr. Dewey too. Everything must have happened to him that's going to. Did you ever figure out what makes him so different? Like giving up his lovely big house to help out poor students? And Miss Peck told me he took care of a hateful sick wife for years without once being cross to her."

HE WAS touched by the delcacy of her withdrawal as he had been startled and moved by the deep probe of her divination. He had almost forgotten how it felt to be personally shaken and agitated. It took him a moment to follow her lead. Then, trying for a lighter accent to match hers he said, "Well, no, I never have plotted Mr. Dewey out on my graph paper. He's rather too big for my calipers to measure. I've wondered about him myself. That very day, I mean the day this notion about Mrs. Washburn came into my mind, I was asking myself why Mr. Dewey is the only person who doesn't get frantic with impatience over her."

The girl turned her head to look out of the window. "Do you suppose," she said in a neutral voice, "that other people get impatient with her because her being so full of herself gets in the way of their being full of themselves? And Mr. Dewey isn't."

Mr. Hulme fell back in his chair as though she had run him through. "Good heavens, yes!" he cried, laughing and dismayed. "Yes, of course, I see. You mean the reason for my getting angry over her being egotistic is that I am myself."

"Well, no more than anybody," conceded the girl seriously, glancing back at him, her voice grave, a glint of amusement in her eyes.

This prolonged his disconcerted mirth. His older-generation condescension towards her youthful inexperience abated. "That went pretty deep," he told her, and then more at ease in spite of himself because he had laughed, he began impulsively, "Do you know you don't take this at all as I thought you would. I was afraid of my life to tell you because . . ." He paused, aware that it would be hard to find presentable words for what he had feared.

"Oh, mercy, yes!" exclaimed the girl. "Wouldn't it be terrible if Mrs. Washburn got to know about it? If anybody did!"

Perjuring himself heartily out of shame, he assured her, "No, not that! I never dreamed of that. That wasn't what I was afraid of." He was almost telling the truth. His doubt of her had vanished out of credibility. "No, I was ashamed to tell you that I'd just been having a good time amusing myself at Mrs. Washburn's expense when you thought I was being kind. I thought you'd be . . ." He was silenced by a pale gravity, like sternness, which fell over her face.

She got up from her child's awkward graceful crouch on the low platform, walked around the desk, sat down in her teacher's chair again, placed her clasped hands on the desk before her in the teacher's pose. "You didn't understand what I was trying to say that evening, Mr. Hulme," she said earnestly. "I got so rattled I couldn't think of how to say it. I wasn't . . . What you think makes me out lots better than I am. It wasn't just only Mrs. Washburn I was thinking about . . ."

He tried to help her out. "I know. I know. You did make me understand. You had a moment of generous happiness when you thought there was some real kindness in the world, more than you'd . . ."

She cut him short, impatient with his misunderstanding, impatient with herself. "That's what I was afraid you thought. It was not generous. It was just as selfish as it could be. It wasn't even Mrs. Washburn I was thinking about. It was my sister Delia and me. I'd always thought—you know, a person would think from the way everybody acts when it comes right down to it—that nobody cares, not really, about anybody but his folks. And Delia and I haven't got any folks of our own. I'd thought, ever since grandfather died, that we needn't expect to have anybody . . ." her voice began to tremble. She waited an instant with dignity to have it under control before she went on, "So when I saw you being nice—I thought—to that silly old woman, why, it seemed to me all of a sudden that maybe we weren't so all by ourselves, Delia and me. But when I tried to tell you, I couldn't seem to think of any way to say it that wouldn't sound—wouldn't sound as though I was asking you to be sorry for us . . ." the words, the withering intonation, disdained the weakness of asking for sympathy. She held her head high, her gray eyes sternly bade him pity her at his peril. "It sounds like that now," she added dryly, "but that wasn't what I meant."

"No, it doesn't sound like that. Not at all. Not in the least!" he assured her, his heart pounding in the sympathy she had not asked for, and stopped short, his eyes fixed on the knob of the door. It was slowly being turned. He gazed at it, stupidly astounded. He had forgotten where he was.

THE DOOR opened, revealing the janitor in faded overalls, stooping to pick up a mop pail. He had plodded several steps into the room before he saw that the superintendent was still there, in the visitor's chair, and the teacher on the platform behind her desk. "Oh, I didn't know as anybody was here, Prof. Hulme," he said, setting the mop pail down. "I better do some other room first, mebbe?"

Mr. Hulme stood up, reaching for the hat he had left poised on the geography globe. "No, go ahead, Elmer," he said easily. "I'm just about through with what I had to say to Miss Barney." To the teacher he added in all confidence, "I think I'm going your way, Miss Barney. My errand takes me past Miss Peck's door. We could go along together and finish up this matter on the way."

He had taken for granted that she would feel as intensely as he that they must go on to the end of what had been cut short. He had seen her walking beside him under the flaming glory of the old maples, the cloud of her hair lifting and stirring with her advance. In the open air, both of them moving in the same rhythm, it would be easier for him to find words to make her feel his ache of sympathy—his ache of—he could tell her . . .

But she, bending her head over the papers on her desk, murmured with a sudden shyness. "Thank you, Mr. Hulme, I have a little work to do before I go."

He stood motionless, taking in with an effort what she had said. He was dismissed. She did not want to hear the rest of what had been only half said. What he felt so overpowering an impulse to tell her—it was nothing she cared to know.

She was taking advantage of him. She knew he could not protest with old Elmer pottering around in the room. She was not straight after all. Those honest eyes of hers . . . ! She was devious and underhanded like any other woman. Very well.

"Good afternoon," he said stiffly, put his hat on, went through the door, shut it behind him and walked on down the corridor, his steps echoing dismally in the empty building. He was glad it was empty, that there was no need to compose his face into indifferent vacancy. It would have been hard to do. He was furious.

Or was it fury, this extraordinary inner seething? It felt like it. He strode off with longer steps, bringing his heels down fiercely.

He had just laid his hand on the front doorknob when he heard the click of a lifted latch at the other end of the hall. There was a light step, a flicker in the light as if something had passed before the end window. Susan Barney's voice called, "Mr. Hulme!"

He halted, said gruffly, "Yes?" turned around and took off his hat as if grudging the gesture.

She was skimming down the hall. She came close to him. She was breathing rapidly, but she said at once, her eyes on his, "Maybe there isn't any more kindness in the world than I thought. But there's more honorableness."

He stood looking at her. He felt it was the first time he had ever seen her, the first time he had ever seen anyone.

She took the blankness on his face to mean that he had not understood and explained hurriedly, "You didn't have to tell me that. I'd never have known. You could have just let me go on thinking it had been kindness."

He understood now. She saw that, and turning away rather quickly she walked back to her classroom, shutting the door behind her.

HE AND Aunt Livinia dined with the Footes that evening—one of the semi-annual invitations from Clifford friends, of which after all these years there had accumulated enough to take them out once or twice every week. But that night Dr. Foote's thrashing over of the dry straw of local history was carried on in an unresponsive silence. Sitting at the table, driving Aunt Livinia home in the Ford (her knees were stiffer all the time, she could scarcely walk at all), at his desk smoking cigarettes moodily, instead of marking the English compositions piled before him, undressing for bed and looking at himself in the mirror, relieved to see his body slim, athletic, comely; aghast at the deep lines in his bony, high-nosed face, lying on his bed looking sleeplessly at a hostile, staring, bone-white moon, Timothy Hulme knew very well what was happening to—what was likely to happen to him.

Yes, he thought grimly, the plot an author would make out of his situation was old by the time of Plautus, one of the variations on the theme of the middle-aged guardian who falls in love with his ward. But for some reason—could it be to make books long enough?—authors usually show such a man unconscious of what is happening to him. A nonsensical literary convention, thought Timothy Hulme, irascibly glaring at the moon's broad smudged face. Any experienced human being would recognize the first intimations, and begin at once, as he was now beginning, to repair the breach in his guard against emotional entanglements. It had been a good guard. Unlike men in novels, he had not found it impossible to keep the guard up—his eyes were aching with the fixity of his gaze on the baleful white of the moon—oh, warm, life-giving, dusty sunlight in a golden schoolroom! He turned his face to the wall. Year by year he had disproved another literary convention by not finding it even very hard to keep steadily clear of that intimacy with women which is likely to lead farther.

WPA Placings Of Ex-Clerks Show Big Gain

Budget Bureau Order To Federal Agencies Begins to Get Results

By Alfred Friendly.

A sharp increase in the number of persons placed in Government jobs by the WPA replacement division has followed last summer's Budget Bureau order instructing Federal agencies to give first preference to the division's lists in filling non-civil service positions.

Despite a "request" of the President, issued when the division was set up in 1935, for hiring agencies to take their personnel from replacement lists, the division had been generally ignored, save for a few notable suggestions.

Following the reorganization order, however, the Budget Bureau last July told all executive departments that all subsequent appointments to nonclassified jobs should be made from the division's registers. Purpose of the order, of course, was to give persons terminated from the Government service for reorganization or economy reasons the first opportunity of being re-employed.

Statistics for August, the first full month of the order's operation, show that former Government employes looking for jobs owe the Budget Bureau a debt of thanks.

Of 565 appointments made throughout the Government in the month, 180 were from replacement lists. Although the proportion still is small, it is relatively enormous in comparison to the division's experience in years past, when agencies blithely hired new hands without giving former Government employes even the ghost of an opportunity.

Furthermore, several agencies which almost never appealed to the division for lists of qualified persons to fill vacancies have now come around. August figures show that the Federal Housing Administration, General Accounting Office, Agriculture Department and several other establishments have been recruiting employes from a source seldom used before.

In fairness, it should be mentioned that the WPA itself and the War and Navy Departments always have cooperated fully with the division.

At the moment, there are some 3,500 persons on the division's active list, awaiting Government work. They include every classification from laborer to architect, mimeograph operator to ceramic engineer, stenographer to building inspector.

An attorney with a foreign decoration and an imposing Who's Who biography, an archeologist of distinction, a legion of white collar workers and a battalion of stenographers—each of whom has been retested for competence by the division—are on the list, waiting for jobs.

Under the Budget Bureau orders, each agency must notify the division of the people terminated each month, in order that their names be listed for re-employment. It must also make new appointments, if possible, from the division lists, and finally, if selection are made from other sources, it must submit an explanation to the division.

In the first month of operation, most agencies explained any outside hiring by pointing out that commitments already had been made or negotiations already were under way. This cannot be the case for long, the division believes, and it hopes to raise even further the ratio of jobs filled by replacement applicants.

The saddest case in town is of an ex-employe recently fired from a civil service job on the grounds that he falsified his age at the time he took his examination and said he was 21 when he actually was younger.

A routine investigation uncovered his birth certificate and the Civil Service Commission found that, although the man then was 21, when he took his examination he was too young to be eligible. He was fired and his examination voided. He now has no civil service status.

The unhappy part is that man honestly was under a misapprehension, by one year, of the date of his birth, and had been for years. Falsification it undoubtedly was, but of fraudulent intent there was none.

A. J. Sarre, Louisiana State administrator of the National Youth Administration since 1936, yesterday was named personnel director of the Federal Works Agency, the fifth largest organization in the Government, employing more than 56,000 persons.

Sarre formerly was industrial relations superintendent of the New Orleans Public Service Co. and taught industrial education at Louisiana State University.

He is a graduate of Columbia and did graduate labor economics work at Tulane University. He served in the Army Medical Department psychological division in the World War.

Never be it said the Commerce Department cafeteria fails to respond in a crisis. Two days after a conference of department executives and business tycoons decided there was no justification for a price boom in foodstuffs, the cafeteria cut its regular 25-cent luncheon to 15 cents—for one day.

Swimming Off 20 Pct. In Washington Pools

Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, yesterday reported that the park system's six swimming pools were used by 323,459 persons last summer, compared with nearly 400,000 in 1938.

Retired Mail Clerk Robbed of $192

Darling, who lives at 5340 Twenty-ninth street northwest, had cashed a pension check and removed money from his bank account a short while before. He was on his way to a building and loan association to invest the money.

Former Policeman Pleads Not Guilty In Phone Slug Case

Thomas Henry Hook, 34, former Washington policeman who lives at a Fourteenth street hotel, pleaded not guilty to charges of fraudulently using a slug in a telephone pay station and was granted a jury trial in Police Court yesterday.

Hook was arrested Monday in a drugstore near Fourteenth and L streets northwest. The phone had a new device attached, which, police said, rings a bell when a slug is utilized.

Hook was held in $300 bond by Judge Edward M. Curran. Telephone company officials said slugs representing $23,000 worth of telephone calls were used here last year.

Policeman Hurt Making Arrest

Charles E. Riley, 35, of Arlington, Va., a District policeman, was in Emergency Hospital with brain concussion and other injuries yesterday while three men faced charges of assaulting him and being drunk and disorderly, after a fight at Ninth and E streets northwest.

Two of the alleged assailants, John Corlino, 39, of the 900 block of Perry place northeast, and Fred A. Cusato, 30, of 248 First street southwest, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial when arraigned before Judge Curran in Police Court.

A third, Tony Corlino, 35, of Chevy Chase, Md., was in Gallinger Hospital, scheduled to appear in court on the charges when his fractured leg heals. Witnesses told the court the fight started after Riley, off duty, attempted to arrest Tony Corlino in connection with disorder in a nearby restaurant.

By the House-of-Worsted-tex—exclusive with The Hecht Co. in Washington

Do you realize what that second pair of trousers means? It gives you an extra pair that would have cost you $10 last year and also gives you 2/5 wear of another suit. It's a well-established fact that a jacket will wear 40% longer than the trousers. So with this extra pair, at no additional cost, your suit wears much longer.

The exclusive "Cable Twist," worsted fabric is shine-resistant (no more shiny seats) and needs fewer pressings than the average suit. That's still another saving on pressing bills. British Lounge and conventional models. Both trousers with Kover-Zip, the invisible slide fastener.
